CHUCKLE
"A camp counselor was supposed to get some work out of the twelve boys lined up in front of him. They weren't as enthusiastic as he thought they should be, so he tried using psychology. "I've got a nice job for the laziest man here," he said. "Will the laziest boy raise his hand?"
Eleven hands went up.
"Why didn't you raise your hand?" he asked the twelfth.
"Too much trouble," drawled the boy.
