DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Hollingsworth Farm located on Hollingsworth Road east of Church Hill is a two part frame building dating from the mid-19th century. It is composed of a two story five bay section and a four bay 1 1/2 story section, both of which are covered with brown wood shingles.

Across the east facade of the main part is a three bay porch with turned columns and pierced gallery beneath the roof. It stands on brick piers. Both of the other sections stand on a brick foundation. All of the windows throughout have 6/6 sash. The front entrance has a bold six-panel door with small panels in the center. There is a transom above the door. The principal cornice is relatively simple with the exception of the facia which has a very executed applied scalloped board. The wing has a window and door closest the main part and two windows on the other half of the facade. Two dormers with 'A' roofs pierce the steeply pitched 'A' roof. At the ends of the main part and the gable of the wing rise brick chimneys. The 'A' roof of the main section is relatively shallow.

7.1 DESCRIPTION

Across three of the four bays in back of the wing is a lean-to, partly enclosed. There are two dormers on the roof. The back of the main section has the same number of windows as the front, but there is no porch or transom, and the center window of the second story is lower than the rest.

Behind the house is a small board and batten smokehouse on brick piers. It appears to be late 19th century.

The interior plan consists of a central stair hall with dining room and living room flanking it. The wing appears to house a kitchen and pantry. The interior of the house was not accessible to the surveyor.
