DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Logan Stone House rests on the side of a small knoll. It is a one story building constructed of stone. The building is peculiar in that it is split level. The lower level and upperlevel originally consisted of one room but over the years walls (interior) have been added. There are two inside end ~~fireplaces~~ chimneys one of the fireplaces that is covered over is very large similiar to the large colonial fireplaces. The stone walls are 24" thick and are laid without pattern. Originally there were two winding stairways, one from the upperfloor to the attic and one from the upperfloor to the lower level (which has been removed). Some of the original pine flooring remains in the upper level and the attic. The lower level had a small porch across the facade. Some of the woodwork has been changed but one frame of an end window is pegged. The roof has a very plain boxcornice. Several old doors are present, but probably not original

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This building is built in a style much like the more modern split level buildings of today. Its original use is obscure but local residents claim it was a slaves quarters and later was used as the home for millworkers. The home sits in the Little Elk Creek Valley and has a very bucolic atmosphere about it.
