NEW PUBLICATIONS.

"FREE NEGROISM; OR, RESULTS OF EMANCIPATION IN THE NORTH AND THE WEST INDIA ISLANDS: with Statistics of the Decay of Commerce; Idleness of the Negro; his Return to Savageism, and the Effect of Emancipation upon the Farming, Working, and Mechanical Classes." New York: Van Evrie, Horton & Co.

This is the second pamphlet of a series on the negro question. The writer undertakes to show, by statistics derived from official sources, the deleterious effects of emancipation in the Northern States; in the increase of crime, pauperism and vice among the freed negroes; the deplorable condition to which the West India Islands have been reduced, and the inevitable result of free negroism upon the white laboring and producing classes. These several propositions are treated with singular calmness and judicial acuteness, and are moreover supported by such an array of facts and figures, as we have rarely seen brought together within so small a compass. In the pamphlet before us, as in the one that preceded it, the writer has certainly distinguished himself by thoroughness of research and logical precision of statements. He has embodied within a brief compass, and in a popular form, a mass of facts which are of more than ordinary value as tending to the formation of a correct opinion upon the important question which he discusses, and we therefore cordially commend these brochures to the attention of the public. The low price at which they are offered—ten cents each, or five dollars for a hundred copies—not only places them within the reach of all, but enables those who believe that their circulation may be of service at this time, to disseminate them freely at but small cost to themselves.

Letter from Calvert County.

PRINCE FREDERICK, MD., July 14, 1862.

On last Friday the death-warrant of the negro man Bill Furgerson, the slave of O. C. Harris, Esq., was received by the Sheriff of Calvert county. He was convicted at the May term of the Circuit Court, at its last session, of murder in the first degree. The day of execution named is the 5th of September next, before the hour of one o'clock, P. M. Upon the receipt of the warrant the Deputy Sheriff, Mr. Thomas J. Hutchins, immediately proceeded to the prison, and, accompanied by the Warden of the Jail, Mr. Brightwell, and another gentleman, read to the convicted party the death-warrant. The scene was quite affecting. Bill appeared to be quite penitent, and when Mr. Hutchins had finished reading the warrant he burst into tears, and his only reply was that he hoped to be prepared to meet his doom. I have frequently visited him since his confinement, and he has at all times shown a disposition to repent, and does not deny but that he is guilty of the crime for which he is to suffer death. The Rev. Mr. Start, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has been visiting him as his spiritual adviser.

The wheat harvest in Calvert is nearly closed. I have never seen a more complete failure. The farmers have not yet completed their tobacco planting. Corn is looking well, and bids fair for a good yield. JACKSON.

Small Change.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—I feel confident that I can suggest a plan by which much of the inconvenience experienced at this time for want of silver change may be obviated; and, without entering into a lengthy argument on the subject, I shall state my plan in as few words as possible. It is supposed that all retailers purchase their goods in sufficient quantities to avail themselves of the privilege of paying in legal-tender notes, and as silver is worth a premium of ten per cent, a dollar in silver is worth ten cents more than a dollar in paper; therefore, let this extra value follow the silver wherever it may be, whether in the hands of the retailer, seller or buyer. In other words: If I go to the butcher and buy fifty cents worth of meat and pay for the same in silver, he should allow me five cents in change; and vice versa, if, instead of paying in silver, I should offer a dollar note, the butcher should charge me five cents for the silver change he has to give. This system once generally adopted, and my word for it, we will hear no complaints about change in future. S. C.

THE NEWS FROM AMERICA.

From the London Times, July 3.

The present state of the campaign in America has been expected by every reasonable observer on this side the ocean. The event may prove to the Northern people that the English are not such prejudiced judges and ignorant commentators as has been asserted at Washington. Ever since the beginning of this unhappy conflict, the crowning victory which was to restore the South to the Union supremacy has always been dancing like a Will-o'-the-Wisp before the eyes of the Northerners. It has led them through a boundless waste of blood and money, it has caused them to stir up hatreds which a century perhaps will hardly appease, and it now glimmers before them as deceptively as ever, while they are sinking slowly but surely into the slough of national disorganization and bankruptcy.

When Mr. Lincoln called out his first 75,000 men, the 4th of July, 1861, was fixed for the termination of the Rebellion, which was declared to be reprobated by a majority in every State but one. The 4th of July came and went, and at no time since has the fall of the Confederacy been fixed for a later date than three months from the time of speaking; and now another 4th of July is upon us, and the South is still unbroken in strength and determination. All the power of the Federal Government has been put forth; a debt which no man accurately knows, but which all suspect to be vastly greater than admitted by the Government, has been contracted; men have been raised by the hundred thousand; Europe has been put under contribution to furnish arms and stores and all the apparatus of conquest; four main armies have advanced into the Confederate territory; half a-dozen expeditions have fastened themselves on the coast, and yet the South remains unconquered. It is demonstrated that the Federals can only effect their purpose by a campaign far more gigantic and by an expenditure far more lavish than that of the past twelve-month.

The present result of their immense exertions is that their gunboats control the great rivers of the continent, with the cities on their banks, and that their armies, besides securing Kentucky, have military possession of certain parts of Virginia and Tennessee. But it may, we think, be said with complete accuracy, that in these two States the Federals hold only the ground they stand upon. The hostility of the population in the neighborhood both of McClellan and Halleck is admitted by every soldier in the two armies. In an enemy's country, which is desolated by the Confederates themselves, the Federals find themselves brought to a standstill by the obstinacy of the Southerners, or by the heats which begin their intensity about the time of the solstice. The operations before Richmond contribute nothing remarkable to the present news.

We are told of skirmishes which evince the boldness of the Confederates, of their cutting the telegraph wires and carrying off prisoners, of the reinforcements which continually arrive, and of the menacing attitude which they consequently assume. On the other hand, it is beyond a doubt that General McClellan urgently demands fresh troops, which the Washington Government is unable to supply in numbers sufficiently large. Although the North, with the help of the Irish and Germans, has been able to raise an army truly enormous, yet these levies have been so scattered in distant expeditions, and in penetrating at so many distinct points into the great Southern territory, that the Army of the Potomac, as Gen. McClellan's force is called, is, in all probability, inferior numerically to the army which defends Richmond; while the reserves at the disposal of the Northern Government are most scanty.

The Federal Secretary of War was, according to report, about to call on the Governors of the various States for fresh troops; and this fact, taken in connection with the season of the year, and the inactivity of McClellan, seems to show that the Virginian campaign is likely now to languish until both sides have gathered fresh strength in the fall of the year. The harvests of the South are likely to be reaped in peace by the Confederates, and large supplies of food obtained for their armies as a reward for the policy which has led them, since secession, to substitute grain for cotton over a great extent of country.

From the West all the news still has something of mystery. We heard first of Beauregard's masterly retreat, his carrying off all his sick and wounded, all his munitions and stores, and his disappearance no one knew whither. Then we heard that this masterly retreat was a disorderly flight, that General Pope was in pursuit, and had captured ten thousand men and fifteen thousand stand of arms; that twenty thousand more men had deserted; so that, in fact, the Confederate army of the West was no longer in existence. It is difficult to suspect major generals and brigadiers of absolute falsification, and we have so little knowledge of the facts that we cannot criticize their statements; but it is sufficient to say that Beauregard, according to the latest accounts, still has an army of eighty thousand men at Okolona, in Mississippi, about fifty miles from the frontier of Alabama, and that the Confederate force altogether exceeds one hundred thousand men. These numbers are, of course, merely guessed at. The Confederate armies may be exaggerated or they may be understated, but it is beyond a doubt that they are strong enough to hold that part of the country against the invasion of the North. It is now reported that the Federals will form a defensive line from Memphis to Corinth, and abandon active operations during the summer months.

This state of affairs must cause deep reflection among men of every class, both in England and America. Happily, the people of this country, with the exception of an insignificant minority, have long formed their opinion of the war. They can see that if the South is to be subjugated and held by force of arms, this consummation must be preceded by the most savage and relentless contest in the history of mankind, and followed by a political condition to which even war might be considered preferable. To impress this on the minds of the Northern people has been the object of the English press from the beginning, and the unanimity of English opinion may at length produce some effect. We have been right and the North has been wrong in so many things, that our opinion is, at any rate, entitled to consideration.

We would, then, once more raise our voice against the indefinite prosecution of this horrible war. While the scorching sun is filling the camps with fever and cholera, while the youth and strength of the country are being hurried to the common frontier in preparation for a new feast of blood in the autumn, while the North is burdening itself with a debt concerning which even its rulers fear to speak plainly, and while the great staples of the South are being given to the flames, we would ask the Federals, with whom the whole matter really rests, where is their conscience, where is their common humanity, or their boasted worldly prudence? They are in arms to enforce on men of their own blood submission to a rule that the latter detest.

Although, for months after secession, the most eminent men among them, including the late President and the present Secretary of State, declared that the subjugation of one part of the Union by another was a scandal not thought of, and that separation, though deplorable, could never be opposed by arms, yet the North now talks on conquest, and confiscation, and military colonies, with all the readiness of an Austrian commandant. What becomes of the famous Declaration of Independence? What becomes of the theory that Government derives its powers from the consent of the governed, if the populations of seven or eight great States, which, rich and poor, bond and free, white and black, are proved by events to be all of one mind, are now to be invaded, conquered, and kept down by a standing army in the name of Republican freedom? These things must at last become apparent to the American people. They are not so unlike the rest of mankind, so unlike their former selves, as to dispute what is clear to the whole world;—that the South, if it wishes to go, should be allowed to depart peacefully, is the only policy which is agreeable to justice and wisdom. Unless the North can learn to see this, it must bring evils untold on itself, on us, and on every European people.

FAMILIES OF CONFEDERATES TO BE REMOVED FROM MEMPHIS.

Provost Marshal General Hillyer, of Memphis, Tenn., by command of Gen. Grant, has issued the following special order:

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF WEST TENNESSEE,
OFFICE OF THE PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL,
Memphis, July 10, 1862.

The constant communication between the so-called Confederate army and their friends and sympathizers in the city of Memphis, despite the orders heretofore issued and the efforts to enforce them, has induced the issuing of the following:

The families now residing in the city of Memphis of the following persons are required to depart south beyond our lines, within five days from the date hereof:

First—All persons holding commissions in the so-called Confederate army, or who have voluntarily enlisted in said army, or who accompany and are connected with the same.

Second—All persons holding office under or in the employ of the so-called Confederate Government.

Third—All persons holding State, county or municipal offices, who claim allegiance to said so-called Confederate Government, and who have abandoned their families and gone South.

Safe conduct will be given to the parties hereby required to leave, upon application to the Provost Marshal of Memphis.

LATEST FROM KENTUCKY.

LOUISVILLE, KY., June 17, 1862.

GEO. PEARSON, Esq.

Dear Sir—I feel it a duty to express to you my sincere acknowledgments of the benefit derived from the use of a package of your MEDICATED TAR DROPS.

I was suffering with a SEVERE COUGH and SORE THROAT, when a friend presented me with a package of your celebrated TAR DROPS, and when I used them, I was free to confess it, was more to gratify my appetite for sweetmeats than the hope of deriving any good from them: but really, the rapid allaying of the irritation and subsequent entire cure of the cough, induces me to thank you, and I take great pleasure in recommending to the public so effective a compound. Respectfully yours, J. E. SMITH, M. D., Assistant Surgeon Artillery Brigade U. S. A.

PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS are prepared and sold by GEO. PEARSON, No. 5 North Liberty street, Baltimore, at 10 cents per package. Sold also by all the principal Druggists. Je21-tf
