VA high school poster contest

WASHINGTON — The local deadline in the national high school "Hire A Veteran" poster contest is Sept. 25.

Savings bonds worth thousands of dollars will be awarded to local and state winners throughout the country. The prizes have been donated by local, state and national veterans and other service organizations, according to Donald E. Johnson, head of the Veterans Administration which is sponsoring the contest.

Students (in grades 9-12) in public, parochial and private schools are eligible. Poster sizes are restricted to 17 x 22 inches.

* * *

Three winners in each state will be announced by Oct. 10. The three national winners, who will receive scholarships amounting to $1,500, $1,000 and $500 respectively, will be announced on Oct. 21 at a special ceremony in the nation's capitol.

They also will be the personal guests of Johnson at the annual Veterans Day National Observance at Arlington National Cemetery on Monday, Oct. 23. Johnson is chairman of the President's Veterans Day National Committee.

* * *

Students requiring additional information may contact their high school art director, principal or nearest VA office.

While VA does not have the primary responsibility for finding jobs for veterans, Johnson pointed out, VA has been instrumental in bringing thousands of veterans and prospective employers together at job marts and job fairs throughout the country.

Also nearly 70,000 jobs have been obtained for veterans through 72 VA assistance centers, an increase of 83 per cent over June, 1971 figures.

VA leads all federal agencies in the hiring of Vietnam Era veterans, it was pointed out, with 15,014 on its rolls as of June 30. VA is currently hiring Vietnam veterans at the rate of about 1,000 a month.
