Motorists get visibility tip

Now that cold weather is here for awhile, an increase in traffic crashes can be expected.

Car-train crashes at rural crossings will also increase, if past experience is any guide.

One of the big hazards in cold weather is obscured vision. No one would buy a car that has no windows, but many people drive with their windows frosted or fogged over.

While you might be able to see fairly well through a light film of frost when the sun is behind you, turning a corner could change that.

On almost any cold morning, you can see drivers peering through a small clear spot in their windshield, unable to see to the rear, sides or anywhere except the small area straight ahead.

One worthwhile safety precaution is to start your day by allowing a few extra minutes on cold mornings to clean fog, ice or snow off all the windows, not just the windshield.

If you start the engine and heater before you take care of the windows, it will cut the time necessary to get warm air circulating.

Warm air inside the car will prevent condensation forming on windows.

The more people in the car, the more moisture there will be in the air. In very cold weather it can be almost impossible to keep the windows from steaming up, but keeping a window open slightly will help.

It is safest to always keep one window open slightly, regardless of the season. Carbon monoxide can seep into the car's interior through unseen cracks. Some drivers keep the left rear window rolled down half an inch since this seems to create a minimum of draft on passengers.

Wash the windows often. Dirt and road film intensify headlight glare, and more of our driving is done during hours of darkness at this time of the year.

Dirt also increases windshield streaking. Pay special attention to the inside surfaces of windows. Dust sticks to the damp glass, and tobacco smoke will leave a brown coating summer or winter.

Windshield washers are of special value during the slushy road season, but they should have special anti-freeze added. This not only keeps the water from freezing, it also keeps it from turning into a sheet of ice when it hits the windshield.

In extremely cold weather, it is wise to slow down before using windshield washers because a rush of cold air increases the possibility of freezing.

Good windshield wiper blades are very important. The heat of the past summer could have baked some of the life out of the rubber. If this has happened, they will not clean the windshield properly. If the blades look good but still streak, have the spring tension of the wiper arm checked and adjusted.

Just as important as good visibility is being able to hear warning sounds outside your car. With windows closed the radio turned on and blowers, heater and defroster running, it is difficult to hear the sounds of railroad crossing bells, car horns and sirens. A partly opened window lets in a little traffic noise, but some of those noises are important to driving safely.

It is harder to keep alert in winter driving. The warmth inside the car, after exposure to the cold, can make you sleepy. When this happens, try opening the cold air vent for a few moments.

Don't put your sunglasses away, just because summer has ended. The glare of sunlight on snow can be more brilliant than the summer sun, and it can make driving very difficult.

Chile Con Carne

Nearly everyone has pretty definite ideas about chili! Many great cooks guard their recipes like old family heirlooms.

There's the good natured controversy of chili pods versus chili powder, the addition of cumin seeds, oregano, ground cloves. Some like tomato soup instead of tomato paste or sauce. Others add chopped green peppers and diced celery.

HERE IS A good basic recipe and you can experiment from then on. Add more chili powder if you like it hotter. Add tomato juice if you like yours sopier. But don't forget the ginger powder because that makes chili palatable even to the most finicky eaters.

Make chili ahead so it can rest in the refrigerator for a few hours. It will taste even better the second day, marvelous the third, and absolutely magnificent the fourth. And would you believe it's positively super after it has melded a whole week? True!

LUMBERJACK CHILI CON CARNE is made with one pound ground chuck beef, one-half cup chopped onion, one clove minced garlic, one can (No. 2) tomatoes, one small can tomato sauce.

And one tablespoon chili powder, one teaspoon ground ginger, one teaspoon sugar, one can (No. 2) kidney beans and salt and pepper to taste.

Brown beef, onion and garlic in 2 tablespoons fat, stirring lightly. Mix in all ingredients except beans and simmer gently about 1 hour. Finally stir in beans and simmer 15 minutes longer.

Experts contend chili should always be served with a glass of ice cold buttermilk or beer. Your family and guests will enjoy this choice.

Youth marches in Inaugural Parade

By GERTRUDE M. PARKER

The Women's Society of Christian Service of Mt. Winans United Methodist Church met recently at the home of Mrs. Victoria Anderson, secretary of Christian Social Relations.

The theme of the program was "The Missionary Finds a New Identity." Presentation of the program and discussion were led by Mrs. Bessie Mallory, vice president.

Mrs. Sadie Blocker, president of the society, attended the Asbury Methodist Home Guild by Methodist Home Guild Representative Luncheon, held at Memorial United Methodist Church last Thursday.

Our congratulations to Everett J. Ross Jr., grandson of Mrs. Edna P. Ross, of Huron St., who graduated from the Police Academy last Friday.

Roderick Pullen, nephew of Mrs. Corrinne Parker, of Huron St., a student at Frest Park High School, was one of the seven color guards bearing the school banner in the Inaugural Parade on Monday.

Mrs. Shirley Harris and her two daughters, Seterian and Yasmin, spent several days in New York recently.

Mrs. Victoria Anderson, president of the Union of the Dover Poultry Co., attended a meeting in Richmond, Va. last Friday.

The Civic Interest Group of Mt. Winans will be observing its anniversary soon. Under the leadership of its president, Walter D. Hill, and officers, the group has given much time and effort for neighborhood betterment.

Delight guests with a light, refreshing dessert. Banana-Orange Dessert Mold is the perfect ending for a tasty meal. Evaporated milk keeps it creamy-good. Garnished with mint leaves and orange segments, the mold looks as good as it tastes.

BANANA-ORANGE DESSERT MOLD

(Makes 6 to 8 servings)

2 packages (3 ounces each) orange flavored gelatin
2 cups boiling water
1 cup (½ pint) orange sherbet
1½ cups (11-ounce can) mandarin oranges
Mandarin orange syrup plus water to make ⅔ cup
1 cup undiluted Carnation Evaporated Milk
¼ cup (1 medium) chopped banana

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Stir in sherbet until melted. Cool slightly. Drain oranges; reserve syrup. Add water to reserved syrup to make 2/3 cup. Stir syrup-water mixture and Carnation Evaporated Milk into cooled gelatin. Blend well. Chill until consistency of unbeaten egg whites. Beat gelatin until fluffy. Fold in chopped banana. Pour into 5-cup mold and chill until set (about 2 hours). Unmold and garnish with orange segments.

Light Hous keeping

By LULA MACKAY

Just listen to Clodagh O'Kennedy, Dublin's gift to the fashion world, holding forth in New York, last week, as fashion scribes across the country, listened to the Montgomery Ward Designer Fashion Council spell out their ideas of clothes for the future. According to this designer, within a few years, your wearing clothes will peel down from 12 to five pieces, hats will be dead ducks, handbags will be mere memorabilia, and other bits and pieces that now compose the feminine wardrobe will have gone with the wind.

And to illustrate her ideas, Miss O'Kennedy came up with what she termed a three-skin ensemble . . . the first of which was YOU. Over you went an easily-zipped-into body stocking. The third layer, also zipped for fast dressing, was a tunic. Add a belt bag to carry your paraphernalia, and you were ready for the ride.

The Beauty Bit: Button up your over coat. Dig up your scarf. Don't put all the protection on your face and hands and forget the vulnerable skin on your pretty neck.

The neck, which can ruin party dresses, should have two coverings when you're out in blustery weather. So, unless you are wearing a turtleneck, always wrap a scarf around your neck to protect the skin.

First, however, protect the skin. Baby cream, which rubs in and won't stain your clothing or scarf, is the perfect under scarf or collar protection for the tender skin of your neck.

So what's New: There's a new device to eliminate or prevent car theft.

It consists of an adjustable steel shaft shaped like a shepherd's staff, but with a crook at both ends. One steel hook locks firmly onto the brake pedal and the other on the steering wheel, making it impossible to turn the wheel or operate the brake. When not in use, the device is carried in a special case.

Saute onion in butter in saucepan until tender, but not browned. Add rice, water, orange juice, and rind, celery, salt and sugar. Mix just to moisten all rice. Bring quickly to a boil over high heat. Cover, remove from heat. Let stand five minutes.

Add poultry seasoning and mix lightly with a fork. Use to stuff center cut of chops. This is also good for poultry or breast of veal. Bake or roast at once.

simply slide under the front seat.

Recipe of the Week: If you are the cook who stuffs a turkey or a chicken and calls it a day, you should extend your stuffing to pork chops . . . and this Orange Rice Stuffing.

The dressing is made with a fourth cup chopped third cups packaged precooked rice, a cup water, a half cup orange juice, two teaspoons grated orange rind, a cup diced celery, one and a half teaspoons salt, a half teaspoon sugar, and a fourth teaspoon poultry seasoning.

COMBAT PAY

Enlisted members of the Armed Forces may exclude from gross income all pay which they receive while serving in the combat area and Officers may exclude up to $500 per month from such pay.

The President has declared that Vietnam and adjacent waters, extending roughly 100 miles from the entire coast of North and South Vietnam, are combat areas. This area has been so designated since January 1, 1964.

February 1

The Baltimore Chapter of the A and T State University Alumni Association will host the regional meeting to be held at Wilson's Restaurant at 10:30 a.m.
