The Best Man.

Once upon a time in Sweden the best man at a wedding occupied a position that was useful as well as ornamental. In olden days the Swedish bridegroom found it desirable, in fact, to have several "best men" to defend him from the assaults of rivals and prevent them from carrying away his bride. The Scandinavian warrior of ancient times was far too lofty in his ideas to condescend to plead for a maiden's hand. So he patiently waited until some other man who was more gallant had obtained the fair one's consent. Then when all the details had been nicely arranged the proud warrior, with a body of well trained retainers, dashed down on the wedding party and, if strong enough, carried away the bride. The "best men" said it was very essential that they should be the best men in those days, therefore became necessary fixtures to marriage ceremonies, and they were so well esteemed and their popularity became so permanent that when the reason for their existence was in course of time removed they were still retained.—Pearson's Weekly.

Brief Military Messages.

Lord Howard of Effingham, when the Spanish armada was put to flight made one world the message of his victory to Queen Elizabeth—"Cantharis, the Spanish fly." A concetto which Queen Elizabeth tells us, "did much tickle her majestie and her courtiers."

The Austrian Emperor, marshal of Austria, was a man of equally few words. In the proud words, after his victory, "Soldiers of Austria! the dunes in Holland have witnessed his triumph."
