"The following program is being brought to you by Lenny Rapp's Super-Telescopic
Mobile Microwave Tower."

If you ever hear an announcement like this one, it will be because Lenny finally made his point.

He wants people to know about the vital roles the Telephone Company plays in bringing you many of your television programs. So we agreed to tell you about one of them. His choice, of course.

Out came Lenny's baby. The Mobile Microwave Tower.

"You guys ready with the cameras?"

"Ready, Lenny."

Up it went. A full seventy-five feet of gangly paraphernalia that looked like half a high-wire act on wheels. And out of a beaming Lenny came a full hour of complex technical information that flew higher over our heads than the tower itself. What he really wants you to know, in a nutshell, is that without this portable tower, many TV programs which are broadcast from remote locations just wouldn't be possible.

"And don't forget to tell them how the tower provides emergency telephone service across the Bay when the cables are damaged. Very important."

Now you know. And you probably also know that the real purpose of this ad was to show you how important Lenny is to us. He's proud of what he does, and is well aware of the fact that nothing is more important to his fellow man than communication. That's why he's made it his life's work since 1948.

At C&P Telephone, we've had a lot of dedicated men and women working for us for a long time. We hope that tells you something about the way we are...and the way we've always been.

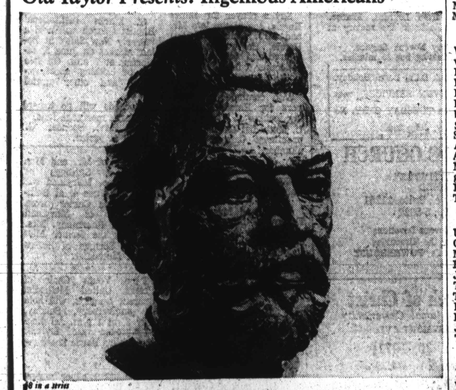
Old Taylor Presents: Ingenious Americans



Norbert Rillieux (1806-1894)

He made all our lives a little sweeter.

Norbert Rillieux began life on a plantation near New Orleans. He was a bright child and eager to learn. So his father, anxious that the boy receive a good education, sent him to Paris.

Rillieux quickly lived up to all expectations. He published several papers on the steam engine and its economy and was soon an instructor at one of the finest Paris academies.

His education and training behind him, Rillieux decided to return to the U.S. to put his talents to use.

In the early 1840's sugar was manufactured by a slow, primitive method known as the "Jamaica Train". This made it an expensive luxury that only a few could afford.

One day, Rillieux ran his fingers through a small bowl of coarse, brown sugar, and felt sure that something could be done to make it better and cheaper.

So he set to work.

By 1846 he had developed a process that turned sugar cane juice into a finer grade of sugar at about half the cost. The Rillieux Process was quickly adopted by Cuban and Mexican sugar refineries and Norbert Rillieux was soon the most famous engineer in the state of Louisiana.

Several years later Rillieux returned to France, only to find Europeans completely disinterested in his new sugar process. So, he turned to archeology and spent ten years deciphering hieroglyphics.

Eventually, Europe realized the value of the Rillieux sugar process, and adopted it in its refineries. With renewed interest, Rillieux again turned to engineering; this time applying his process to the sugar beet. Results: Sugar production costs were cut in half.

Norbert Rillieux did for sugar what Eli Whitney did for cotton. We may take his invention for granted now, but each teaspoon of sugar that goes into our cup of coffee should remind us of this ingenious American.
