A continuous row, 70 to 80 Cathedral, represents a good cluster of 19th C. residential structures. Original chimneys remain on all but 72, original roofing on all but 70. All have 2 bays except No 70 which has three. Original cornice on 76-78-80, Victorian embellishments on the others - siding and windows are later, etc. Some brick basement is visible. Though hidden, these houses are a group that sets the scale of the street. Original siding may still be intact underneath. Their outlines, etc. are typical of period, it would be wise to save such a cluster. No 66, 68 might also be included in this group, however, 68 sits back from row.
