The Baltimore AFRO's Platform

1. Fair employment practice (FEP) laws and enforcement power. Begin with city, county, state and federal governments.
2. 100,000 registered voters in Baltimore City.
3. A judge on the Supreme Bench and in the Federal District Court.
4. Integration in the state's reform schools and penal institutions.
5. Public hotels and restaurants open to all well-behaved citizens.

D'Alesandro's chance

Mayor D'Alesandro has announced his candidacy for the United States Senate.

In the primary his opponents will be George P. Mahoney, who has considerable strength in the city; James R. Bruce, who has won the county support of former Senator Millard Tydings; and Dr. Clarence Long of Johns Hopkins University.

He will need every vote to win.

Under the mayor's administration several noteworthy appointments have been made to administrative boards and a fair employment ordinance has been enacted.

Pending now is an ordinance forbidding discrimination in hotels and eating places.

Any man who is elected to the Senate with our support should be expected to vote 100 per cent for civil rights legislation.

Senator Glenn Beall, the Republican incumbent, who is seeking re-election, during the past six years has made a perfect record of voting right on issues of paramount interest to us.

If the mayor wants to meet Senator Beall on even terms, he now has an excellent opportunity to do so.

Speaking here Sunday, Thurgood Marshall, the NAACP's chief counsel, stated the issue bluntly.

The mayor, he said, should be informed that our support in his race for the Senate depends not on what he promises in the future, but on what he does now with the pending fair treatment legislation.

We whole-heartedly agree.

If the mayor and his supporters are for it, the bill can be enacted at the next sitting of the City Council.

He has repeatedly demonstrated that he has the votes and that the Council follows his leadership.

McKeldin is right

Governor McKeldin, exercising his executive authority, early this week commuted to life imprisonment the sentence of Alvin Braxton, slated to die Friday for the slaying of a policeman.

Had the governor not intervened, young Braxton, who turned 21 while on death row, would have been the second Marylander to be executed in the State's new lethal gas chamber.

The chief Executive based his commutation on Braxton's:

1. Youth (Despite the physical stature of manhood, Braxton does not yet have to shave and is likewise still a child in his mental and emotional makeup.)

2. Family background (the tragic product of a broken home and an unsupervised youth under circumstances of extreme poverty.)

3. Psychological tests (showing Braxton to be a sociopath with much instability and features of depression and schizophrenia.)

While these factors had no significance in determining Braxton's guilt or innocence, the governor said he felt they were important in fixing punishment.

Worth noting here is the fact that since taking office Governor McKeldin has commuted the death sentences of 13 persons, while refusing to take such action in four cases.

In his six-page statement on the Braxton case, the chief executive called for the creation of a "specially constituted group of outstanding citizens" with authority to study and make recommendations in capital cases.

We feel that this recommendation has merit.

We also agree with Governor McKeldin that in sparing the life of young Braxton, the ends of justice and the protection of an enlightened society were met.

As we have pointed out here repeatedly, the killing of Patrolman John Phelan for which Braxton was convicted, was clearly a case of police negligence.

Had the Governor wished, he might well have based his commutation order on the fact that police officers arresting Braxton did themselves court tragedy by their failure to use handcuffs in arresting a disturbed prisoner (Braxton).

Police Commissioner Hepbron himself took cognizance of this failure immediately after the death of Officer Phelan when he issued a general order requiring police officers to use their standard equipment.

So all in all, the unfortunate Phelan killing and the trial and conviction of Braxton, (who admittedly did not have adequate legal and psychiatric help,) have been a blot on our entire community.

Governor McKeldin acted wisely in setting aside this death penalty.

What became of them?

An important survey by Morgan State College tells what happened to 989 students in the upper half of the June 1956 graduating class.

The figures cover 28 Maryland Public High Schools.

Thirty-one per cent are attending colleges in Maryland, five per cent are in colleges outside the state, 8 per cent are in business, nursing and other non-college institutions.

Nine per cent are the armed services, which is a surprising figure.

Still more important is the fact that 13 per cent are not in college for financial reasons.

As expected, a considerable number, 24 per cent, is married and or at work.

The results of this survey were published in the AFRO magazine this week.

It is to be expected that 156 of these graduates should go to Morgan.

But it may be tragic that 134 families have not the means to give a college education to their children who want it and could profit by it.

Some of these students will be benefited if the state grants Morgan's request this year for the $50,000 appropriation which heretofore went to the discontinued out-of-state scholarship fund.

And while we are about it, we can ask what has become of the 989 students who graduated in the lower half of the June 1956 graduating classes in 28 public high schools?

We could hope for development of survey facilities in the public schools themselves to make a report on them.

Nobody should write them off. What becomes of them is important too.

Seal Sale drive

Dear AFRO:

On behalf of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association, the Seal Sale Committee and the tuberculosis victims of Maryland, I want to thank you for the excellent coverage the Baltimore AFRO - AMERICAN Newspapers gave to the last Christmas Seal Sale.

Our scrapbook is growing fat with clippings from the AFRO-AMERICAN and we are indeed grateful to you.

As yet, final figures on the Christmas Seal Sale are not available but we are optimistic. Your dependable support and interest in our fight against tuberculosis is always encouraging. We hope to accomplish a great deal next year in eradicating this menace to the health of all of us.

Thank you again for the story about Mrs. Reed, the editorial and all the other items you published.

Government contracts

Dear AFRO:

The Government Contract Committee can request cancellation of a contract with an employer who refuses to end discriminatory practices. Is not the GI Bill a governmental contract, to schools and colleges, or is the so-called exception rule applied to cases of this nature?

The purpose and aim of such a committee is blasphemy to be so evident in self-contradiction.

WILLARD CARROLL

Tawes' beliefs

There were many good speeches at the 95th Emancipation Proclamation celebration sponsored by Prince Hall Masons at Bethel AME Church.

One of them was made by state Comptroller J. Millard Tawes.

He said:

1. I believe in supporting adequately and maintaining the integrity of Morgan State College.

2. I will call all citizens into the service of the state on an equal basis.

3. Maryland is one of the states which has solved and is solving its school problems in a lawful and orderly manner. Let's keep it that way.

Mr. Tawes is one of the candidates for governor on the Democratic ticket.

This statement of his beliefs is important and worthy of serious consideration.

Speaking of daylight

On January 1 the day's length was 9 hours and 58 minutes. On last Dec. 21, the shortest day of the year, it was 8 hours and 54 minutes.

Every day from now until June 21, we will get an extra minute and 36 seconds of daylight.

By March 21, we'll have 12 hours of daylight and 12 hours and six minutes of daylight.

With short days like those in January, most of us have to get up while it's still dark and return home from work after the sun has long since gone down.

Nature has otherwise been very accommodating. It has made the longer nights the cold nights so we can get more restful sleep.

Further, it has provided an "out" for all those unhappy about the length of the day or the frigidity of the climate.

If you dislike Baltimore weather, you can always go to the West Indies on the Equator where the thermometer never changes and the length of the days remains constant.

Sunday light bulb sales

Baltimore's "blue law" making it illegal for drug stores to sell electric light bulbs on Sunday went the way of old used bulbs when a Criminal Court judge recently acquitted a druggist of violating the ordinance.

The most enlightened evidence in the case was the results of a survey of other drugstores on the question of light bulb sales on Sundays. Over 93 per cent of the druggists answering the questionnaire said they did sell bulbs on Sundays.

In the light of this revealing evidence, Chief Judge Emory Niles held that electric bulbs were items "customarily sold in drugstores" on Sundays, as provided by the ordinance.

For the lowly consumer this legal opinion means that if the bulb blows out on Sundays the druggist does not have to replace the light with an under-the-counter transaction.

THE AFRO'S CREDO

A newspaper succeeds because its management believes in itself, in God and in the present generation. It must always ask itself—

Whether it has kept the faith with the common people.

Whether it has, no other goal except to see that their liberties are preserved and their future assured.

Whether it is trying to get rid of slums to provide jobs for everybody.

Whether it stays out of politics except to expose corruption and condemn injustice, race prejudice or compromise.

—JOHN MURPHY, SR. 1922

Sightseeing

By JAMES D. WILLIAMS

Fellow walked into the office of the clerk of the Circuit Court this week with a rather odd request.

He was one of us but he wanted to be one of them and therefore he wanted the clerk to authorize the change in race on the necessary papers.

The gentleman didn't even make it halfway to first base, instead a friendly onlooker advised him to see a head shrinker when called a psychiatrist, to get rid of his complex.

REPORTING a rather horrible experience this week was Mrs. Maxine Van Landingham, 3481 Fairson Ct., Fairfield.

There she was on Tuesday night sitting before her TV set watching "Cheyenne" when, all of a sudden, boom, up blew the set, or should that be out blew the set.

Well regardless of whether it blew up or out, it blew thereby sending parts of what some people regard as the greatest invention since talking pictures sailing about the room.

Luckily, Mrs. Van Landingham and her children were not hurt.

Her remark about the occurrence is a classic of understatement.

"It frightened me."

Naturally there just couldn't be any connection between the program she was watching, which was a western, and the fact that the set blew up, or was it out.

But then again there could be. Maybe one of the bullets went wild. Getting so you can't even watch a good shoot-em-up in safety.

YOU'VE GOT to hand it to Dr. Clarence Long who is seeking the Democratic nomination as a candidate for the U.S. Senate.

After a visit to the office this week, during which he shook everybody's hand and advised one and all to "keep the country strong, vote for Long," copies of his campaign card were found all over the office.

Not one to let grass grow under his feet, Dr. Long is running strong, though the primary is not until May.

PROVING THAT everyone has to eat. You meet just about everyone in a super market.

Imagine in the space of less than 15 minutes meeting such shoppers as Sgt. Dennis Mello, the Rev. Edward Carroll, James Lewis of the Housing Authority, and glamorous Shirley Kyle complete with slacks and fur coat.

WITH THE city easting about for new methods to raise money, such as the advertising tax, it has overlooked several possible sources of heavy revenue.

First of all it could impose a tax on air. The rate would be determined by how much each taxpayer weighs.

The more you weighed the more you would pay since it is obvious that big people use more air than little people.

Then the city could impose a sidewalk tax which would be based on how much walking you did on the city owned pavements.

The city could station an employee at every street corner and when you passed your record would be made. Then they could put all the information together and send you a bill.

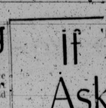
Third, they could set up a "going away tax" which would be payable every time you left the city.

The theory would be that every time you left Baltimore you would be spending money some place else, so the city should get something out of you.

If the boys down town really wanted to, they could find a number of new taxes.

If You Ask Me

By B. M. PHILLIPS



People, places and things...

Lyric Theatre seats 2,610 persons—All seats were occupied for the Marian Anderson concert there on Monday evening.

The box office sold 100 standing room only tickets.

Miss Anderson's concert gown was a floor-length ecru lace decorated with pearls. It had the suggestion of a train in the back.

Cost: of gown $2,000. It was made especially for her by a New York fashion designer.

Longtime Lyric employee who attends boxes in section J where Mr. and Mrs. Robert Watts were seated; and in section H, where Dr. and Mrs. Clifton Perkins (he's state mental hygiene commissioner) were seated, is Mrs. Mamie Beale, who says she has been at the Lyric for 35 years.

In the same box with the Perkinses Mrs. William Washington and her sister, Miss Joan Williams, a Coppin student.

Adjoining them, Mr. William B. Dixons (Erma) and a party shared the next box.

Other concert-goers spied: The Rev. and Mrs. Edward Carroll and daughter; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Perkins, Meredith Birche and his sister, Estellena Showes; Rev. and Mrs. Reginald Daniels, Mrs. Edgar Love, Mrs. Lillian Parrott, Mrs. Ethel Dyer, Mrs. Lillian Watty, and Mrs. Louise Dennis.

Caught sight of Peanody student Veronica Tyler hurrying to her seat just as the second portion was beginning; and Gerald Burks Wilson, Mrs. I. B. Higgins, the Hubert Soellmans, Mrs. C. R. Campbell and Mrs. Opie Mallory, accompanied by her, two lovely teen age children, both of whom are nearly as tall and as attractive as she.

The concert proper was not up to the Marian Anderson records, but it was truly a joy to hear her sing.

To see her close her eyes tightly as she sang the German lullabies, clasp her hands (with the rings sparkling) as she sang the Verdi aria and then spread her arms for the encore number. He's just the Whole World In His Hands, was a sight to behold.

New citizen due: The Charles P. Howards (he's the lawyer and she is the Howard U. nurse) expect a baby, their first, next May. They don't care whether it's a boy or girl, just so long as it's healthy.

Vernon E. Barbour, 41, who was buried on Tuesday, was known to many associates as "Eggie."

He was one of the town's best known sports figures having played with several softball and basketball clubs including the Mt. Vernons, Royals, Northwest Stars, Belmonts, Crown Cork and Seal, Barracuda, Parks Sausage and Comedy Club.

Youngsters liked him because he shared his vast knowledge with them at the Easterwood and School No. 122 playgrounds.

The Bureau of Recreation in a resolution read at his funeral praised Mr. Barbour for "his great competitive spirit, his intense belief that sports could help to make a better world and his great loyalty and devotion to his ideal."

He was associated with the recreation program for over 20 years beginning in the days when it was known as the Playground Athletic League.

The resolution was signed by Theodore E. Brown, C. C. Jackson Jr., Harold J. Jennifer Jr. and Clementa Nixon.

George M. Cox, who was buried Monday at Tethel AME Church, was well-known as the barber who ran the second chair in the Ball Barber Shop at 2031 W. North Ave. He was just 56.

He was fatally injured last Wednesday when an oil truck ran into his auto at North Ave. near Braddish.

His wife, Harriet and three small children survive. Your cards of condolence will reach the family at 619 N. Rosedale St.

About this and that...

Met this week: Friendly James J. Kelley, new chief of the Baltimore Bureau of the FBI who succeeded D. K. Brown, former agent in charge last September.

Mr. Kelly hails from New York and has four daughters (9 to 15). He confided that his wife and the youngsters just love Baltimore.

The city's new FBI chief looks much like a Catholic priest and when I first spied him I thought he was.

He is tall, has reddish brown hair and an engaging smile.

When he was in our neighborhood, we asked him to visit our plant. I was impressed that in every section where he visited, he was able to remember the name of the employees with whom he talked and call them by their names.

Boy, we need more law enforcement agents in our town like James J. Kelley.

Donald Bewington and a class from Cromwell School No. 70 performed on Channel 13's visit to schools Wednesday a.m.

They illustrated Manners For Moppets. Mrs. Evelyn West, faculty member, played the role of mother in the skit. The pupils showed how to display good manners—letter writing, greeting friends at parties etc.

They did a creditable job although in some spots several exhibited a bit of nervousness.

Note in the mail from Sister Constance, S.S.J.D. (she's the former Constance Murphy, one-time Baltimore teacher) reports that temperatures at St. John's Convent in Ontario, Canada is 7 degrees below zero.

Brrr.

But it is in sharp contrast to the barren Easterwood Park directly across the street.

The Park Board promised last summer that it would plant shrubbery to improve Easterwood this fall, but now the word is that such improvements can not be made until the budget is approved.

Over Carey High Near the Pulaski and Smallwood Sts. sides, bleacher seats are near completion. They overlook the spacious athletic field.

Orchids to the city schools for making these needed improvements.

Now all that remains to make the entire area pretty is for the Park Board to fix up Easterwood. C'mon! And, speaking of school improvements, the School Board at its meeting this week, gave permission for Douglass High to accept from its PTA, appropriate shrubs and other plantings for the school grounds to cost about $2,000. While this is commendable, what I don't understand is why the city doesn't make these improvements!

More people and things...

Announcement in the mail this week from Philly Jells of the approaching marriage of Miss Jean Lenscombe to Dr. Russell F. Martin.

It is set for Feb. 8 at 11 a.m. at St. Gregory's Church. The bride is the daughter of John Precope, former superintendent of Provident Hospital here and Baltimore; and Mrs. Ralph Spencer Dinkins.

Mr. Precope now heads Methodist Hospital in Philadelphia.

Several AFRO staffers are a year older this week. President Earl Murphy is 40 today (Jan. 17).

Freddie Howard, composing room supervisor, age on Jan. 15. Ditto Assistant Managing Ed James D. Williams.

AFRO Photog I. Henry Phillips, blew his candles out on Jan. 16 and Francis Charity, printer, gets his birthday cake on Jan. 20.

January 20th birthday greeting also to Mrs. William K. Clarke, 530 Sanford Place. January 17th hellos to Mrs. Maria Murphy, and Mrs. Alice Murphy, January 18th hellos to Mrs. Mary Phillips.

Send birthday cards January 21st to Mrs. Marian Ransome, 2304 Madison Ave.

A year ago this week Mrs. Grace McCard Jones, beloved civic and club leader, died at the age of 80 on January 19, 1957.

Also a year ago this week Richard (Ricky) Larry Hunt, was found guilty of first degree murder in the death of his wife, Helen. He is still confined to New Brunswick, N.J. pen awaiting appeal of his conviction.

Coming up: The Business and Professional Women's annual Grand Jubilee party Friday, Jan. 24 at the Madison Ave. YWCA, not Saturday as incorrectly reported last week.

By the way, the B. and P. women sent out a handy calendar listing phone numbers of city bureaus, hospitals and other agencies you and you and might need from time to time. A much-valued gift.

The Rt. Rev. Monsignor David I. Dorsch, director of Associated Catholic Charities, Inc., will be the speaker at the 11th annual mass and breakfast at the Central Sunday at 9 a.m. Breakfast follows at the Stafford.

Businessman of week: At 1301 Presstman St., is the Earl Earl Brown car-wash business. Here you can get your car washed in less than 15 minutes and they do a thorough job—as good as any place in town.

Man wheel in the shop is Lee Brown (no relation to the proprietor), a serious-faced youth who takes his job as Serious as he looks.

Drop by and see for yourself what a good job you can get done here.

Prayers of the week...

These prayers are taken from a booklet entitled "Prayers for all occasions," published by the Forward Movement, Cincinnati 2, Ohio.

For forgiveness: LORD, I have done evil before you and ask for your forgiveness. Forgive me, and grant me the humility and the courage to be able to admit my fault and seek reconciliation; as our Master taught us to do. I ask this in His name.

For Grace in Speech—HELP me, O Lord, to keep guard over my lips. Save me from words that hurt; from gossip and slander and lies.

Let me speak only to encourage and cheer and to keep people on their feet, so that all my words may minister grace to Thy honor and glory.

For Peace of Mind: LORD, thou knowest my cares and my fears. Help me to turn them all over to Thee, who hast promised to give rest to our souls.

Grant to me now a restful spirit and a peaceful mind, and forth to finding new green
