The PANHARMONICAN, a new instrument, lately invented at Naples, excites general interest in Italy. It unites all wind instruments in itself, and performs the most difficult symphonies with an astonishing precision and purity. If report speaks true, it is expected that it will supercede the attendance of musicians playing on wind instruments in theatrical orchestras. [London paper.

We are authorised to state, that the paragraph which appeared in our paper of yesterday, respecting the failure of WM LEES of Liverpool, is not entirely correct. From information received by a friend of ours, it is supposed he will in a short time pay all demands against him.
