District native, Dr. Payne, buried

Funeral services for Dr. Howard W. Payne, 54, native of Washington, were held Tuesday at Christ Church in Waltham, Mass., where he had lived since becoming superintendent of Middlesex County Sanitarium three years ago.

Following funeral services the body was flown to Washington for burial in Lincoln Memorial Cemetery.

Dr. Payne, who was found dead at his Waltham home Saturday, enjoyed a 30-year career as a tuberculosis specialist—27 of them at Freedmen's Hospital. He was chief of the Chronic Chest Disease Service there 18 years.

* * *

Surviving him are his wife, Karen; father, John C. Payne; two sons, Howard Jr., and William; a brother, Dr. John C. Payne Jr.; and a sister, Mrs. Suzanne Payne Lawson.

HE ALSO held a number of posts at Howard University College of Medicine. He was professor of internal medicine when he resigned to take the Middlesex County Sanitarium post July 1, 1958.

Upon his leaving Freedmen's and Howard, Dr. Payne was presented a certificate of achievement by Supt. Charles Burbridge. It read: "For 27 years of outstanding study, diagnosis and treatment of tuberculosis at Freedmen's."

Following graduation from Dartmouth College, he enrolled at Howard University earned the M.D. degree in College of Medicine and Arts.

He served his internship at Freedmen's and then joined its staff. Nine years later he became chief Chronic Chest Disease Service.

Dr. Payne was associated with numerous organizations in the medical profession, including:

D.C. TUBERCULOSIS Association, as an officer and board member; president of the Tuberculosis Conference, 1955 - 53; director - at-large, board of directors, National Tuberculosis Association; Consultant, Tuberculosis Service of the Veterans Administration and the division of Chronic Disease and Tuberculosis of the Public Health Service, in which he held the rank of senior surgeon in the inactive reserve; And also the National Board of Medical Examiners, the American Board of Internal Medicine and the Chronic Chest Diseases.
