Wives' dance sets pace for purposeful parties

At Overlea Hall, on Belair Rd., Friday evening, We Wives gathered their husbands and a flock of flossy guests for one of the most colorful parties of the season.

'Twas their Valentine affair and in keeping with the day, the hall walls were hung with huge artistically executed valentines, which were echoed in table decorations.

'Twas also their time for doing a selected duty...garnering funds for NAACP.

• • •

THE HOSTING couples presided at well-stocked tables, at which guests supped and snacked between dances. Came early morning, a caterer provided ham and eggs and hot rolls.

Music for dancing was by the Hi-Tones, with Bob Kelly providing the vocals.

THERE WERE enough smart gowns about to float a show. While Mrs. Warren Weaver turned in a swirling red lace, in keeping with the motif, more than dressed in greens to their liking.

Mrs. Charles Hicks, who came down from Frederick, Md. for the party, wore a frock of the green satin, an open shaped neckline, a fitted bodice and a belled skirt enhanced with small bows.

Mrs. Edward Slater was also in green, her frock featuring a slim skirt with a pouf beginning about seven inches above the hem. Mrs. James Murphy diffuded the green theme.

Mrs. William Dixon, celebrating a birthday that day, got an extra toast at the table presided over by Mr. and Mrs. Medford Reynolds.

MRS. LEONARD REID set a pace for hostesses, in pale beige from shoulder to sole. And three of the prettiest black frocks were worn by Mesdames Alan Forte, a guest; and Frank Phillips and Lawrence Mapp.

Also mighty sleek in black, a short formal with harem skirt, and long white crushed gloves was Mrs. Maxwell Chatmas, as was Mrs. Jerome Todd, whose slim fitting frock was sequined at the top. Mrs. Iglehart Keets turned to the pastels...a confection of blue tulle.

A visit with a lawyer and bride, he's Jacques Leeds, she's Ethel Ennis

By SHELIA SHIELDS

How would you like to visit the home of two three dimensional personalities.

A reporter did just that this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacques Leeds.

As a rising young entertainer, Mr. Leeds is known as Ethel Ennis.

It is at home, away from the glitter of the spotlight that her three dimensions appear.

At home she is an "ordinary" housewife (as her husband puts it), a talented singer (which he "still can't get over"), and a sweetheart (and he is determined to keep it that way).

• • •

AS A RISING young attorney, Mr. Leeds cuts an impressive figure in the courtroom.

Like his wife, when he is away from the demands of his profession, this dimensions also emerge.

First he is protector. When I get home from work he brings the hot water bottle for my feet — they are usually like ice," says the Mrs.):

Then he is her greatest fan ("I just like to hear her sing — it continually amazes me that she can do so much," says hubby):

Finally he is her sweetheart (and she intends to keep it that way).

• • •

THE LEEDSES married for three months, are at home at 731 Bartlett Ave., in an apartment they share with Jack's (all his friends call him Jack) cousin.

They are waiting anxiously for their own little lovanest in the new Hanlon Apartments.— Not that they don't enjoy staying with the obliging, hospitable cousin, but as you know, all newlyweds should live alone.

An effervescent couple, the Leedses sat at opposite sides of the small, cozy room on a cold, snowy day.

"I haven't been to work for nine days," said hubby.

"We've just stayed around home lazying it up — listening to music . . ."

"Cooking and eating!" interrupted his wife.

• • •

SEEKING to settle into serviousness, Mrs. Leeds tried hard to think what she liket most about her husband.

"Oh," she said clasping her hands to her face. "There are so many things I like about him I just couldn't began to place one over the other."

The thing that she likes most in people is the quality she finds prevalent in her spouse: Sincerity.

"The thing that impressed me most," says Mrs. Leeds, "is that he would come to the club to watch me all the time — he even made the matinees and he isn't a club goer ordinarily."

Telling what she liked least about her hubby, Mrs. Leeds said:

"If he is supposed to meet me someplace he is never on time."

• • •

"OH, JUST say I'm jealous," interjected Jack good natuedly.

On the serious side, he explained:

"Well, I think I've come a long way since we've been married, though I realize that she is a public figure."

• • •

MRS. LEEDS is a native Baltimorean who made good with her soft, sophisticated voice that sort of touches the listener with a feeling of the cozy atmosphere and of warm friend by fingers lingering on your shoulder.

Throughout the visit, Ethel and Jack giggled at each other and with each other they and the subject of babies came up, both became very serious.

"Well, you know," says Ethel, "we've talked about it and decided that it would be best not to have any children for at least three years."

Serious too, hubby Jack agreed, adding:

"Yes. See, it wouldn't be quite fair to her or the child to have Ethel on the road — that would happen if we had any children now."

Ethel said her recording company is considering the possibility of sending her on tour.

• • •

LIKE ALL other happy couples the Leedses enjoy doing things together.

"We play scrabble a lot by ourselves. She's a better speller than I am, through," admitted husband Jack.

She also helps me with her shorthand. If she needed a job, I would hire her anyday — Of course, I couldn't afford to pay her . . ," he added.

Mrs. Leeds is a graduate of Cortez Peters and just to show off how good his wife is, hubby brought out a loving cup on which was engraved, "Alumni Shorthand Award, 1954."

For her own entertainment, Mrs. Leeds says "I love to draw. — I'm even going in for a little painting."

Quizically, her spouse looked at her.

"Yeah, she only draws ballerinas, though. She's a frustrated ballerina."

She had to admit this was so when he produced an unfinished painting from behind a chest. Sure enough, a ballerina it was.

• • •

JACK SEEMS really flipped over his new bride.

"You know," he says, "people get preconceived ideas about people who do certain things . . . Ethel is a paradox.

When you see her at work she looks the part but at home she is just an ordinary girl. I was really carried away with her singing — I had no idea she would be so sweet.

"I don't think we would have gotten married if she had had that 'entertainer - type' personality . . ."

He explained, "You usually think of entertainers as people who sit around all the time polishing fingernails . . ."

He added, in something akin to amazement:

"She's such a good little housewife."

• • •

THE LEEDSES at home seem to fizz in each other's presence.

"You know, Jack is a big joker," says Mrs. Leeds, but she loves it.

THE BRIDE has a new LP album that has just been released by Capitol Records.

Entitled, "Change of Scenery." In it, Mrs. Leeds sings "My Foolish Heart," "I Still Get a Thrill," "I Remember the (Cornfields of Home)," "The Song is Ended."

"Everytime We Say Goodbye," "Happiness is a Thing Called Joe," "Taking a Chance on Love," and "Thrill Me."

On "I Still Get Thrill" right through the listener with her cotton-candy sort of voice.

This is her first recording on a really big label and already she has attracted lavish praise. The company thinks so highly of its new songbird that they have issued all the songs on the LP in 45 extended play records for the juke boxes.

• • •

MRS. LEEDS began her musical career at the age of seven.

She took piano lessons but she has nbt had a formal singing lesson or any voice coaching in her life.

"I didn't start singing professionally until I was 15-years-old," she says modestly.

"That was mostly in private —like school dances. I didn't start in night clubs until I was 17.

"That's when I was given the opportunity of going on the Paul Whiteman Show in Philadelphia."

• • •

IN 1950, Mrs. Leeds wrote a tune called "Little Boy" that was first recorded by "Little Sylvia," now part of the Mickey and Sylvia duo.

After that, it was sung by Martha Tilton, Evelyn Knight, and Carrine Rich.

Ethel's musical talent probably stems from the fact that she has grown up with it all around her.

Her mother, Mrs. Arrabelle Ennis, as an organist at Ames Methodist church.

Ethel ujed to substitute for her and she (Ethel) was also the Sunday School pianist at Ames.

Her brother, Andrew, is a saxaphonist.

• • •

THINGS started looking up for Ethel when she opened an engagement three years ago at the Red Fox, Fulton and Pennsylvania Ave.

There she attracted the attention of owner George Fox, who helped develop her into the star

The Madison Avenue YWCA was the scene of the third annual Friendship Ball given by the five-to-eight-age group of Tots and Teens, Saturday afternoon.

Each of the members wore a tiny red felt heart with name imprinted for identification.
