A CAUTION.

I FOREWARN all ſhop-keepers and retailers of ardent liquors from ſelling or ſupplying my ferry-men with any quantity, directly or indirectly, or any white perſon from purchaſing or procuring ardent liquors for them, at their peril, as I will certainly proſecute any perſon who ſhall violate this notice. And I requeſt it as a very particular favour done me, and it will be a ſafe guarding attention to themſelves, that those gentlemen paſſengers who may croſs and re-croſs in my boats, that they will not give my ferrymen any ardent liquors, whereby the ſafety of gentlemen paſſengers may be endangered, or their lives riſked by the intoxication of my boatmen. The recent conduct of my two firſt and moſt experienced nautical ſkippers, (not by water, but on land) hath drawn forward this painful notice to myſelf from the abſolute neceſſity of it, and if they are n't the moſt callous and incorrigible raſcals, they muſt lament it. I feel and lament the propriety of it, and the more ſo as one of the offenders, captain Tom, was not only the great favourite of ſome diſtinguiſhed but timid characters by water, but of myſelf. My duty to the public impels this notice, and I hope that ſalutary good and ſafety which I wiſh, will be derived from it.

So offended am I at the drunken and almoſt murderous conduct and villainous behaviour of the offending ingrates, the noted and nautical ſkippers, Tom and Mord, that I would ſell my ferry, boats and hands, and if not ſold between this and next ſpring, I will advertiſe them for public ſale.
