Jackson third straight black MVP pick in AL

The selection of Reggie Jackson as the American League's most valuable player marked the third time in the last three years that the honor has gone to a black athlete.

It also marked the second time in those three years that the MVP choice was a member of the Oakland Athletics.

The A's Vida Blue was the 1971 winner and last year the award went to Dick Allen of the Chicago White Sox.

Jim Palmer of Baltimore, named winner last week of the American League Cy Young Award as the top pitcher, finished second in the voting and centerfielder Amos Otis of Kansas City, was third.

Other blacks given consideration in the balloting by Baseball Writers Association representatives in mayor league cities were:

Minnesota's Rod Carew (83), Kansas City's John Mayberry (76.) Milwaukee's Dave May (65) and the Orioles' Tommy Davis (47).

Also Tommy Harper, Red Sox; George Scott, Brewers; Orlando Cepeda, Red Sox; Frank Robinson, Angels; John Briggs, Brewers;

Campy Campaneris, Blue, Carlos May, Willie Horton, Bill North, Paul Blair and Dick Allen who lost most of the season to injury.

The selection of the 27-year-old Oakland right-fielder capped a spectacular comeback for Jackson, who missed the 1972 World Series after injuring his leg stealing home with the decisive run in the final playoff game, and played in this year's post-season games with a full-time bodyguard following a crackpot death threat.

"I missed the entire series last year,' Jackson said after hitting a two-run homer in the seventh game victory over the New York Mets last month. "There was nothing that was going to keep me out of this one—not even a threat on my life. I felt if I got knocked off, I'd rather it be on the field."

The last unanimous MVP selection was pitcher-Denny Mclain of the Detroit Tigers in 1968.

The others were Orlando Cepeda of St. Louis in 1967 (the only unanimous winner over in the NL), Frank Robinson of Baltimore in 1966, Mickey Mantle of the Yankee in 1956, Al Rosen of Cleveland in 1953 and Hank Greenberg of Detroit in 1935.

The awards began in 1931.

On being advised that he had been selected, Jackson admitted he was not surprised at the award but was surprised that it was unanimous—that he was named on every ballot.

"I didn't think anyone could be thit valuable," Jackson said.

Ashe finally OK'd by S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Arthur Ashe, who was twice before refused a visa to enter South Africa but welcomed this year as multiracial sports becomes a snowballing factor in this sportbound society, spearheaded the foreign entry in the south African open tennis championships which began Wednesday.

Ashe and the other top challengers for the men's and women's singles titles will, however, not be seen in action until next week.

The first four days of the vent are devoted to what is virtually a qualifying tournament with 64 men seeking eight places in the fourth round to join the more celebrated players who move direct into the fourth and fifth rounds.

Trojans final foe for Bears

Morgan football closes out its regular season schedule for 1973, tomorrow (Saturday) when the Bears host Virginia State College at Hughes Stadium.

As is the case in all games of the traditional 43-year rivalry this one figures to be hard-fought and interesting.

While the Bears will probably be favored since the game is being played on home soil, the two aggregations make for a rugged matchup on paper.

Their common records show that both whipped Delaware State and lost to North Carolina Central. However, Morgan holds a decided edge in the statistic involving games against Howard University.

The Bears knocked off the Bisons after they had run up an awe-inspiring eight-game winning streak and were looking forward to post-season bowl or classic invitations.

But the Trojans, numbered among the victims during that Howard surge, were soundly thrashed in their outing against the Bisons.

Kickoff time at 1 p.m., should find an estimated 12,000-15,000 spectators in the stands for the renewal of one of college football's more illustrious rivalries.

The contest also marks the swan-song for Earl Banks, deserting the Bear sidelines after 14 years, in which his teams compiled a 95-31-2 record . . . LACY.

IF YOU WANT TO KNOW THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE SYSTEM 360/40 AND THE SYSTEM 370/155, JUST ASK GRACE.

She knows. She knows how to work a computer, how to feed a computer, and maybe she can even tell you how to talk to a computer! Because Grace Anne Williams is a junior programmer in data systems and programming at S&H. Grace joined The Sperry and Hutchinson Company in November, 1972, after graduating from the first class of a Computer Training Center operated in New York by Opportunities Industrialization Centers of America (OIC).

S&H is a major supporter of OIC, and helped sponsor the training center. Edward A. Hynes, S&H urban affairs director, says, "S&H needs the skills OIC's program provides. Our company has hired a number of OIC trainees, so we've seen first-hand how this mutually-beneficial program works!"

Supporting OIC is just one effort S&H makes toward social responsibility. And financial support of minority programs is only the first aspect of S&H's response. Frederick A. Collins, Jr., president of S&H, says: "The second is opportunity, not lip service to the word, but a real chance for minority employees to grow in a company. The third and most important is involvement: actual participation in programs aimed at solving the problems facing minority Americans."

Helping to solve problems facing Americans — it's one of the most important ways The Sperry and Hutchinson Company grows. Just ask Grace.

S&H MEANS A LOT MORE THAN GREEN STAMPS.
