BA-2467 ZIMMERMAN HOUSE (EAST) - Before 1850 - 7001 Windsor Mill Road, Woodlawn. A house acquired late in the 19th century by Professor William H. Zimmerman who lived in the structure to the west. This house is believed to be older than the main Zimmerman house and could be one of the houses shown on Sidney's 1850 map. Possibly the J. H. Hooper house of the 1877 Hopkins atlas. Dr. Zimmerman's ca. 1880 photo shows this house with a square cupola, now vanished. This structure is either a late 19th century replacement of the Hooper house or a cut-down version. It is a crude mixture of formstone, brick, and composition shingle. Part of a small village that had no name on maps. The stones in the Zimmerman cemetery show that all the families shown near this corner on various maps were inter-related.

BA-2468 ZIMMERMAN HOUSE (WEST) - 1850 - 7003-7005 Windsor Mill Road, Woodlawn. Apparently the C. [Caleb] Peddicord house shown on 1850 map by Sidney. In 1852 it passed to John Zimmerman, and in 1852 it passed to John Zimmerman, and in 1853 to Wm. Widderman, and in 1853 to Rebecca Grimes, in 1874 to Henry, and then to John Zimmerman, and finally in 1879 to Professor William H. Zimmerman. Professor Zimmerman, one of the founders of Western Maryland College, bought this long, vernacular style, frame and clapboard duplex house and added a full width porch and second story gallery as shown in one of his photos. The J. Zimmerman house shown in the Hopkins 1877 atlas. Dr. Zimmerman was a scientist and an early photographer. House now sheathed in aluminum; the rear roof forms a cat-slide.

BA-2469 BURK HOUSE - After 1865 - 1941 Featherbed Lane, Woodlawn. Possibly the oldest house in Woodlawn, counting the log walls of a ca. 1802 structure incorporated into a larger house built by Civil War veteran Burk. Frame and clapboard outer covering; full width front porch decorated with a carriage wheel. The first of the family, William Burks came from Virginia in 1822 and bought four acres of "Bear's Thicket." This house was acquired by the second generation of the family. The present owner is a descendant, Mrs. Ethel Burk Franklin.

BA-2470 QUAKER HILL CEMETERY - ca. 1850 - 8735 Wright's Mill Road, Granite. Small cemetery on south side of the road between early 19th century houses of Hartleys and Humphreys. Part of present Geiman property. Located near the now extinct Diamond Ridge Friends Meeting House, this was the burial place of the Hartleys, Wrights, and Heacocks.
