First 'Headstart' Program Under way In City

By ROGER J. NISSLY

"How do you make a leaf?" the cute five-year-old girl asks.

Her teacher picks out a green crayon and draws a sample leaf.

"And some grass?" she asks again. The green crayon is handed to her.

"But some grass is yellow," she observes.

The boy sitting across the table from her announces, "I'm making a balloon," and exhibits a paper full of perfectly-formed red, orange, brown and green balloons.

"I know how to make the sun," the girl adds. "The sun is yellow."

* * *

THE GIRL, Peri Mello, and the boy, Gary Porter, age five, are two of the 60 children enrolled in Baltimore's first operating Project Headstart program at St. Francis Xavier Catholic School, 930 N. Eden St., and this is their favorite class — drawing.

The program, which began at the school on Monday and will continue for eight weeks is designed to prepare children in the poverty action area to enter school for the first time next September.

It is designed so that youngsters such as Peri and Gary may have some hope of reaching their goals of nurse and policeman—and not fall behind by two or three grades before they leave elementary school, as many of their brothers and sisters have done.

To help Peri and Gary — and the 900 other children who will be reached by Baltimore's headstart projects this summer — adjust to first grade, the programs will stress activities and experiences that are taken for granted by pupils from advantaged homes long before they go to school.

* * *

HEADSTART students at St. Francis Xavier this summer will be brought in contact with drawing and coloring — the favorite activity of many of them — with music, science, health and safety tips, as well as many games and other new experiences.

The pupils will learn to spell their own names (which are printed on the backs of their chairs at the school) and to recognize the names of everyday objects (such as "door," "chair" and "window," which are also identified by name cards).

HOW ARE the youngsters enjoying this unique opportunity for a "headstart" in school?

They like it "just fine," according to the four, five and six-year-olders who talked with the AFRO Wednesday as they played with dolls and toy trucks or drew pictures.

One girl smiled as she said she liked the "cake and drawing best" and is looking forward to going to "real school" in the fall.

As part of the program's care for the children's health, each pupil receives breakfast when school opens at 8 a.m., a hot lunch at noon and a snack of cookies and milk in the morning.

In addition, each child receives a chest x-ray, all the shots needed before going to school and correction for sight or hearing defects which may impair progress in school.

One student who now looks forward to school after three days of the headstart program is Chris Rabbit, six years old. Chris's favorite toy is a police car and his favorite activity at school is "sleeping."

* * *

AFTER THEIR vigorous play each day the youngsters take a 45-minute nap before their last activity period and the end of school at 2 p.m.

On Wednesday many of the children fell fast asleep and all were well behaved during the nap period.

Pity Johnson, in a class with the four - year - olds, proudly carried out her job of handing out the paper to her companions during art class.

Alecia Jackson, in the same class, pointed to the color yellow and the ball and spinning top which she had drawn and could name.

Their teacher, Mrs. Chicora Tucker, observed that although the four-year-olds could not write their own names yet, they did know the names of each of their classmates.

* * *

OVER IN the five-year-old class, Gary Porter was busy spelling out his name on the picture of the balloons he had just finished.

"G-A-R-Y," he said, surveying his work, "that spells Gary."

Then he counted his crayons. "One - Two - Three - Four - Five Six Seven - Eight."

Asked where he learned to count like that, he answered, "By just counting."

Joyce Beverly, sporting a pigtail, counted her crayons and found that they also added up to eight.

"I can count to a hundred," she said, and then she reeled off the names of the colors of the crayons.

* * *

WATCHING the children, Father Harry J. Maloney, pastor of the church, noted that they came from many different backgrounds.

Some of them were already enrolled in our first grade for next year, he said, others were referred by social workers.

"Just yesterday," he added, "the workers brought in three children who were playing in the street and school didn't know about the school."

He explained that the St. Vincent de Paul Society provides clothing for all children who need it. "That way they are all put on an equal footing and there is no discrimination."

* * *

FATHER Maloney pointed out that the summer school is really providing a "headstart" for these youngsters, especially "the one-third who come from broken homes."

"They all jumped right into the program."

For the 60 children and their four teachers — Mrs. Tucker, Mrs. Kate Carter, Sister Josita and Sister Angelica — the $11,000 being spent on St. Fancis Xavier's Project Headstart will be worth the price if it helps explain "how do you make a leaf."

PROJECT HEADSTART — Students enrolled in the city's first Project Headstart at St. Francis Xavier Catholic School gain experiences which will help them adjust to first grade in the fall. In first panel, Henry Braxton (left) and Terance Gray (right) draw with crayons under the watchful eyes of Sister Angelica. At right, Antoinette Falks folds her sleeping mat after the afternoon rest period.

GILBERT V. RUBIN, executive secretary, Board of Municipal and Zoning Appeals, checks map for zoning area.

Take zoning queries to city's Appeals Board

If you want to fence in your yard, erect an awning over your porch or establish some commercial enterprise in a residential area, chances are you will find yourself before the Board of Municipal and Zoning Appeals.

Such decisions on these and other zoning matters are the functions of this board, located in Room 204, Municipal Building, Lexington and Holliday Sts., and headed by Gilbert V. Rubin, executive secretary.

Citizens with doubts about what they may or may not do with their property might save considerable time, and perhaps money, by first question Mr. Rubin's staff.

The appeals before the board may be divided into two general categories:

1. Appeals from the building inspector engineer, in his capacity as zoning commissioner.

2. Miscellaneous appeals from the Department of Assessments, the Bureau of Highway, the Bureau of Refunds, etc.

* * *

ON ZONING maters, the full board meets regularly on Tuesdays at 1 p.m. in Board Room 231, City Hall, and holds public hearings on all appeals from the zoning commissioner, after inspection of each property involved.

The miscellaneous appeals are heard by panels of two members of the five-man board on mornings other than Tuesday, in the board's own Hearing Room 200, Municipal Building. A majority are taken from actions of the Department of Assessments.

The board itself is salaried, an appointment responsibility of the mayor and is all-white. There has never been a colored member.

Its members include: Walter E. Black Jr., chairman, attorney and head of the city's Republican Committee, at $6,600 a year; and at $6,062 annually each, David Blum, Edward F. Borrerding, attorneys; Edward H. Kowzan and Frank W. Cuccia, businessmen.

* * *

THE TERM of Mr. Cuccia expires soon, leaving his renlacement or reappointment up to Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin.

Mr. Rubin, also a lawyer, is under the city's merit system o fthe Civil Service Commission. So are the five members of his office staff, also all-white.

He sits with the board on hearings in the administering and interpreting the city's zoning ordinance.
