Watkin's house, and Samuel Bird came there and presented an account to Mrs Watkins for which she gave her note. She handed the account to deponent to look over, and he saw charged therein a good deal of liquor. Deponent does not think that she wanted or had any use for the liquor himself.

To the eighth interrogatory, that Mrs Watkins and the defendant do not now live together. She is living at Taylorsville, where she has recently moved. Watkins continues to live at the same place.

To the ninth interrogatory that Mrs Watkins owns sixty five acres of land, being her dower interest in the lands of her first husband John Beard deceased. She has also three negroes two women and a man. She has also stock and household furniture upon the farm where she formerly resided, and where Watkins now lives. Mrs Watkins has no other means of support except the property above described. The farm has depreciated since Watkin's marriage and is lessening in value under his management. According to his mode of managing, a support for the family is not made off the property. During the last year there was corn enough secured to serve them, but deponent does not know what became of it. They had to buy corn, and did not raise provender enough for the stock. But if managed properly, the property is sufficient to give them a support.

Whereupon the counsel for the defendant exhibited his cross interrogatories to be put to said witness, which are hereunto returned, and the said witness being examined, thereon deposes and says,

To the first cross interrogatory, that he was opposed to the marriage of his step-mother with the defendant.

To the second cross-interrogatory, that deponent does not consider that he has had any difficulty with Watkins. One night in the year eighteen hundred and fifty two when deponent lived at his home, Watkins came home, in a state of intoxication, and told him that he Watkins would have satisfaction. He did not know what kind of satisfaction he meant. He followed him to his bed room, but deponent did not get angry. A few days afterwards he apologized to deponent. That is the only occasion in witness's recollection of any difficulty or quarrel between them. Since that time, they have been on speaking terms and friendly.

To the third cross-interrogatory, that he cannot say what is Watkins age. He is over thirty one years, and Mrs Watkins is above forty years of age.

To the ~~the~~ fourth cross interrogatory, that deponent worked the farm with the defendant Watkins in the year eighteen hundred and forty nine. No other crop but corn was made that year. He thinks about three hundred barels were made. Deponent and Watkins did not take possession of the property until the spring and no wheat was sown in the preceding fall.

To the fifth cross interrogatory, that at the time Watkins family was present, deponent's sister Mrs Black, and Mrs Watkins, Daniel Davis and Benjamin Hanwood.

To the sixth cross interrogatory, that deponent and Watkins agreed to divide equally and cannot say what he received.

Mary A. Black a witness of lawful age produced on the part of the complainant being duly sworn was examined to the complainant's interrogatories filed and hereunto returned as aforesaid, depose
