DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This stone house was built as a double house, converted to a single family house and then altered for 4 apartments, one on each ~~floor~~ level.

A three-story house over a lighted basement four bays by none, it is oblong, facing south with the pitched roof ridgeline running east-west. Chimneys inside the end walls rise from heating fireplaces on the first and second floors.

Windows have six lights over six. A portico with peaked roof shelters the front door with lights at the side, fanlight over, replacing a simpler porch entrance for the two front doors of the original double house. There is now a separate entrance for each apartment.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This soundly-built and well-maintained house has belonged for four generations to Mrs. St Clair's relatives. Once part of the industry-owned mill-town group of worker's houses, it was a single-family house during the 1930's, and now its other three apartments help support her now that she is alone. Her tenants work in D.C.
