Remembered His Manners.

"You boy over in the corner!" led the man behind the desk. The boy over in the corner shot like a bolt.

"Answer me this," continued the examiner: "Do we eat the flesh of the whale?"

"Y-y-yes, sir," faltered the schol-

"And what," pursued the examiner, "do we do with the bones?"

"P-please sir," responded the boy, "we leave them on the s-s-sides of our p-plates."—Youth's Companion.

Modern Business Ethics.

A Chicago minister recently told the students of the University of Chicago that the code of modern business was pagan and not Christian, with brutality and selfishness as its chief attributes.

Modern business has much in it that is bad, but it is far from being ethically pagan and it is not, as implied by this assertion, as bad as the business codes that preceded. It is far cry from the day of apprenticeship slavery and imprisonment for debt to that of short hours, sanitary labor and liberal pay and laws exempting debtors from unfair exactions by creditors. Our loquacious old friend, Micawber, would, no doubt, revel in the patience and privileges of this day and conclude that this era, without its debt-prisons and Uriah Heeps, was indeed a Golden Age. But the serious fact is that with all our strenuous competition, quick amassing of prodigious wealth, our business code is more humane, more mindful of the other man and his rights and, indeed more moral than that of any people in history. All about us we see these men of colossal fortunes giving with lavish hand to charitable or other worthy causes and even in the severity of their business dealings they are not driving as cruel bargains as they used to.—Omaha Bee.

Couldn't Say It.

A Wall Street broker has a boy who stutters badly. One day a neighbor wanted to send a note across the city, and borrowed George to carry it for him. The trip was a long one and the boy was gone quite three hours. When he returned, the broker asked him how much he had charged for his services.

"F-ff-ff-fi-fi-fifteen c-c-c-c-cents!" was the gasping reply.

"Oh, pshaw! Why didn't you make it a quarter?"

"I-I-I-I c-c-c-c-couldn't s-s-s-say ," replied George, sadly.—Metropolitan Magazine.

Moisture And Crop Production.

A paper read at a recent meeting in Winnipeg states that omitting evaporation from 200 to 400 tons of water are required in producing the ton of dry matter. In how growing of crops it is estimated that, including evaporation, from 3.6 inches to 4.3 inches of water are required to produce 12 bushels of wheat or 20 bushels of barley per acre.

HARD TO PLEASE

Regarding the Morning Cup.

"Oh, how hard it was to part with coffee, but the continued trouble with constipation and belching was such that I finally brought myself to leave it off.

"Then the question was, what could we use for the morning drink? Tea was worse for us than coffee; chocolate and cocoa were soon tired of; milk was not liked very well, and hot water we could not endure.

"About two years ago we struck upon Postum and have never been without it since.

"We have seven children. Our boy, now eighteen months old, would not take milk, so we tried Postum. We found she liked it and it agreed with her perfectly. She is to-day, and has been, one of the healthiest babies in the State.

"I use about two-thirds Postum and one-third milk and a teaspoon of sugar, and put it into her bottle. If you could have seen her eyes sparkle and hear her say 'good' to-day when I give it to her, you would believe me that she likes it.

"If I was matron of an infants' home, every child would be raised on Postum. Many of my friends say, 'You are looking so well!' I reply, 'I am well; I drink Postum. I have no more trouble with constipation, and know that I owe my good health to God and Postum.'

"I am writing this letter because I want to tell you how much good Postum has done for us, but if you knew how I shrink from publicity you would not publish this letter, at least not over my name."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

BUSINESS WOMEN TO AID LEAGUE

Local Organization In New York Doing Substantial Work.

COMMITTEE OF ONE HUNDRED

Plans For Entertainment of Delegates to National Negro Business League Are Being Perfected—Exhibits Will Show Extent of Woman's Activity in a Tangible Manner.

The Negro Woman's Local Business League of Greater New York, with headquarters at the Hotel Marcus, 213 West Fifty-third street, is making ample preparations for its part in entertaining the delegates to the National Negro Business League, which meets in Palm Garden, New York, Aug. 17 to 20, inclusive.

It will take quite a sum of money for delegates' board and the banquet to be held at Grand Central Palace. There will also be incidental expenses. In order to cover the expense without burdening the league the women have fallen into line and are meeting with much encouragement. A committee of 100 is being formed.

All persons contributing the sum of $2 are eligible to membership in the committee. Those who contribute $4 will be entitled to a ticket to the grand banquet which will mark the close of the league. Delegates desiring accommodations are urged to notify Mrs. B. F. Thomas, 213 West Fifty-third street, or Mrs. Louise Greenlee of 165 West Fifty-third street.

The woman's local league has a strong membership and is thoroughly organized and has the following officers: Miss Irena L. Moorman, president; Mrs. Harriette S. Mitchell, secretary; Mrs. Sarah Vanness, treasurer, and Mrs. Rosa Williams, assistant treasurer.

The executive committee is composed of Mrs. J. P. Moore, chairman; Mrs. B. F. Thomas, vice chairman; Miss Mamie Shields, Miss Alice Butler, organizer; Mrs. Hibernia Smith, Mrs. H. M. Winslow and Mrs. Louisa Greenlee.

The president of the league, Miss Irena L. Moorman, is one of the best qualified business women among our people in Greater New York. Under her able leadership, with the hearty cooperation of the members, success is assured. Miss Moorman is a born leader, and in the matter of handling large sums, which require experience and business tact she has more than once demonstrated that she knows how to get results from her efforts.

Miss Moorman organized and had incorporated the People's Auditorium company, with offices at 26 Court street, Brooklyn. In this business venture, like all other movements in which she is interested, she is succeeding admirably.

Mrs. Harriette S. Mitchell, secretary of the league, is also known as an earnest, sincere worker who has had considerable experience as an organizer and leader in many good movements among our people. Upon Mrs. Mitchell's efforts will depend largely much of the success of the present movement. As secretary she will keep the members duly informed of the meetings and conduct the entire correspondence necessary in forming the committee of one hundred.

Reports of what women are doing in a business way will occupy the greater part of their session. It is said that over 60 per cent of all the money contributed for business purposes among Afro-Americans in Greater New York is raised by women.

Business meetings will be held weekly on Monday evenings from now on until Aug. 15. Exhibits of the handiwork of women engaged in various lines of business will be shown on woman's day, Aug. 18. A splendid musical program will also be rendered by well known artists.

Jeffries Wants to Be Let Alone.

Said Jeffries after the fight, "Well, I guess the public will let me alone after this." Yes, bad, the public will let you alone, and we believe you will let the public alone, particularly one member of the public who hails from Galveston, Tex. How unnecessary it is to call names at times!—Savannah (Ga.) Tribune.

GOOD ROADS

WHAT GOOD ROADS ARE.

Professor P. A. Foder, of Utah: If after two weeks of rainy weather followed by one hour of sunshine a bicycler can speed along at a gait of eight miles an hour and sling no mud up his back; if after a dry summer's traffic a funeral train can move over the road without raising the dust; if after several years' use there are no perceptible ruts made by wagon wheels or horses' hoofs, then we can pronounce it a good road. Some of you may think this but an idle dream impossible of realization. You need but travel a little in some of the European countries before mentioned to undeceive yourselves in this respect. You will find that such roads are possible, and not only possible, but in the long run economical. In this country in extensive drives or bicycle rides we rejoice when we approach a town, for there we expect to find solid roads. In most of the European countries, on the other hand, we rejoice when we get out of the towns, with their hard, rough paving blocks and reach the smooth, clean, country macadam. In this country, especially in the western states, the plan is to make the highway wide enough to enable us to turn out from mudholes and dusty tracks. In the old country the plan is to keep the road narrow enough to enable them to fix it properly. Land is valuable for cultivation but road side weeds are a nuisance.

THE ROAD

The road is like a work of art—It incites the imagination. In this I contend that it is an educator of no mean worth. It promises a healthy interest in the brain, and scraps of wisdom may be found scattered along the way for those who will to pick up. There are as many sorts of roads as there are many kinds of books, each sort filling its place. The grand turnpike, with its fine estates, speaking of wealth; the country byways, hinting modest contentment and ease; the toll road with its gate and its wayside inn for travelers; the river road, following the stream now giving glimpses of the broad sweep and now but sparkles of light through the foliage as the trees obstruct the view. There is the hilly road where one loses the view of the highway ahead as it dips down into the valley, only to rise with a narrowed gauge on a further hill, and the wood road with its confluent paths and trails. One of the strongest lures is the road built at a time when it was easier to go around or over a hill than through it; better to find a safe ford than to plunge anywhere into the stream or build a bridge. The highway which goes straight from one point to another is a scientist and not a poet. It may be a fine servant, but as a friend and companion give me the meandering road with its constant surprises, its up-hill and down-dale, its sunshine and shadow. One which may be seen a mile ahead may be a fine speedway, but it is not capable of rousing the imagination.—Walter K. Stone in Recreation.

THE MOVEMENT GROWING

Many of the very foremost men of the country have declared in favor of National aid to good roads and the feeling is constantly growing that it should prevail. Of course, here and there we find it opposed by seditious argument and strained interpretations of the constitution, but this opposition cannot stand in the face of the practice of the government in road building many years ago, and at this day in Porto Rico, where we have constructed more highways in the past five years than did the Spaniards in four hundred years; and in the Philippines, where we are building highways every day in the year. There is more serious consideration being given to the subject of good roads today than any other that can be named, and as a question fraught with vital concern to the interval commerce of the country and to its religious, educational and social advancement, it is a sure thing that the call for national aid will have to be heard.

It is not the farmer alone who is affected by bad roads; trade conditions are disastrously affected wherever bad roads exist. Good roads are necessary to every vocation and every interest. The cost of bad roads has been so often presented that repetition would not strengthen argument. The main fact is the clear fact that bad roads are a curse to the nation and a disgrace to our boasted Americanism. There is necessity for government aid to better roads and it ought to be extended with the least possible delay. In every civilized country but ours, government has fostered improved highways. Wherever improved highways have been built the people are happier and the country more prosperous. In the United States there has been marvelous progress notwithstanding bad roads. We would have progressed a thousand fold more under an improved system of highways. A change is needed here. The common roads should be made adequate to the necessities of the country. There is no special class in the discussion. It is a great economic question, rapping loudly for recognition, and as all the people are involved the government should step in and co-operate with the States in its solution.

Willie Knew His Mother.

Little Willie was playing one day with the girl next door, when the latter exclaimed:

"Don't you hear your mother calling you? That's three times she's done it. Aren't you going in?"

"Not yet," responded Willie.

"Won't she whip you?"

"Naw," exclaimed Willie in disgust. "She aint going to whip nobody. She's got company. So when I go in she'll just say, 'The poor little man has been so deaf since he's had the measels.'"—From the Housekeeper.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Good Nature Rewarded.

The car was crowded as cars are sometimes, so the fat man stood in the vestibule. At his back was an open window, and the trolley rope hung idly in a graceful loop of the outside of the car and just below his neck. For several blocks everything was lovely. Then the car hit a low place without a corresponding low place in the trolley wire. The rope tightened to make up for the discrepancy and caught the fat man's hat brim with sufficient force to hurl it out the window.

Did the fat man frown and blame the conductor? No. He looked at his fellow passengers, his face wreathed in smiles, and said:

"Well! I'll be piggered if that isn't the slickest trick I ever experienced in all my days."

He pulled the bell cord and when the car had slowed down at the next corner he pulled himself through and jumped off before the car came to a full stop. The conductor, however, had seen it all. He signaled the motorman not to start until the passenger could wait for a other car and article a racked, so he pulled the rope once and the car waited.—Kansas City Star.

SOFT, WHITE HANDS

May Be Obtained in One Night.

For preserving the hands as well as for preventing redness, roughness, and chapping, and imparting that velvety softness and whiteness much desired by women Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, is believed to be superior to all other skin soaps. For those who work in corrosive liquids, or at occupations which tend to injure the hands, it is invaluable.

Treatment—Bathe and soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of Cuticura Soap. Dry and anoint freely with Cuticura Ointment, and in severe cases spread the Cuticura Ointment on thin pieces of old linen or cotton. Wear during the night old, loose gloves, or a light bandage of old cotton or linen to protect the clothing from stain. For red, rough, and chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, and shapeless nails with painful finger ends, this treatment is most effective. Since He Asked.

An English peer who had visited Scotland was at a dinner given in his honor at a private residence.

A little daughter of his host, who was too well bred to stare, but who eyed him covertly as the occasion presented itself, finally took courage to shyly remark:

"And you are really and truly an English lord?"

"Yes," he answered, pleasantly, "really and truly."

"I have often thought I would like to see an English lord," went on the little maid, "and—and—"

"And now you are satisfied at last?" he interrupted laughingly.

"No," replied the truthful child, "I am not satisfied. I'm a good deal disappointed."—Scraps.
