Report from Europe

By OLLIE STEWART

PARIS — Most tourists making a visit to Europe usually spot a habit over on this side that lets them know immediately that they're a long way from home. It's the sight of so many people carrying briefcases.

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT repossessed homes now available to the public, small down payment small monthly payments. William Herger, Realtor, 1313 South Hanover Street. LE 9-0279.

case as briefcase is a status symbol in most European countries — particularly in France and Germany, with Britain coming in third. And a few years ago a visitor remarked that four out of five Africans he saw in Paris and London were lugging a briefcase.

The explanation for the Africans is fairly simple. The briefcase is a status symbol. The administrators, judges and business men in Egypt, Senegal and Sierra Leone have carried this piece of hand luggage for ages.

AND THE first thing a young man from one of these and other nations longs for is the symbol that shows he's a man of affairs. He buys a briefcase before he buys a good suit.

He has it with him at all times — when he goes to school, to work or just visiting. It seems to be a part of him.

And one of the things I would like most to know is this. Just what is in the average briefcase? ... It's something that bothers me every time I see one in the hands of one of these bright young men. If he's a lawyer, I imagine he's got legal papers stashed away in it. If a music student, perhaps some opera scores.

But most of them are neither lawyers nor musicians. So what the devil are they carrying?

WELL, THANKS to a reporter in Berlin, the mystery is partially solved. This nosy newsman has made a great discovery. He has found out that in Germany, at least, most of the briefcases contain a few sandwiches. Lunch, in other words!

Carrying his research further, he found out that some men who looked like diplomats had mostly pin-ups in their briefcases. One or two had a flock of detective stories. And still others had bottles of beer.

That sort of takes care of the Europeans, since it is reasonable to suppose that a lot of Frenchmen and Britishers also carry their lunch in their briefcase.

BUT WHAT about my African friends? Do they also keep a snack with them at all times, or do they have a few interesting pictures to give them a lift whenever they can sneak a look?

I don't suppose I'll ever really know.

Personally, I prefer pockets. I don't go in so much for nibbling that I have to have a sandwich or a candy bar always handy. I do my reading at home, and I'm too old to get hopped with pin-ups.

SO, WHAT few things I need with me when I hit the street can be accommodated very easily in the pockets of my coat or trousers. I'll never have the diplomatic look, and I'm not worrying about having somebody mistake me for a big-shot business man.

I'm still remembering the one time I did get a look into a guy's briefcase. He was an American and he didn't have a good zipper on his little leather kit. It feel open while he was visiting me — and the only thing inside was a dirty shirt!

'L. A. Harris' talks with the AFRO

By MARY STRATFORD
WASHINGTON

Accused of posing as a lawyer, Daniel Morgan awaited a District Court jury's verdict Wednesday with outward calm as he described himself in a courtroom interview as a "great race man."

The subject arose as Mr. Morgan, who practiced law here under the name of "L. A. Harris", sat at the defense table where he was perusing trial documents shortly after the jury took his case under consideration.

AT THE time of the comment, he was discussing with this reporter the Freedom Riders, for whom he had the highest praise. "I think the movement is wonderful," he said. "I believe race relations will reach a certain point in this country and then there will be a change all at once."

IT MIGHT seem a strange topic under discussion from a man who awaited a verdict on charges which, he had earlier told the jury, could net him as many as 110 years in jail, upon conviction.

But Mr. Morgan was relating the race question to his own personal struggle which he said arose because of his attempt to protect the rights of defendants.

FROM THE Freedom Riders, his conversation turned to Paul Robeson whom he described as "my idol" and who was depicted by him as a "heartbroken" martyr abandoned by his people. He gave up thousands of dollars for his principles," the defendant said of the singer

Rites Monday for S. Williams

Samuel F. Williams Jr., 61, 3414 Auchentoroly Terrace, died Thanksgiving morning at Provident Hospital.

He retired from the postal service in June 1958 and had been ill since then.

Funeral services are scheduled for Monday at St. Plus Catholic Church where he was a lifelong member. He was an altar boy there as a youth and at one time was president of the church's Holy Name Society.

Mr. Williams was one of six children of Samuel F. Sr. and Mary V. Brown, both Baltimore natives. The senior Mr. Williams for many years was night watchman at the old Baltimore Club.

Mr. Williams is survived by his wife, Mrs. Maud L. Williams, principal of Davis School No. 125 and two sisters, Miss Anita Williams, recently retired intake secretary of Catholic Charities and Mrs. Sarah Howard, a public school aide.

Mrs. Martha Brown

Mrs. Martha Brown, 91, who has been ill since July, died in her sleep Thursday morning.

She made her home with her granddaughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Ashe.

Funeral services are scheduled for Monday, 1 p.m. at the Arlington S. Phillips Funeral Home, 1308 N. Monroe St.

In addition to Mrs. Ashe, she is survived by three other granddaughters, Miss Evelyn Brown and Richard Brown of Baltimore, and Mrs. Florence Smith of Brooklyn, N.Y.
