District couple still need house despite FHA ruling

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wash, folk of 905 57th Pl., NE., are still looking for a house that they can buy.

Monday the Federal Housing Administration barred from further participation in the FHA mortgage program a builder who refused to sell to the Woolfolks.

"We're still trying to find a house in our price range that will meet our needs adequately," commented Mrs. Woolfolk.

"If the company decides to comply with the fair housing ruling, we will probably buy from them," she continued.

Their complaint was filed against the H S Builders, Inc., Silver Spring, whose president, Walter G. Spitzer, signed an FHA non-discrimination pledge, last year for Oakwood Knolls, its subdivision of $22,500 homes in Prince Georges County.

The Woolfolks charged that salesmen at the subdivision used evasive tactics when they attempted to buy a house on August 25, Sept. 1, and Sept. 20.

THE COMPLAINT was filed for the Woolfolks by the Metropolitan Washington chapter of the American Friends Service Committee. The Woolfolks had gone to AFSC for help in obtaining a house through the organization's area open housing program.

• • •

A HEARING was held on Dec. 3 by C. Edward Childs Jr., director of the District FHA insuring office, in an attempt to reach an agreement between the parties.

When the builders refused to sell to the Woolfolks, Mr. Child set Dec. 23 as the deadline for compliance with their nondiscrimination pledge. The corporation, according to the FHA, did not comply with the deadline.

The suspension of H S Builders of Silver Spring is the first against a builder for violation of the fair housing order issued by the late President Kennedy on Nov. 20, 1962.

Englishwoman visits Baltimore teacher

A friendship that began on a bus eleven years ago and kept alive through overseas letters and gifts took on added spirit this holiday season when an retired mistress from Great Britain visited a Baltimore school teacher.

Miss Dora Wallwyn, of Weymouth in Dorset County, England, was the guest of Mrs. Lorine F. Strange, of 3411 Bateman Ave., from Dec. 20 until today (Friday) on the first leg of her second trip to the U.S.

On Miss Wallwyn's first trip in 1952 she made friends with a young education student, then Lorine Fitzgerald, now Mrs. Strange. They were both on a bus bound for Washington, D.C.

Mrs. Strange recalls that "We began a conversation and we've corresponded since that time. Dora has sent so many lovely things and so many interesting letters."

MISS WALLWYN, a gracious, energetic woman, taught school for 20 years in Somerset from 1914 through 1934.

After this she served briefly as headmistress of a small village school but left education, saying "I could not agree with this progressive education we now have."

For a time afterward she worked as secretary for a businessman she had been a close friend of her father.

Now she is in full retirement and when at home in Weymouth spends her time "reading, knitting, smoking, anything to keep busy."

She is a ardent traveler. She often visits the Continent. She has made five trips to Germany since the war.

In the States she will see her brother, the film actor, Herbert Wyndham Wallwyn, seen in movies with Cary Grant, Peter Lorre and other Hollywood stars. "He is in California now," Miss Wallwyn said of her brother. "But I'm afraid his health has completely given away."

Mrs. Strange arranged a busy holiday schedule for her guest. "Dora arrived by steamer in New York the Friday before Christmas. She came to Baltimore that evening and we talked until well after midnight.

On Saturday we went shopping. She oohed and aahed about the high taxes on luxury items she saw in the stores. They don't pay taxes as we do.

"Sunday, my brother Archie Fitzgerald showed her the Naval Academy in Annapolis. He is a former Navy man and had been stationed there. Dora enjoyed this tour throughly.

"Monday Dora rested, wrote letters and Tuesday we finished playing Santa Claus, wrapped presents and trimmed the tree. We had Christmas dinner at home. For my son Amory, Dora brought this huge English water-color paint set and my gift was a Scottish knit sweater.

"After Christmas, we were really on the go. A Friday dinner invitation, a Saturday luncheon, the Chi Si Sigma fraternity party that night, Sunday morning we worship-ped at Grantley Baptist Church on Baltimore National Turnpike. Dora had met the pastor there.

"That evening we were the guests of Mrs. Mary Richardson at an affair given by the Four Win Ash Garden Club. This was marvelous. It was a dinner with each course of the meal given at the home of a different club member. We had cocktails at one home, soup at another house, and so on . . ."

Had Miss Wallwyn any trouble adjusting to America after 11 years away. Said Mrs. Strange: "Just one. I offered her tea in a tea bag but she refused. The English are fanatics about their tea. So Dora's made the tea. I did succeed in interesting her in the taste of instant coffee, something she had never tried."

And how did Miss Wallwyn feel about Christmas 1963 in Baltimore an ocean away from home? "Over here it's simply motor cars and very exciting holiday lights. In Weymouth, we trim up our homes but we don't trim up the outsides or the streets. Baltimore is more like London in that regard.

Hard luck bandits draw stiff terms

Seven youths four of whom were convicted of an abortive armed robbery attempt, and three others, caught red-handed while staging street day to a total of 35 years in prison.

They were:

John Brown, 18, 700 block Ellamont St., seven years.

Cornell Smith, 16, 1600 block Homestead St., five years.

Jerome Mack, 16, 3500 block Round Rd., five years.

Joseph Washington, 16, 2800 block Round Rd., five years.

Larry Robertson, 18, 1000 block N. Central Ave., five years.

Nathan Boone, 22, and Reginald Porter, 18, both of the 700 block W. Saratoga St., both four years.

• • •

TESTIMONY before Criminal Court Judges Reuben Oppenheimer and Charles D. Harris showed that the bandits—the first four operating in South Baltimore and the other three in East Baltimore—were plagued with misfortune during the crimes.

Brown, testimony by police showed, was the trigger man for his group including Smith, Mack and Washington when they attempted to rob Withhold Adams, a bartender in the 7400 block South Hanover St.

Mr. Adams, according to David T. Mason and Richard O. Motsay, disarmed and captured Brown, but his partners in crime fled. All were arrested a short time later. Six, when Patrolman Wilheimer heard, was the leader of the trio which yoked Coast Guardsman Donald Howard last November and robbed him of $60.

He, Boone and Porter were rifling the serviceman's pockets at Ensor and Chase Sts., when Patroman William Butler arrived at the scene.

The officer grabbed Boone, it was testified, but his companions escaped in a hail of bullets, fired by the patrolman. They were arrested upon information supplied by their captured comrade, police said.

Virginia educators in conference with governor

In anticipation of the forthcoming 1964 session of the Virginia General Assembly, Virginia educational leaders had a conference with Governor Albertis S. Harrison in his office in the State Capitol last week.

Matters discussed included the appointment of colored to Virginia State committees and commissions.

• • •

SPECIAL EMPHASIS was placed on the establishment of the Authority required to enable Virginia to receive approximately four million dollars of federal funds for building construction on college campuses under the Federal Grants - in - Aid bill recently signed by President Johnson.

Also discussed were proportionate distribution of federal vocational funds; and increased appropriations for salaries of Virginia teachers in public schools and colleges.

The group expressed opposition to the proposed "gag rule" by which colleges and secondary schools would be limited in choice of speakers invited to various campuses.

THE VIRGINIA leaders also asked the governor to propose to the Virginia legislature continuation of progress in civil rights.

In the conference group were Dr. Thomas H. Henderson, president, Virginia State University; Alfred K. Talbot, Jr., president of the 8,500 member Virginia Teachers Association; Dr. J. Rupert Picott, VTA executive secretary, who arranged the conference.

Accused gun-totin' constable gets bail

The trial of an accused gun-totin' People Court constable was postponed New Year's Day by Judge Aaron A. Baer in Western Municipal Court.

Beverly E. Burrell, 35, 2200 block, Wolfe Street, was arrested 2:15 a.m. New Year's Day by a Pennsylvania Ave. night club by Patrolman Arthur Butler, who charged him with having in his possession a deadly and dangerous weapon; and disorderly conduct in a public place.

At the request of William H. Murphy, defense attorney, the trial was set for 9 a.m. Jan. 18.

Mr. Burrell, first colored constable assigned to People's Court, was released on $1,100 bail.

Mrs. Emily Clements Seibel, 40, 900 Block Carswell Rd., was also arrested by Officer Butler and charged with interfering with police.

Mrs. Seibel, a clerk employed at the Social Security Administration, was freed on $100 bail and will stand trial on the 18th.
