SATURDAY, AUGUST 4, 1917.

Dr. Boyle's "eat no cabbage" slogan will work as much of a hardship this season as "eat no watermelon."

With the same unity all over the country that New York exhibited, the problem is near solution.

Wilson is doing more than any friend to develop an effective national organization among colored people.

The end of tyranny is slavery or revolution.

COLORED MEN IN UNIFORM, NOT U. S. SOLDIERS

Recent friction between soldiers and civilians in Waco, Texas and Des Moines, Iowa, indicates that the uniform of the United States Army is no protection against discrimination.

Col. Ballou has won the regard of the Des Moines Camp by his method of handling the officers to be. Nevertheless he plainly told all of them that they must abstain from breaking the peace in their effort to break down the color line. As a result no more rookies have ventured to eat in Des Moines restaurants where they were not wanted.

Members of the 24th Infantry, stationed in Waco who tore down the jim crow signs in a restaurant, and thereby came into a clash with the police, will be tried by court martial on the charge of attempted murder.

In the issue of the Afro-American of July 8, 1916, an editorial ventured the reminder that enlistment in the army would not bring increased respect and ultimate full citizenship, but that the way lies in "fighting courageously and with good spirit to the end for social, political and civil rights."

NO HOPE FROM WHITE HOUSE

Born on the wings of the enthusiasm created by one of the most successful protest parades ever held in the country, New York colored folk sent a delegation to the White House to complain to the President and to get him to speak out against lynching. The reply of the president that he was too busy to see them was altogether expected.

Just after the riot in Illinois, delegations of Washington and Baltimore together attempted to get an audience with President Wilson and received this word from the President thru Senator France:

"I wish very much that it were possible for me to see the delegation of colored citizens of which you speak. Knowing their errand and wishing in every way possble to promote the safety and welfare of our colored fellow citizens, I am sure I should listen to their representations with entire sympathy, but, unfortunately, it is imperative for me to conserve my time as much as practicable, and I write to beg you to assure those who made this request of you that thru the Dpartment of Justice, thru the Department of Labor and thru every other channel open to me, I am doing and will do my utmost to safeguard the interests of the colored people, who are, of course as much entitled to our protection and support as any other citizens of the United States; and that you will request them in view of these assurances to excuse me for the present at any rate, from a personal interview."

In refusing to see the delegation from New York, Mr. Wilson simply carried out his oft stated policy of seeing no committees on matters already disposed of. Those who defend the action of the President are constantly recalling the fact that despite Mr. Roosevelts' recent utterances, the Ex-President took no federal action against the wave of lynching that spread over the country with appalling vigor, just after he was seated. Those same defenders whisper that because of the Trotter-affair, no colored delegation has since gotten to talk with Mr. Wilson.

However the matter may stand, it seems reasonably sure that there is no need of looking to the White House for defence against lynching. Had the New York, Washington, and Baltimore delegations acted in concert perhaps something more might have been gained in the effect made upon Congress, not upon the President.

EVERYBODY MUST WORK

Every able bodied man in the state between the ages of 18 and 50 years inclusive must work. A bill passed by the last legislature will become effective about the 20th of this month and affect every man not regularly and continuously employd.

Under the provisions of the bill, the Governor is to authorize, by proclamation, the unemployed to register at the county or city courthouse, from which place, the persons will be assigned to work for the state or for private employers. The only limitation is that the person shall be physically fit to do the work assigned to him. Failures to register will be punishable with a fine of not more than $50, and the registration will then be forced.

It was rumored at Annapolis, while the bill was under discussion that the legislation was aimed at the colored pecple in the effort to get sufficient help drafted from the cities to work on the farms and in the canneries. Governor Harrington is reported to have said, that it was hoped to get rid of the white loafers around many of the city clubs. In this connection, it is to be noted, that all persons who are supported by the income of property alone, will be expected to register, and persons engaged in seasonable occupations in Baltimore and Allegheny county are exempted.

That the work law is directed only at the unemployed can well be seen from the loophole which allows any person assigned to work to procure employment elsewhere. The law does provide, however, that if he does not do the work assigned and does not get other employment, he may suffer the penalty of $500 fine and six months in jail, either or both. The operation of this war time measure will be watched with a good deal of interest.

A PARADE OF PROTEST

The silent parade of protest that the colored people held in New York last Saturday was an innovation. It was no vainglorious flaunting of regalia or fine marching, but something that could not fail to rivet the attention of that big city that boasts of being a "melting pot" for humanity, upno the fact that ten millions inhabitants are being ojjressed in the country that has told the world it is fignting for the spread of democracy.

The fact that it w expressions from New York newspapers as being in every way dignified nd impressive should not fail to arouse many who have been least concerned to the facts that this country must not only be interested in the spread of the esuality of men in Europe, but that its PARAMOUNT DUTY is in seeing that all men here are treated according to their merits, and not discriminated against because they happen to be of African descent.

It is right that the United States should help in mitigating the evils that some people suffer in foreign countries, but President Wilson and the Democratic majority in Congress must understand that the spread of democracy in Europe is not more important than the leveling up and the treating squarely of men of every race and nationality in the United States.

Disfranchisement, lack of economic opportunity, social injustice, segregation and "Jim Crowism" are things opposed to democratic ideals. Their abolition must be insisted upon if the United States wants to have the world believe that its professions are sincere.

The parade in New York should awaken those who are not interested in the Negro because he is a Negro, but who believe that their country should live up to what it tells the world it believes in and holds as ideals. It should awaken those who believe that reason and fairplay should be the deciding things in every situation, and especially those discriminations that are burdensome to a large and loyal element of the population.

TROOPERS NEED ARMORY

The First Separate Company is now being trained for army service. This calls attention to the fact that, the state has never been too generous in providing for its support. Not willing to disband the company as other Southern States have done theirs, Maryland has permitted the First Separate Company to jog along with slight attention. It needs an armory and other equipment, and the fact that it has always made good should make Maryland see its duty along that line. Of course, the men may be needed for defense, but Governor Harrington did not think of the other thousands of colored men in Maryland whose support may have been enlisted for Home Defense. Hence, the names of no colored are on his committee.

Maryland's attitude is not unlike that of the Wilson adminstration in holding the Negro back until the moment of greatest emergency arrives That is why colored men have not been considered in the summoning of other elements of the nation to lend assistance to big work of preparing this nation for war.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

In a neghborng town the Cardoza Public Vocational School graduated 4 students in brick masonry, 5 in printing, 6 in auto repairing and operating, 1 in carpentry and 2 in plastering. The O Street Vocational School of the same town graduated 5 in plain sewing, 3 in advance dressmaking, 1 in millinery and 1 in cooking.

Of the 71 graduates of the Baltimore High School perhaps as many as 40 will go into the training School to become teachers. Fifteen state they will go to college to prepare for the professions. For the non-professional or vocational activities of life there is no training fitting them for the professions, or else stay out of school.? Why not build up a vocational school by the side of our high school?

FORUM.

To The Afro-American Pub. Co.

Dear Sir--I have been a reader of the Afro for three years and will say it is the best colored paper. I have read colored papers from all states and the Afro is king of them all. I have had the Afro follow me on all my trips. Miss Lillian Jones, 1435 Jefferson street, Baltimore, never fails to send it each week. All the boys on the shore likes it. Our motto is always rad the Afro for all the latest news.

STILL LEAVING EAST ST. LOUIS

J. O. Midnight Visits Scene of Battle in Illinois Town.

Under date of July 27th, J. O. Midnight has the following to say of conditions in East St. Louis:

'Thousands of peojple have left E. St. Louis and still they are moving away. The business men are putting forth every effort to get them to rermain, but they are gaing. It is hard to get men to work now, and the business people are suffering. They are begging for help. I do not mean to call people brutes, for they are human beings, but I would rather live in the jungles, among the wild animals than to—well think of what I was going to say and fill it out for me.

"Were there many homes burned? Yes, there were many, but it was the case of a man burning his own property, for the white men owned most of the houses burned. We were staying there paying his taxes, keeping it in repair and then give him a few dollars for a rainy day. But thank God it is shot off now. They bburned themselves out of money and then they took innocent lives. It is now a question whether or not there will be children enough left to open school next fall.

I know you want to know where these people are. Some of them have gone to other places, and thousands of them are being housed in St Louis until they decide what to do. The people are loyal to their own and many houses are open to them. In the work of caring for them the Red Cross has been doing its duty, and our people have just poured in their money to their unfortunate brothers and sisters. One of the busiest women in the country has been Mrs. Annie Malone, founder, secretary and treasurer of the Poro College. She has given her time, her money and has worked night and day. She has given the use of her automobile while she and her husband have used the street car. She has not given nickels and dimes, but dollars in the thousands and all with a smile on her face. "I am not wanting praise, but I want to dom y duty," is what she said to me when I asked concerning her part. Most of her time was spent in the station and at the ferry where the people came in.

Up to the time of this writing there are numbers of people who have been separated from their own, and cannot find them. Some, perhaps, will never be found, for they have answered the roll call on the other side. It would touch the heart of any human being to see these helpless people looking for their own. Some cases are children looking for parents, parents looking for children, husbands lokking for wiwves, etc. Such a weeping and rejoicing there is when some of them meet. People are doing all in their powr to help them. I wonder if it is best for them to leave East St. Louis. I am of the opinion that Negroes should not allow themselves to be chased away for if they do there will not perhaps be a place in America for them to live for others may follow suit and strive to run us into the ocean as many would do today if they could.

Dean Pickens of Morgan College is at Atlantic City with his family. The dean has been invited to address the National Baptist Convention which meets at Muskogee, Oklahoma, September 6th.
