CERTIFICATE OF QUALITY

This is to certify that I have had charge of all the Seed Potatoes grown for J. Bolgiano & Son, during this growing season. I have been with them since April 15th, looked after the selecting of their seed and the treating of the same, have also had charge of the sprayings during the growing season. There was nothing planted but the very best selected seed, and nothing has been left undone to have them right. The crop is now being harvested, and the results of my work are most satisfactory. We are harvesting one of the largest crops ever grown in Aroostook County, Maine, and of the finest quality, free from any disease and true to name. I spent some time in Washington, D. C., with the Horticultural Board before coming here and their idea of producing FIRST CLASS SEED have been carried out to the letter for J. Bolgiano & Son.

Not What It Was For.

When Miss Julia Bryant, daughter of William Cullen Bryant, was a little child, an aged lady, who was for a time a neighbor of the poet and his family, had been shown into the parlor of the house, where she was making her first call. She found the small Julia seated on the floor with an illustrated volume of Milton in her lap. Although she knew, of course, that it must be the artist, not the author, in whom at that early age the child was interested, she asked genially by way of beginning an acquaintance.

"Reading poetry already, little girl?"

Julia looked up and regarded her gravely. Then she explained, with an air of politely correcting inexcusable ignorance:

"People don't read poetry. Papas write poetry, and mammas sing poetry, and little girls learn to say poetry, but nobody reads poetry. That isn't what it's for."

Legal English.

The circumlocution of legal documents is the penalty of having a bilingual language and descends to us from those countries when the English and the Normans were slowly amalgamating into one people. So the two races, in the market place or in social converse, to make their meaning clearer, joined a French word to an English or vice versa. That is why in the prayer book words so often run in couples: "Humble and lowly," "acknowledge and confess," "assemble and meet together." The English was for the English, the Norman French for the French. Chaucer is a great user of such bilingual phrases: "Hunting and venerye," "wright and carpenter," "care and wo." And that is whence lawyers get such talk as "aid and abet," "will and testament" and "use and wont."—London Opinion.

Travel and Comfort.

Comfort is only another term for habit. The older we grow the more "soft" we become until any break in the routine of existence spells discomfort. One's slippers must be beside the bed and one's clothing disposed on the same hooks and chairs day after day, the water for shaving must be of the right temperature, breakfast is wanted, and so through the twenty-four hours. Now, travel disarranges this routine, therefore it is well to travel more or less, to fish for slippers in the water of a vacuum contents, to shave with cold water, to break fast at some one else's convenience and in general to move along the line of most resistance. Even good habits need disrupting now and then, for the pursuit of comfort leads to selfishness and inconsiderateness, as the paths of glory lead but to the grave.—Chicago Tribune.

Dandies.

The coat does not make the dandy. The proper wearing of proper clothes is but part of the whole duty of a dandy man. A complete dandy is dandified in all his modes of life. Have you ever thought what a conspicuous part the dudes and dandies have played in history? Mark Antony was one of them, so were Alcibiades, Claude Duval, Buckingham, Byron, the poet, Disraeli, the statesman, and dandyism is not dead yet, only moribund, passed, shaking and decrepit with old age.
