Description

This complex includes a cast stone, or rusticated concrete block Foursquare house of ca. 1915 and contemporary automotive garage constructed of the same material. The house is a five bay structure with a hipped roof and hip-roofed frontal dormer. The roofing material is standing seam sheet metal. There appears to have been a two story porch at the northeast corner, later enclosed. Quoins of contrasting rock-faced block embellish the corners of the house. The garage is a four bay building with a low pitched gable roof hidden by a front stepped parapet facade. The entrance is central with hinged doors. While the facade is of block, the rear portion is frame with German siding. The roofing material is standing seam sheet metal.

This was the home and business of the Roulette family who had both structures built. The garage was a Chevrolet dealership. The complex is intact, reflecting early 20th century commercial activity in town.
