Colonel William E. Waters and Colonel Peter Leary, Jr., aids to Governor Swann; John H. Carter, Secretary of State; John W. Garrett, Esq., president Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company; Hon. Isaac D. Jones, chairman, and the committee from the State Constitutional Convention; Col. Dorsey, of Barnum's Hotel, and a number of prominent citizens. Many of those present were accompanied by ladies, and the noble steamer backed from the wharf amid the cheers of the crowd. The scene presented in going down the harbor was quite animating—the steamers and tugs sounded their whistles, and the shipping displayed their flags. A number of the German vessels in port displayed all their private and speaking signals, and loud cheers went up from the crews on board the shipping as well as from the people that lined the wharves as the steamer bearing the President passed in view.

NEARING ANNAPOLIS.

As the Pentz entered Annapolis roads the President was honored by a salute from the United States ship Sabine, lying at anchor just within that haven. All eyes were now turned towards Annapolis, and as the boat neared the city the wharves and streets could be seen lined with people. Flags were flying in every direction, and as the boat passed in front of the Naval Academy a national salute was fired from the sloop-of-war Santee, the flagship of Admiral Porter, and another from the wharf by the city authorities in honor of the distinguished visitors. President Johnson and Mr. Seward stood in front of the main saloon, and both evidently took a deep interest in the imposing scene presented. The President expressed astonishment at the ease and quickness with which Captain Kirwan brought his noble boat up to the wharf, and took occasion to pay a compliment to the commodore of the Individual Enterprise Line for the admirable management of his boat.

LANDING AT THE ANCIENT CITY.

Governor Swann had his private coach and splendid team of horses on board the boat, designed for the special use of the guests of the State, and they were soon landed. The Naval Academy Band, Captain Peter Schaff, a fine
