Mrs. Cardin, Mrs. Carter cited by women's unit

Two Baltimore women have been honored for their efforts to advance women's rights and opportunities in Maryland.

Mrs. Shoshana S. Cardin and Mrs. Kathleen M. Carter were honored at a June 14 reception given in recognition of 10 years of service apiece as members of the Maryland Commission for Women and its predecessor, the Maryland Commission on the Status of Women.

Mrs. Cardin is out-going chairwoman of the commission, and Ms. Carter is out-going vice chairwoman.

Gov. and Mrs. Harry R. Hughes headed a list of guests who attended the affair organized by MCW members and staff members.

Other public officials attending the affair and making presentations to the honorees included: State Senator James Clark, president of the Maryland Senate; Delegate Pauline Menes for Delegate Benjamin Cardin, speaker of the House of Delegates; Baltimore Councilwoman Victorine Adams, Mrs. Jeanette Wolman, honorary chairwoman of the Maryland Commission for Women; U.S. Rep. Clarence Long, Mrs. Jean Colburn, president, State Division of the American Association of University Women; Mrs. JoAnn Orlinsky, Maryland Commission for Women.

Mrs. Kay Carter

Mrs. Shoshana Cardin

Delegate Marilyn Goldwater, president of the Women's Caucus of the General Assembly, spoke prior to these presentations, lauding the honorees for their work on the commission.

'Fur elephant sale' to benefit handicapped

Of the approximately 250 children who attend the camp, only 10 percent of the parents can afford the maximum fees.

The fur sale and other league fund-raisers makes it possible for the remaining 90 percent to participate regardless of the family's financial situation.

$26,000 for the various programs and services the league offers to physically handicapped children, teenagers and adults.

An auxiliary project, the fur sale enabled the group to exceed its annual $18,500 goal for sending children to Camp Greentop.

Every child, regardless of great or small ability, gets loving attention at Rognel Heights Elementary School in Edmondson Village. The principal, Mrs. Gloria Campbell, the devoted parents and of course all the children enrolled are justly proud of this "Super School".

Although new in concept, there's something about Rognel Elementary that reminds one of the pleasant, cheerful and homelike atmosphere of schools of yesterday.

Here's what the administrators have to say about Rognel Heights Elementary School:

A Super School-
Rognel Heights
Elementary

Rognel Heights Elementary School No. 89, located at 4300 Sidehill Road near the Edmondson Village area, initially opened its doors to students in September, 1970. It is named for the community in which it is situated.

The building is very beautiful, well constructed and contains four open space pods along with many self - contained instructional areas.

The administration, staff, students, and parents are very proud of Rognel Heights Elementary School's instructional program.

The approximately 600 students range from preschoolers in the Communication Center as young as 2 years old to slightly more than 200 sixth grade students.

Most of the student body is concentrated in the intermediate grades because Lyndhurst School No. 88 feeds its sixth graders into Rognel Heights.

In addition to the regular curricular program, School No. 89 boasts both self contained and resource programs that provide for youngsters who have learning, speech, and reading disabilities, vision impairment, and communication disorders as well as for those students who are intellectually gifted and talented in music and art.

The school media center is a viable resource to both students and teachers, while the physical education program is also essential to the school's total instructional program.

Extra curricular student activities include an active Student Council, Safety Patrol, School Chorus, School Band and a monthly student newspaper, The Rognel Heights Super News.

The school also has a functional Parent Volunteer Program in which several parents
