For the Baltimore Clipper.

THERE IS A PLACE OF REST.

(BY SAMUEL H. MAYS.)

For, far away, there is a place where spirits seek repose,
Where Night's dark wings are never spread, daylight will never close;
There angels tune their golden harps, to sing their happy lays,
To tell the joy that they have found, to last through endless days.

Oh! who would wish to stay on earth, when there's a place like this,
Where tears of grief will cease to flow, and all is perfect bliss;
Oh, had I some kind spirit's wings, soon would I soar above,
To find this far off happy Home, where all is peace and love.

Oh! how I long to roam among fair Eden's lovely bowers,
Enjoy the fragrance that exhales from never dying flowers;
Or stand on Jordan's fertile banks, and listen to its roar,
As on its tranquil bosom it bears happy spirits o'er.

And as they land what joy then must fill and glad each breast,
As sounds of sweetest music bids them welcome home to rest.
Oh! speed the time when all shall meet on, Canaan's peaceful shore.
To sing God's praise for ever there, whe e parting is no more.

Baltimore, April 1841.

THE SHEPHERD'S DOG.

A shepherd, who inhabited one of those valleys or glens which intersect the Grampian mountains, in one of his excursions to look after his flock, happened to carry along with him one of his children, an infant of three years old.—This is not an unusual practice amongst the Highlanders, who accustom their children from the earliest infancy to endure the rigors of the climate. After traversing his pasture for some time attended by his dog, the shepherd found himself under the necessity of ascending a summit at some distance, to have a more extensive view of his range. As the descent was too fatiguing for the child, he left him on a small plain at the bottom, with strict injunctions not to stir from it till his return. Scarcely, however, had he gained the summit when the horizon was darkened by one of those impenetrable mists which frequently descend so rapidly amidst these mountains, as in the space of a few minutes, almost to turn day to night. The anxious father instantly hastened back to find his child, but owing to the unusual darkness, and his own trepidation, unfortunately missed his way in the descent. After a fruitless search of many hours, he discovered that he had reached the bottom of the valley, and was near his own cottage. To renew the search that night was equally fruitless and dangerous, he was therefore compelled to go home, although he had lost both his child and his dog, who had attended him faithfully for many years. Next morning, by break of day, the shepherd, accompanied by a band of his neighbors, set out in search of his child; but after a day spent in fruitless fatigue, he was at last compelled by the approach of night, to descend from the mountain. On his returning home to his cottage, he found that the dog, which he lost the day before, had been home, and on receiving a piece of cake, had instantly gone off again.

For several successive days the shepherd renewed his search for his child, and still, on returning home disappointed in the evening, he found that the dog had been home, and on receiving his usual allowance of cake had instantly disappeared. Struck with this singular circumstance, he remained at home one day, and when the dog, as usual, departed with his piece of cake, he resolved to follow him, and find out the cause of this strange procedure. The dog led the way to a cataract at some distance from the spot where the shepherd had left the child. The banks of the cataract almost joined at the top, yet, seperated by an abyss of immense depth, presented that appearance which so often astonishes and appals the travellers that frequent the Grampian mountains. Down one of those rugged, and almost perpendicular descents, the dog began without hesitation to make his way, and at last disappeared by entering into a cave, the mouth of which was almost level with the torrent. The shepherd, with difficulty followed, but on entering the cave, what were his emotions when he beheld his infant eating with much satisfaction the cake which the dog had just brought him; while the faithful animal stood by, eyeing his young charge with the utmost complaisance! From the situation in which the child was found, it appeared that he had wandered to the brink of the precipice, and then either fallen or scrambled down till he reached the cave. The dog, by means of his scent, had traced him to the spot; and afterwards prevented him from starving, by giving up to him his own daily allowance.

A MORNING GALLANT.

William Frederick Augustus Blummell was yesterday brought up before the Recorder for improper conduct in the street, early on Tuesday morning. William Frederick Augustus is one of those individuals in whose head nature has left a very considerable vacuum, and fortune, by way of counterbalancing the defect, has supplied him with a plethoric purse. The ingenuity of his tailor is taxed to make him look the man of fashion; he has succeeded in making him a fop, but has signally failed to make him a gentleman.—He could never be mistaken for a well-bred man; the very highest niche in the temple of fame which an observant eye would accord him is the office of lacquacy to an English lord, or a gentleman's gentleman. If the vaults of the United States Bank had been as well supplied with specie as he is with impudence, it would never have suspended; and the interior of his head is such an airy nothing that it is thought, by a proper disposition of ballast, he could be converted into a living balloon, and made to navigate the atmosphere.

"Bridget Monahan!" said the Recorder.

"Here, your Honor; I'm here," said a clean looking Irish girl, with red cheeks and a shawl to match and a cap as white as a new-laid egg.

"William Frederick Augustus Blummell," said the Recorder.

"I have the onaw to bear the patwonymic of Blummell," said Master Frederick, promenading trippingly up to the bench, clapping his glass to his eye, looking first at the Recorder, then at Bridget, and next at every one in the court in general and at no one in particular. His dress was in disorder, and he looked as if he could sleep without a narcotic.

"This woman charges you with insulting her," said the Recorder.

"It is a pwerfect impossibility, I pledge you my onaw," said William Frederick Augustus, and here he glass-ified Bridget more circumspectly than before—"No, sir, that is decidedly one of the weaker sex; she is a woman; and 'he who would raise his hand to a woman save in the way of kindness is'—not William Frederick Augustus Blummell, I most positively assure you."

"Silence, sir!" said the Recorder; "you have not been brought here to expatiate on your gallantry in general, but to answer for your non-observance of it on a particular occasion. Let us hear your story," said he, adressing Bridget.

"Yes, sir," said Bridget, catching hold of the corner of her apron and putting it through a process of friction between her fingers; "You see, sir, 'I was goin' to the market—this is God's truth—and I had the basket under my arm—"

"Never mind about the basket," said the Recorder.

"Well," resumed Bridget, "I was goin' to the market, and it was no more, so it wasn't, than jist daylight, and I meets this man, and faiks, he was so polite intirely to me that I mistook him for a gintleman or some dacent person. 'Good mawnin', Mary,' said he"—and here Bridget mimicked the notable Augustus—'Good mawnin', Mary,'—"jist as if his edication was neglected and he didn't larn to pronounce accordin' to grammar. So you see, I thought I'd show my manners, and I sed, good morrow to you, kindly, siz I, but you have a slight advantage of me; the priest christened me Bridget, I was told by those that witnessed the sarmony, and it isn't since that I've got it changed."

"No matter what you were christened," said the Recorder; "how did this person offend you?"

"Why," siz he, "allow me to carry your basket," siz he.

"I won't," siz I.

"Let me take your arm," siz he.

"I won't do no sich thing," siz I.

"I'll go with you to market," siz he.

"Not the fust stip," siz I; "but if you don't clear off I'll call the powlice and have you put into the calybose; with that sir, who should come up at that blissid minnit but this gentleman, (the lieutenant of the watch;) and he took him off and bound me over to come here to prosecute him."

The lieutenant corroborated the main facts of Bridget's statement, and said the prisoner was quite abusive to him because he did not take his card instead of himself. So strong did the case now appear against William Frederick Augustus Blummell, that we thought we heard the creaking of the iron door of the calaboose as it opened to receive him.

"You're a pretty fellow—are you not?" said the Recorder.

"Why, the fact is, youa onaw," said William Frederick, "I was nevaw considawed decidedly 'andsome, but I flattaw myself I have a degagee aiaw, a ce'tawin polish of behaviow about me that rendaws me rathaw attwactive with the faiw sex, youa onaw unde'stands me—eh?"

"Perfectly," said the Recorder; "and although I cannot indite you for an assault, I'll fine you $15 for your impertinence to this woman."

"I shall dischawge the obligation with the greatest pleashaw imaginable," said the man with three names, and extracting an X and a V from his well-filled purse, he laid them before the clerk and withdrew.—Pic.

STATE OF THE LAW IN JAPAN. An inhabitant of Yedo, named Fiyosamenon, a widower with two children, a girl and a boy, was called to a distance by business. He was poor; he knew not how to provide for his children during his absence, and resolved to take both with him. Accordingly, he dressed his daughter in boy's clothes, and thus passed the Fakone guard unsuspected. He was rejoicing in his success, when a man, who knew what children he had, joined him, congratulated him on his good luck, and asked for something to drink. The alarmed father offered him a trifle; the man demanded a sum beyond his means; a quarrel ensued; and the angry informer ran back to the guard to make known the error that had been committed. The whole guard was thunderstruck. If the informer spoke truth, and the fact were detected, all their lives were forfeited; yet, to send a party to apprehend the offender, and thus actually betray themselves, was now unavoidable. The commanding officer, however, saw his remedy. He delayed the detachment of reluctant pursuers sufficiently to allow a messenger with a little boy to outstrip him. The messenger found Fiyosamenon and his children refreshing themselves at an inn; he announced the discovery made, and the imminent danger; offered the boy as a temporary substitute for the disguised girl, and told the father that, when the falsehood of the charge should have been proved by both the children appearing to be boys, he might very fairly fly into such a rage as to kill his accuser. The kind offer was, of course, gratefully accepted. The wilfully dilatory guard arrived, surrounded the family, seized upon Fiyosamenon and the children, and gladly pronounced that both the latter were boys. The informer, who well knew Fiyosamenon's family, declared that some imposition had been practised, which the accused indignantly resenting, drew his sword and struck off the informer's head. The delighted guard exclaimed that such a liar had only met his deserts, and returned to their posts.—Manners and customs of the Japanese.

To DR. SWAYNE.

Dear Sir—The time has been, when I would not recommend a medicine advertised in the public prints over my own signature; I now feel different—I feel it my duty to inform the afflicted where they may find relief. I was reduced, by a protracted COUGH for six months, to a mere skeleton; no rest at night; soreness and pain in my breast, side, &c. Suffice it to say, I used your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry, which in a few weeks relieved me effectually. I am certain that, had it not been for your medicine, I should now be in the silent grave. Let no person delay, but procure your Syrup and be relieved of their COUGHS and COLDS, as they are dangerous companions, and often lead to dangerous consequences

WEBB'S PATENT BURNERS, AND CAMPHINE OIL.

FOR SALE AT No. 109 E. BALTIMORE STREET, between South and Calvert streets, where Burners of every description can be obtained. Those who are sceptical as to its safety or economy, would, I trust be perfectly satisfied by examining the opinion of Professor LOCK, of Ohio, on "WEBB'S CAMPHINE," or by referring to the Journals of the Franklin and American Institutes, of Philadelphia and New York. All those desirous of obtaining a clean, brilliant, and economical light, will find it greatly to their advantage by calling on the subscriber. The public may be assured of one fact, that we require no meters to ascertain the amount of Camphine consumed, as they register correctly and in plain English.

For the Proprietors.

The following letter to the Agent, exhibits the superiority of the Camphine over Gas or Oil light, in brilliancy and cheapness:

New York, March 23, 1840.

DEAR SIR—I received yours of the 19th instant, and proceed, as you request, to inform you that WEBB'S PATENT LAMP, in my opinion, is much superior to any Lamp now in use—the Camphine produces better light than Gas or Oil. I have burned Oil for five years, Gas for eleven, and Webb's Camphine for 20 months. I have a better light in my bar-room with five of Webb's burners than I had in the same room with eleven gas lights. In fact, I light my whole house at less expense with the Camphine than it cost me to light my bar-room alone with gas. I recommend it as being the cheapest and best light now in use.

Yours respectfully, THOMAS RILEY,

CASH FOR NEGROES. The highest cash prices will at all times be given for Negroes of both sexes, that are slaves for life, and good titles. My office is in Pratt street, between Sharp and Howard streets, and opposite to the Repository—where I or my agent can be seen at all times. All persons, having Negroes to sell, would do well to see me before they dispose of them, as I am always buying and forwarding to the New Orleans market. I will also receive and keep Negroes at twenty-five cents each, per day, and forward them to any Southern port, at the request of the owner. My establishment is large, comfortable and airy, and all above ground; and kept in complete order, with a large yard for exercise; and is the strongest and most splendid building of the kind in the United States. And as the character of my house and yard is so completely established, for strength, comfort and cleanliness, and it being a place where I keep all my own, I will not be accountable, for the future, for any escapes of any kind from my establishment.

BALTIMORE LOCKE DISPENSARY,
No. 17 HARRISON STREET,
Established for the cure of one class of diseases.

BY the use of that infallible remedy, Dr. HUNTER'S RED DROP, by an experienced physician of five years practice in New York. The nature of the medicine is such, that it drives every vestige of poison from the system, and so secret, that the most intimate friend cannot detect the use of it—without diet or hindrance from business. One bottle is warranted to cure, or the money returned.

Price $1. Private Rooms attached. Advice gratis.

☞ The only place in this city, where the genuine Medicine can be obtained, is at No 17 HARRISON STREET. All medicine sold elsewhere, under the name of Hunter's, is a base fraud. mh17-tf
