Low-sodium snacking

Everyone who is concerned about salt in their diets should try unsalted margarine. Pulling back off of the salt shaker will help too. Substitutes for butter and or margarine are good and available in supermarkets.

Quite a few margarines are cholesterol-free too.

Dietary restrictions for salt consumption are more common among blacks, who are twice as likely to develop high blood pressure as whites. A watchful eye for unnecessary salt used in snacking is one effective and easy way to reduce the problem.

A recent survey indicated that families, especially family members who suffer from high blood pressure, should be careful when frequenting fast food restaurants. Some prepared items are very high in sodium content.

Most of the sodium content in these preparations go unnoticed because there is no labeling requirements for fast food chains, or restaurants, for that matter of fact.

Split Pea Spread and Caponata are two nutritions and delicious spreads for fresh vegetables and pita bread. Use them as appetizers for company.

Split Pea Spread is made with protein-rich, dried peas. Lemon juice, unsalted margarine, garlic, and cumin add flavor to this smooth mixture.

Caponata is an eggplant spread with an Italian accent. In both recipes, the margarine distributes and blends the flavors together, while the spices add the zest.

LOW SODIUM SNACKING — Sodium free split pea spread and caponata are two nourishing, delicious snacks.
