Spring fashions are here

NEW YORK (UPI) — The latest group of New York designers to premiere their spring collections were oceans apart with styles that ranged from the austere floral silks of Ralph Lauren to the flamboyant petticoats of Oscar de la Renta.

Joining Lauren and de la Renta in Wednesday's round of shows was Adrienne Vittadini whose white cotton sweaters lettered with bold, black Cyrillic smacked of Jean-Paul Gaultier last fall.

Lauren, who introduced the flouncy Santa Fe look five years ago, parted company with the rest of Seventh Avenue this year and boycotted petticoats.

De la Renta made up for it with black taffeta tube dresses puffed out with yards of crinoline from the derriere to the floor. One fashion editor dubbed it "the ruffles that ate New York."

Other jarring entries were seen in the Vittadini show - long, cotton sweaters, tight minis and stretch pants done up in dizzying Pucci prints of black, violet, sky blue and aquamarine.

Lauren stuck to clean-cut classics, a refreshing change after a week of little-girl flounce.

He opened with matching double-breasted sweater jackets and full, tropical weight wool trousers in soft shades of lemon, lilac, mint and blush pink. Next came a wispy silk floral group that prompted a collective "ahhh" from the crowd, which included Lauren's wife, Ricky, in a front and center seat.

Baby blue accordion pleated skirts were teamed with pink and cream wrap-front blouses or T-tops with rolled up sleeves. Pale yellow camisoles and bandeaus splashed with roses and floaty skirts harkened to country picnics.

Lengths were ankle-grazing, another shift from the mainstream of New York designers who are hooked on minis for spring.

A final class act was a black crepe de chine dress that fell in a long sexy swoop.

"Wasn't it pretty?" asked Ricky Lauren after the show's finish. She said it was her first glimpse of the collection.

Marvin Traub, kingpin of Bloomingdale's, said the Lauren collection was "absolutely beautiful."

"This was a very disciplined Ralph doing exactly what's right," Traub added.

On the tail of Lauren's no-frills approach came the de la Renta show, with the brightest colors and biggest petticoats of the U.S. collections.

On hand for his eyepopping performance were Nancy Kissinger, Evangeline Bruce, Estee Lauder and bone-thin Annette Reed, rumored to be the widowed designer's next wife.

De la Renta's version of city dressing were short cashmere dresses and flyaway linen jackets in siren hues of magenta, peacock green and turquoise. A star in this group was an off-the-shoulder magenta swing dress.

Textured silk came out for night with short bandeau dresses embellished with 2-foot bows at the bust. His black beaded dress fit like a tube to the fanny then jutted out in a pouf of magenta silk taffeta.

Never one to leave a crowd hungry, de la Renta's spectacular finale was a group of ball gowns in hot pink, mint green and lilac embroidered with silver sequins and inflated with acres of crinoline. Priced at $5,000, they are not for every woman.

"Will Americans really wear this?" asked Marianne van Dodeward, fashion editor of The Telegraph in Amsterdam, Holland.

Air guns as gifts-parents should be safety conscious

WASHINGTON, D.C. — More people participate in the shooting sports annually, than any other sport in the United States. The phenomenal success of the U.S. Shooting Teams in recent years has interested an increasing number of youngsters in this rewarding and enjoyable sport.

In response to the growing popularity of air guns as gifts and the increased need for additional safety education, the National Rifle Association will be offering a special post-Christmas NRA Air Gun Safety Program. The 2-hour community service program will be offered, on a nationwide basis, to anyone interested in learning about basic air gun safety, handling and use.

The NRA Air Gun Safety Program is a part of the stepped up safety education efforts begun by the NRA, in conjunction with the newly formed national Task Force for Air Gun Safety. The Task Force, comprised of the NRA, The National Society to Prevent Blindness, the American Academy of Opthamalogy, and the Non-Powder Gun Products Association for the purpose of educating the American public about air gun safety and to reduce air gun related eye injuries.

The National Rifle Association strongly encourages anyone intending to introduce their youngsters to recreational shooting, to follow these safety tips on Christmas Day:

- Contact your local gun club, American Legion Post, or National Rifle Association and make arrangements for your youngster to attend a basic air gun safety handling course as soon after Christmas day as possible.
- Include a variety of safety brochures and books along with the new air gun and, together with your youngster, carefully read through the information.
- Set aside time to discuss safety and responsible air gun ownership. Clearly define the conditions under which the air gun may be handled and used.
- Refrain from buying BBs or pellets until your youngster has attended a basic air gun safety course.
- After the air gun has been unwrapped and whenever you handle it, always:
  1) Keep the muzzle pointed in a safe direction.
  2) Keep your finger off the trigger until ready to shoot.
  3) Keep the action open and air gun unloaded until ready to use.
- Always wear appropriate eye and ear protection when using an air gun.
- Youngsters handling or using air guns should always do so with adult supervision.

Training programs, brochures, books and parents' personal involvement are all effective ways of educating the junior shooter on the importance of handling his or her newest Christmas present with respect.

For further information about the NRA post-Christmas Air Gun Safety Program, contact the National Rifle Association, Education & Training Dept. S. 1600 Rhode Island Avenue, NW, Washington, D.C. or phone (202) 828-6290.
