Two Important Habits to Cultivate in Your Sons.—In perusing the columns of the American Agriculturist a few days ago, our eyes fell upon the following article, which we think worthy of re-publishing and of being carefully read by our patrons:

It is a generally observed fact that, in this country, a very large portion of the successful men are either the sons of poor parents, or orphans—or half orphans; and that comparatively few sons of rich men amount to much in any business or profession, notwithstanding the superior advantages they have of education, position, and an inherited capital to start with. The exceptions are usually, of course not always, the oldest children of those who have gradually grown up to wealth—those who received their bent while the parents were themselves too thoroughly occupied to carry their children, and too economical themselves to allow spendthrift habits in their children. Another thing we have observed is, that, other things being equal, successful men come from large rather than from small families. Three fourths or more of the rich men, and the influential men of this city to day, have risen to their present positions from very indigent circumstances in early life. Why is this so? Is it necessarily so? Must the well-to do parent feel that, after all his efforts to acquire for himself and his family the position that wealth gives, there is some compensating degree of Providence which ordains that his sons must enter upon a descending scale?

Our observation has led us to the conclusion that two of the strongest elements of success are, courageous self-reliance, and economy. The boy left a poor orphan has to fight his own battles. No rich father furnishes him a carriage to ride, and so he must walk—and he learns to go alone. With a scanty supply of pocket money, he is compelled to habits of economy that ever after cling to him. "The boy is father to the man" is a trite saying. The poor boy comes up to manhood, and instead of leaning upon some one to aid him, or of waiting for some one to come to his help, he strikes out with a feeling that, to use a vulgarism, he must "root, hog or die."—and he roots away. Look where you will, and you will find that ninety-nine out of every hundred successful men are inspired with just this self-reliant feeling. It is at the foundation of the go-ahead and get-ahead yourself spirit that animates them. The man who was helped by father when a boy, whose school expenses were paid by father instead of having to earn them himself, whose expenses in preparing for his profession, or whose capital in starting bussiness, came from some paternal bank, began life with a dependant feeling, and it is next to impossible for him to strike out into the world with the feeling that whatever I am I must make myself; whatever I get I must get for myself. The only son, petted and aided as he could not be if he were only "one of several," lacks this element of self reliance. Even in his "sums" and his other chool lessons, he is helped out by mother or sister or perhaps by father, or a subservent teacher. It is a very strong objection to private or home schools and tutors, that with few pupils, the teacher helps the children too much, and they also lack the stimulant of competition. In large families of children they have each to fight his own way along among compeers, and thus a healthful self-reliant spirit is

We have said enough to illustrate our idea. Yet every parent consider the subject well, and see what he can do to cultivate the self-reliant spirit in his children. Let the training begin in very early life. Every time we see a mother sit down to work out the boy's "sums" for him, and help him dig out his other lessons, we feel that she is by so much teaching him to lean upon others, and lessening his manly independence.—If he is overtasked to absolute despair, let the task be lessened another time, but in every case let him "paddle his own canoe." Kindly encourage him to do it, but do not do it for him. While still very young, give him full charge of some work that he must accomplish entirely without aid now others. We think it well to give every boy on a farm at least a small plot of ground, in the care and direction of which he is to be absolute sovereign, suffering its losses and enjoying its profits. In its management let him have little of your aid or even advice. He will thus both learn self-reliance, and be led to plan and studdy for himself. Though there be a score of servants in the house, the child should not harbor the idea that he can run to them for every thing wanted. In short, whatever the station, let the children have a considerable number of duties and cares that they must attend to without leaning upon any one.

With this courageous self-reliance secured, a habit of economy—not a mean or miserly parsimony—will go far to ensure a man's success. We believe every boy should have a money purse, and always have something in it. If you can only spare him three cents a month, let him learn to spend but two of them, and to keep an account of the expenditures.—It is as important for him to do this, for the habit it begets, as for the millionaire to enter a safe of a hundred thousand. A business man of our acquaintance, possessed of large wealth, to this city almost penniless, and engaged to work at a very small salary. Himself and wife took apartments which allowed them to save $200 a year. While his fellow clerks took a three shilling on a lunch, he contented himself with one costing half that sum, but quite as nourishing. The money saved by these two economist was just what he needed when a little bussiness enterprise opened to him, that laid the foundation of his present wealth. Getting rich depends not so much upon what a man receives, as upon what he saves. The sons of the rich seldom acquire these habits of economy, but commencing where their fathers leave off, they retrace his steps and they leave where he began—at the small end of the horn.

GRANT'S ADMINISTRATION.—Democratic politicians and newspapers, seeing that President Grant's administration has been so perfectly acceptable to the masses of the people and that his re-election to the Presidency is beyond a shadow of doubt, are sifting his every act, from the number of cigars he smokes per day, to his boy-hood ramblings, to blight his prospects for a second term. Were it not for his popularity this would not be the case, but would take it for granted that he would be defeated. Their choice would be made, at least in their minds, and his name emblazoned beforethe country as the coming man. But they have no man with which they can succeed over President Grant, consequently to slaughter him, is their first object, and for this purpose ever petty means is restored to. The American people have tried General Grant in the field and in the Presidential chair, and he has never been found wanting. While such men are kept in power repudiation and the payment of the Confederate debt will never be allowed to weigh down the people with double the burden of taxation they now have upon them. In reference to Grant and his administration, we give the following article from Harper's Weekly, written by one of the ablest political writers of the age:

"The President is much stronger in the popular confidence now than he was before Congress met. It is a truth which we beleive the vacation will have impressed more deeply upon the minds of Senators and Representatives, and which carefully pondered, will enable them to establish the party impregnably and to re-elect General Grant with enthusiasm." This opinion will be shared by the honest masses of the people. It is a prophecy which will meet the approval of the whole country. The allegiance of the Republican party, the lealty of the Republican leaders, is the right of President Grant. He has been true to the platform on which he was nominated and elected. He has fulfilled every pledge and responded to every just demand. He has been faithful and loyal and true, honest beyond comparison and econom cal beyond precedent. President Grant has so far done all that within him lay to give victory to the party, and if in two years it shall, by any possibility be defeated, the fault will be its own, not his.

President Grant is not only strong with the country, but he is strong with Congress, far stronger than was President Lincoln when two years of his Administration had passed, and the country had begun to speculate about the succession. The party was greatly divided under Mr. Lincoln eight years ago. Many distinguished names were canvassed, with flattering prospects of success because the country did not then know our great President was working out steadily and patiently the mighty problem which he was called upon to solve, and guiding the country safely through the sea of blood and danger which rose to overwhelm it, But when it was seen that he had not been idle—that he had been watchful and tireless in his work, and had planned and matured mighty movements fraught with the greatest results for our country's deliverance—then was our unsensational and unpretending President looked upon as the bravest leader of all our statesmen. The country saw his greatness, and the opposition to his renomination and election faded away like an April snow.

There are now, as then, restless politicians and envious editors. These are [illegible] senseless and futile hostility setting up a [illegible] renomination, and to President Grant [illegible] carping criticism have only coldness and [illegible] without for his policy and his labors, [illegible] which a reason or cause. The ordeal [illegible] we was Lincoln's is also Grant's, and we are sure that out of the storm of calumny and detraction that has been raised against him, President Grant, like President Lincoln, will come with increased strength, and that his re-election is beyond doubt assured. The wisdom of his Administration is acknowledged by the country, and the differences fomented by a disappoined few, will not prevail against the powerful hold our noble President has upon the hearts of the peole.

DARING ROBBERY.—The money drawer of Mr. L. S. Fowler, in this town, was robbed about 4 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon last of a pocket book containing about $220, and some $20 in change. It seems that a plot was deliberately made betwen two negro men, John Shields and Gus Hynson, to go on a stealing expedition, and after visiting several places they went to Mr. Fowler's store, and finding him out, Hynson took his clerk, a small boy, to the back part of the store, under the pretence of looking at some hats, while Shields committed the robbery. The money was soon missing, and Constable Greenwood sent in search of the thieves. He arrested Shields shortly afterwads, and in conducting him to the store for indentification, he insisted on taking off his overcoat on the street, which he was finally permitted to do. The coat was handed to a colored man to carry to a certain place, and in so doing the pocket book fell out. It was carried to Mr. F. who found it to contain $140 of the money. Shields was committed to jail, and aftewards sent Mr. F. $10 more of the money. Hynson also sent him $15, but has eluded all efforts at arrest. Mr. Fowler has recovered $165 of the money, and is still about $75 out.—Kent News.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it he will send a copy of the preparation used, free of charge, with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, etc. Parties wishing the prescription will please address REV. EDWARD A. WILSON, 165 South Second Street. nov 5-1m Williamsburg, N. Y.

A WONDERFUL MICROSCOPE.—Rev Daniel Wise, D. D., editor of the New York Sunday School Advocate, thus speaks of the celebrated Criag Microscope:

"Its cimplicity. cheapness and great magnifying power struck me with surprise. Then I was examining a fly's eye by its aid, and was struck with wonder at the skill and power of the Creator which is displayed in its structure—When I saw a statement in an advertisement the Criag Microscope magnified one hundred diameters, and could be bought for $250. I thought it was one of the humbugs of the hour, for I had paid $20 for a microscope not long before. But now I find it to be a really valuable instrument which I should like to see introduced into the famlies of our readers in place of the manifold, useless toys which please for an hour and is then destroyed. This microscope would both amuse and instruct them and I advise every boy and girl who wishes to know the wonders which lie in little things to save his money until he has $2.75 which will pay for the microsepe and the postage when sent by mail."

As a holiday this microsope, being ornamental, instructive, amusing and cheap, and never looses its interest,—Agents and dealers supplied on liberal termes. A E H Ross, 313 Locust St Louis, Mo.
