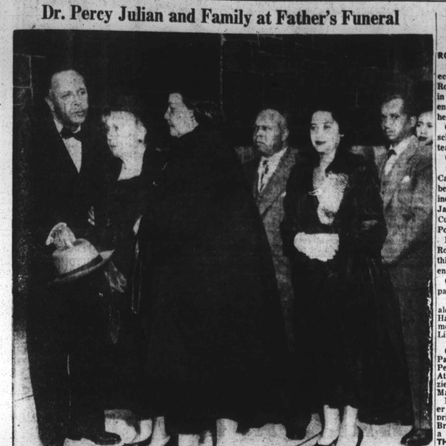
Dr. Percy Julian and Family at Father's Funeral



Dr. Percy Julian, famed scientist, assists his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Julian as they leave the funeral services for his father, James S. Julian Sr. Dr. Julian's wife and other relatives stand nearby. The funeral was held at Grace Presbyterian Church, Baltimore on Thursday.

While Mourning Father, Dr. Julian Learns of Attempt to Bomb Home

Dr. Percy Julian, world-famed research chemist, returned to Baltimore this week to attend funeral services for his 81-year-old father, James S. Julian Sr., who died on June 10.

Dr. Julian and his wife arrived in mourning and were further sorrowed to learn of the attempted bombing of their home in an exclusive all-white suburb near Chicago on Tuesday night.

Near Tragedy

A near tragedy was averted, when their two young children narrowly escaped injury as a time bomb was set beneath their bedroom window.

Held in Grace Presbyterian Church, on Thursday morning, services for the elder Julian were quiet and simple. A small gathering of relatives and friends paid homage to the man who lived to see his six children obtain collectively 14 academic degrees.

Son of Slaves

The husband of Mrs. Elizabeth Adams Julian, Mr. Julian Sr., was born in Davenport, Ala. in 1870. He was the second of twelve children. He and his wife had lived in Greencastle, Ind. for 25 years, and in Baltimore for seven.

In reading the obituary, Dr. James Pair, said that Mr. Julian's mother, "Convinced that this son of ours was to be a man of significant destiny, made a solemn pact" to provide him with an education.

In early 1888, at his mother's urging, Mr. Julian Sr. went to the state normal school at Montgomery. After graduation, he taught in rural Alabama schools for five years. Later he was appointed to the government mail service.

Gave Children Advice

Dr. Pair characterized Mr. Julian as "a dependable rock of Gibraltar, always he stood for his children. Up until his death, they came to him for counsel and advice."

The Rev. John T. Colbert, pastor of Grace Presbyterian, who officiated, remembered Mr. Julian as "a native scholar, whose influence over his children and whose love for them and his wife was one exemplifying the best of the Christian virtues."

Flowers from Ten States

Flowers from friends in ten states, including New York, Illinois, Alabama were at the front of the church on either side of the solid copper casket.

Mr. Julian is survived by his wife and six children.

The children are Dr. Percy L. Julian, director of chemical research at the Glidden Company in Chicago and winner of the Spingarn Medal; Dr. James A. Julian, Emerson Julian of Baltimore, Mrs. John White of Baltimore, Mrs. Mary Fowlkes and Alabama were at the front of the church on either side of the solid copper casket.

Mr. Julian is survived by his wife and six children.

The children are Dr. Percy L. Julian, director of chemical research at the Glidden Company in Chicago and winner of the Spingarn Medal; Dr. James A. Julian, Emerson Julian of Baltimore, Mrs. John White of Baltimore, Mrs. Mary Fowlkes and Mrs. Irma Cooper of Brooklyn, N.Y. His grandsons include Percy Jr., James Summer 3rd, Emil and Emerson Jr. His granddaughters are Betty Jean McClemore, Sylvia and Faith Julian, Irma and Carol Cooper.

Numerous other relatives survive.

Pallbearers were: Gettys Gilmore, Lee Shipley, Simon Carter, Dr. Charles Watts, Robert Johnson and Dr. C. N. Jones.

Honorary pallbearers included: Dr. Moses Ekeledo, P. E. Connolly, William B. Harris, Dr. Earl Jackson, Dr. James Pair, J. W. Hugely and Dr. Joseph B. Mason.

Interment was in Arbutus Memorial Park.

3rd Armored Calvary Observes Anniversary

The famed Third Armored Cavalry Regiment at Fort Meade will observe its 105th anniversary, Friday, with regimental day.

Highlight of the day will be a regimental parade at 11 a.m., when Secretary of the Army Frank Pace Jr., and Gen. W. H. Haislip, Army vice chief of staff, will review the troops.

The activities will include athletic contests, displays of armored vehicles and equipment, and historical exhibits in the regimental museum.
