FOR CONGRESS,

HENRY R. TORBERT,

OF CECIL COUNTY.

☞ Since the Republican meeting on Wednesday week, there has been two Democratic military companies organized in Easton. The excuse given for this is, that because two military companies with their arms, appeared at the Republican meeting on the 26th inst., and a fear of their appearing at the polls in the same manner, on election day. What cause they have for this fear we do not know, when it has been denied to all that have asked the question, that such a violation of the law would be countenanced. We have had every assurance from Mr. Cowgill, who had the military in command on the day of the meeting, that he would not countenance men going to the polls with muskets or any other kind of guns, and he has so stated upon the public street. We are glad to know that there are at least a few Democrats to be found who oppose this military move. We also acknowledged fact that the whole thing is gotten up for election purposes, and every preparation is being made to make it as formidable as possible. The arms which were deposited in the arsenal in Easton, weeks ago, were not of the kind desired. They were returned and others were speedily received. The arms at the Republican meeting might just as well have been left at home, it being an unusual thing on such occasions, but there was nothing criminal about it, and had the Democracy appeared at one of their meetings five hundred strong, with arms and banners, and no one was injured thereby, one should have thought it very foolish for the Republicans to take the same steps the Democracy are now taking.—Just as much right have the Republicans of Trappe District to organize companies for self-protection and upon much better ground than the Democrats, of Easton have. For there, the Republican meeting was broken up and the speakers not allowed to speak, while here no one on the opposite side was interrupted and no one molested, nor have we heard of a single instance on the side where a Democratic meeting has received the first insult or annoyance from a Republican, while on the other hand Democratic rowdyism has constantly infested Republican gatherings. We say there is no need of this military spirit and we will venture to assert that in three months after election day, the drum and fife which now salutes the ear almost every night, will be laid aside to mould.—But even admitting that there was a prospect or a fear of armed men appearing to the polls, which would be the best course to pursue?—form military companies to enter into a civil war upon election day—the very day which the Democracy has made more noise over and tried to bring graver charges against the Republican administration as violating it by the same means than almost anything else, or let the Sheriff pursue his legal course and summons as many men as the occasion might demand? They propose to have an armed force in readiness while they have always condemned the Republicans for the least hint at military on election day, and President Grant has been denounced in unmeasured terms for preserving the peace in Philadelphia and New York, while the most flagrant outrages were being perpetrated upon Republican voters. Let every Republican come out and vote. Be not deterred, but come out early and peaceably and quietly deposit your ballot, and determine that if any troubles occur it shall be perpetrated by your opponents—the Republicans being the law-abiding party of the county.

Laboring Men.

Recollect by voting for Samuel Hamilton, the White Man's Democratic Conservative candidate, you vote to reduce the price of sugar from 12 to 6 cents, coffee from 25 to 12 cents and tobacco from 75 to 25 cents a pound.

Out of nearly a column of such stuff as put out by the Cambridge Banner and Herald, we copy the above paragraph to show what a small estimate that paper puts upon the intellect of the laboring men. It thought to know that the laboring men are fully aware that the election of Col. Hamilton would have no more to do with the reduction of the price of sugar and coffee than the breathing of a mosquito would have to do with raising a northwest storm. And besides, if it did, when sugar was put down to 6 cents and coffee to 12 cents per pound, Col. Hampton would be the chosen of ridding the laboring man's wages from $1.00 and $1.50—the present prices—to 50 and 60 cents, for when provisions are low labor must also come down. Mr. Torbert neither proposes to lower the price of sugar and coffee, nor does he wish to reduce the present price of labor. Which one of these candidates is the laboring man's friend?

DON'T LEAVE A VOTE BEHIND.

—We cannot urge too often upon Republicans throughout the county the great importance of getting out the entire Republican vote. Do not let a vote stay at home, have it voted early, and make it your business to see that your neighbors and friends vote also. Let every man be a worker on election day. If you know of a man who is indifferent about the election, keep an eye upon him, and if he does not present himself at the polls, go after him and bring him up. In this way hundreds of votes can be saved to the cause, which would otherwise be cast in favor of the Democratic party. Do your duty Republicans. Get out every vote. Don't let it be too much trouble to go a mile or two in order to secure a vote. Vote early in the morning and then devote the balance of the day in getting others to vote. Don't leave a vote behind.

Bring out every Republican vote.

☞ The Democratic party have their hopes of success at the coming election entirely upon the votes of disaffected Republicans. They know themselves to be in a hopeless minority; they have tried, and are still trying to get the colored vote, and failing in that, they know positively that it will be cast against them, thus rendering their minority doubly apparent and fatal to the Colonel's aspirations. The only hope left is to raise the cry of "negro equality," and frighten timid Republicans to vote the Democratic ticket, but their hypocrisy is too plain.

Bring out every Republican vote.

☞ A special despatch from Crisfield, Maryland, to the Baltimore American, states that the owners of the Maryland oyster vessels recently captured and delivered by the Virginia authorities have proceeded to Norfolk, to recover their property.

[COMMUNICATED.]

To the Editor of the Gazette:

It [illegible] feeling of pain that a few days ago I learned that measures were on foot for the organization of two military companies in the town of Easton. I have just heard that many persons have been searched, that the officers of the companies have been chosen, and that a deputation has gone to obtain arms for the equipment of these companies. Under any other circumstances than those which exist at this time, the mistake of our citizens would have been regarded with pleasure, or perhaps indifference, but now, just on the eve of an election, some of the attendant circumstances of which, to speak plainly, the participation in that election of the colored people, are calculated to arouse a more than usual feeling, to attempt this organization of a military force where none existed, or was thought of before, bought to mind the unfeelingly condemnation of all men who love peace, and reverence the law. His mind must be singularly perverted who cannot perceive that this step is most injudicious, if it be not actually criminal.—To my mind it is essentially and wholly bad: bad in the motives that have prompted it, bad in the methods of doing what it pretends it means to do, and bad in the prospective, though certain results which must flow from its accomplishment. What are its real motives, its methods of accomplishing its ostensible purposes, and the certain results of which I speak?

Its actual motives, though of course not its avowed ones, are either to intimidate the black men so as to prevent his coming to the polls, or if he should dare to come, to be ready to seize upon any pretext that may offer to drive him off from them. The avowed motive is the keeping of the peace, but it would be difficult to find one man in this community who believes this to be the purpose of these improvised politico-military clubs. The methods of keeping the peace are as I have said bad. The placing of arms in the hands of impassioned and angry men, who are known to be hostile to one class of the community, and especially hostile to it on the occasion of the first exercise of a great political privilege: the placing arms in the hands of men who have been brought under no discipline nor military subordination: the placing officers over them who have never shown themselves endowed with more than ordinary discretion, which is altogether needful at this time: the having these men near and around the place of voting, ready to participate in any fray that may arise, thus in spirit, if not in fact violating the law,—all this shows that these methods of keeping the peace are defective and condemnable. As to the certain results of this movement, if persisted in, we have the dreadful alternative of either having the law or elections violated, by the intimidation of, or violence to voters, with perhaps shedding of blood, or of having a detachment of Federal soldiers in our county—which I hope is threatened, so as to secure the right of the ballot to the newly made citizens.

I see one desire neither—but if I must select one, I say the law must be obeyed, blood must not be shed, though allegiance to law, and security of person have to be obtained at the dreadful cost of having Federal soldiers in our midst.

A FRIEND OF PEACE.

Easton, Oct. 31, 1870.

☞ COALLEN AND ACCOMPER.—Rev. Robert W. Todd, of Denton, has been called and has accepted the call to the pastorate of the M. E. Church at Laurel, Del., made vacant by the death of Dr. Quigley. Mr. Todd will continue his residence in this community until the end of the year, making weekly pilgrimages to Laurel in order to fill his appointment there, when he will take up his abode in that town. During his residence here Mr. Todd has made many warm friends, who will part with him only with feelings of deepest regret.—Democrat.

☞ BURGLARY.—The theatre hold by Mr. John P. McCullough as a music shop and by Talbott Sander as a shoe shop, was entered on Friday night by means of false keys and carpets and boots and shoes to the amount of $[illegible] stolen therefrom. It is high time somebody was caught at this business.—Cambridge Observer.

☞ WASHINGTON.—A despatch has been received at Tours from Arlon, Belgium, announcing that the garrison of the forts and troops of Metz have refused to agree to the terms of Bazaine's surrender, and the besieging army resumed its former position. A [illegible] despatch says the city of Metz is still accessible to the German troops, and no one is allowed to enter the city. From Berlin all these rumors are denied, and it is stated that the delay which has occured in the occupation of Metz is attributable to the preparations necessary for the reception and the transportation of the garrison. The Prussians are undoubted in possession of the city. News from Paris up to Saturday last says that the people are united and determined for defence, and that there is no lack of provisions. A number of Americans who left Paris on the 25th ultimo, and have arrived at London, report that [illegible] prevailing among the poor in Paris. The authorities at Paris objected to the Americans leaving the city. Minister Washburne informed Jules Favre that it their departure was not permitted he would cease all diplomatic relations and report the facts to the President. Favre granted the required permission. A riot had taken place in one of arrondissements, but it was quelled without serious difficulty. A large delegation waited on Gambetta on Tuesday to ask for a levy en masse, and he replied to them in one of his characteristic speeches, calculated to fight to the last. The Prussian reports of a victory in the Vosges and denied by the Prussians, who say there were none of their troops in the vicinity of the alleged battle. A small engagement occurred on Sunday at Gray, near Besancon, 220 miles south of Paris, in which the Prussians were victorious. The London Times states that the negotiations for German unity are progressing favorably, and that King William has been agreed on for Emperor of Germany.—All advices from Paris say that the utmost determination prevailed among the people, and that the defence of the city would certainly be obstinate and long—Napoleon has had a number of visitors at Wilhelmshohe during the past few days, among others the Empress and General Castelbert.

☞ The report coming to us by cable regarding the movements of the Prussian armies before the French capital be true the long deferred bombardment of Paris has begun. Civilization, which makes the cause of art and literature its own, can contemplate the destruction of Paris only with feelings of the profoundest regret and pain. The World and its centuries have helped to make Paris the Paris the grand art centre of the universe, and the prospect of to day—showing that city with its wonderous beauty architecture, its galleries of paintings, marbles and bronzes, its vast libraries a mass of ruins—is one that humanity must deplore. Still, if the Republic, in its stubern pride, of heric resolve—whenever it may be—determines that it will fall like Samson, under the temple then the World can only look upon the beautiful sky blessing as much the friends within the gates as the enemies who contained it.

General Grant's Indian Policy—A Case In Point.

As everything connected with the policy of our Government in relation to the Indians is important, and knowing that our readers feel a deep interest in the solution of the question, "How shall they be treated?" we give the following substance of a letter written by Edward Painter, the Agent at the Omaha Agency in Nebraska. He gives the particulars of a settlement of a difficulty between the Omaha and Kaw tribes, and the manner of doing so, very forcibly illustrations the Quaker policy, and proving that kindness and justice will allay hostile feelings and restore amicable relations when retaliation or injuries would have resulted in theft, fighting and bloodshed.

Some of the Kaw Indians had made a raid upon the Omahas, and decamped with eighteen ponies. On the morning after the robbery the Omahas were thrown into great excitement on account of the missing ponies, and came to the Agent to get permits to leave the reservation and go in pursuit of them. Permission was granted on condition that they would not attempt to recapture the ponies if found in possession of other Indians. An expedition of twenty-eight Omahas set out on the trail of the lost ponies. This led to the reserves of the Otoes and Missourians, through which the Kaws had gone to cache the laptre blue on the middle of the Omahas the three tribes had stolen the ponies. Acting upon this they stole an equal number of ponies and made off with them. The Omahas pursued and captured the little band of Omahas and beat them unmercifully with their stout horse whips of heavy plaited rawhide. They sent nine of them adrift, sore and bleeding, and detained the rest as prisoners. The nine captives reached their homes, but the fate of their unfortunate companions remains unknown. Anticipating what might be their fate, the voice of woe and lamentation went up from the assembled throng in one long and piteous wail. Each stricken heart sent forth its own peculiar cry of woe. For more than a mile the wild lament could be heard over the undulating prairie.

It was decided to get up a peace expedition and have the whole affair settled. A white flag was prepared, and arrangements made, but before starting the nineteen missing ones returned and reported that the Otoes were innocent, and that the Kaws were the thieves.—This led to a correspondence with the Agent of the Kaws, and it was found that they had started out on a buffalo hunt, and had taken the stolen ponies along with them. When the Indians returned from their hunt the Agent of the Omahas was notified by letter, and he took two of his principal Chiefs and the United States interpreter to go a journey of four or five hundred miles, principally by railroad to recover the ponies.—This, he says, "was an unusual proceeding, the custom being to leave the "wrong unredressed until a fighting opportunity offered to retaliate in kind." This being their principle, it is easy to see how thieving and fighting is the rule amongst them. To break up this practice of thieving, retaliation and fighting, and teach them a better way to settle their difficulties, and of quietly avoiding them, will be a glorious and elevating deed, in the grand mission of the Friends and should strengthen with them in this great work.

Let us note how the peace were received and friendship reciprocated. The delegation, entirely unarmed, arrived in the Kaw territory, and "the news of their arrival spread like wildfire." After resting awhile at Council Grove (the railroad station,) they proceeded in an open wagon on their journey, journeys of their canoe and their innocency but in the early twilight of dawn they were with them. They had proceeded but a short distance on their journey when they discovered two Indians fully armed riding furiously towards them. One of them was Wahtinaugah, a deeper fellow of the tribe, who had been at the heels of the little party and stole the Omaha ponies. They came swooping along over the prairie and in a circle around the vehicle and placed themselves in the road directly in front, in a very menacing attitude. Wahtinaugah carried a short rifle, besides other deadly weapons. His companion had a long lance for his instrument in his hand. Wahtinaugah sat upon his fleet pony, proud, erect and stately, with flashing eyes and scowling brow. The Agent and his Indians, in the meanwhile, were as calm as a summer morning on the prairie. They realized that truth and justice were mighty. The knit brow [illegible] gradually relaxed, and his towering form assumed less of its stateliness as he almost quailed before the calm dignity of truth and the right, as they shone in the countenances of the unarmed and defenceless Indians that confronted him. He sat uneasily in his saddle for a few moments, and, feeling himself powerless for evil against them, he suddenly waved his hand for them to proceed, and, wheeling around his horse, he rode rapidly away across the prairie, firing eight shots into the air as he went, some of which he had doubtless intended for a different destination before he came up with them. They now proceeded leisurely on their journey, and soon reached the headquarters of the Agency. The next morning they held their council.—The threatening warriors of the previous day were amongst them, "shaking hands and making friends." Their mission was accomplished, retaliation and violence seemed to have been forgotton, and they sat down upon the grass like a band of brothers. It was beautiful to look upon them, and to witness the signal triumph of peace over wrong. They had a pleasant time together. The Kaws invited their visitors to a feast, and much of the [illegible] relating to their various adventures. The result of the interview was, that the Kaws proposed to the Omahas to form a league of perpetual amity, and they called upon their Agent to make them a promise that if any depredations should be committed on their property by other Indians, he would take with him some of their people and demand restitution from the offending party, to which the Agent promptly agreed. Finally, when morning came they took leave of their visitors with expressions of kindness and regret, and some of them assisted in getting them started with their ponies. So they parted in peace, and the Omahas went on their way homeward rejoicing.

The above tells illustrates the peace policy of Grant's administration in regard to the Indians. It is the same as that practiced by William Penn and Quakers generally, and peace will reign in the Indian country.—Baltimore American.

National Thanksgiving.

President Grant has issued the following proclamation:

"Whereas, We should be sensible of their dependence on the Almighty publicly and collectively, to acknowledge their gratitude for His favors and mercies, and humbly to beseech for their continuance; and

Whereas, the people of the United States, during the year now about to end, have special cause to be thankful for general prosperity, abundant harvests exemption from pestilence, and foreign war and civil strife.

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, concurring in similar recommendations from Chief Magistrate of States, do hereby recommend to all citizens to meet in their respective places of worship on Tuesday, the twenty fourth day of November next, there to give thanks for the bounty of Government the year about to close, and to supplicate for its continuance.

In witness hereof I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this twenty-first day of October, in the year of our lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and of independence of the United States, the ninety fifth. (Signed)

Microscopes.—Rev. Daniel Wise, D. D., editor of the New York Sunday School Advocate, thus speaks of the celebrated Cring Microscope:

"Its simplicity, cheapness and great magnifying power struck me with surprise. Then it was astonishing to the eye to see, and was struck with wonder at the skill and power of the Creator which is displayed in its structure.—When I saw a statement in an advertisement that Cring Microscope magnified one hundred diameters, and could be bought for $[illegible], I thought it was one of the humbugs of the [illegible] but I have paid $20 for a microscope not half so good long before. To the Voters of Easton District, No. 1. Talbot County:

The undersigned having been appointed Judges of the Election for this District, in order to give all registered voters an opportunity to cast their ballots in said district have adopted the following plan and arrangement at the place of voting, viz: To have a division or partition placed in front of the place of voting, so that the whites may approach the Judges from the East door of the Court House, and the blacks from the South door, and cast their votes, retiring by the same avenue, thereby preventing any collision of the two races at the polls. Thus giving the Judges an opportunity to receive the votes alternately from either as they may be presented. This arrangement we think necessary to be made in view of the fact that there are over eleven hundred registered voters in the district, that requiring over two votes to be taken per minute during the time allowed by law for keeping the polls open, which will require the most perfect order, that all may have an opportunity to cast their votes. The Sheriff of the county, whose duty it is to preserve the peace and keep order at the places of Election, has been respectfully requested to have the above arrangements made and carried into effect as fully as practicable.
