OUTDOOR TIPS

HUNTING

For hunters who know how, there's nothing more deadly than a duck call for luring in the mallards, blacks and cans. But, nothing will put the damper on a hunt quicker than a broken call.

The part of a call most likely to break down is the reed.

If you discover yours is broken, don't despair. Take a double-edged razor blade, shape it to fit, and replace the broken reed.

You will find that it works so well that you may just leave it in there for subsequent trips.

BIG-GAME hunters spend a lot of time and money to get in a position for a shot at a trophy head. Because of this, they take no chances on messing up a shot — it's always possible their lives may depend on it.

Here's one trick they use worth passing on. Cut off the breast pocket on the shooting side of young hunting jacket.

Next time a deer or rabbit pops up unexpectedly, you won't catch the butt of your weapon on the flap or mouth of the pocket and good a perfectly good chance.

BOATING

With today's big outboards, we sometimes tend to forget that speed (fast speed) isn't everything. Fish, for example, often like trolled lures presented slow and easy.

If you have trouble getting your engine to throttle down, try this. Wrap a rag around the prop and secure it there.

This will slow down the boat and speed up the fishing action.

(Try for a $50 prize. Send your tip to A. A. Contest, Sports Afield, 959 8th Ave., New York 19, N.Y.)
