HARRIET HOSMER'S NARRATIVE OF A SINGULAR OCCURRENCE

Lydia Maria Child's article on "Spirits," in the May number of the Atlantic Monthly, contains the following interesting passage.

When Harriet Hosmer, the sculptor, visited her native country a few years ago I had an interview with her, during which our conversation happened to turn upon dreams and visions.

"I have some experience in that way," said she. "Let me tell you a singular circumstance that happened to me in Rome. An Italian girl named Rosa was in my employ for a long time, but was finally obliged to return to her mother, on account of confirmed ill-health. We were mutually sorry to part, for we liked each other. When I took my customary exercise on horseback I frequently called to see her. On one of these occasions I found her brighter than I had seen her for some time past. I had long relinquished hopes of her recovery, but there was nothing in her appearance that gave me the impression of immediate danger. I left her with the expectation of calling to see her again many times. During the remainder of the day I was busy in my studio, and I do not recollect that Rosa was in my thoughts after I parted from her. I retired to rest in good health and in a quiet frame of mind. But I woke from a sound sleep with an oppressive feeling that some one was in the room. I wondered at the sensation, for it was entirely new to me; but in vain I tried to dispel it. I peered beyond the curtain of my bed, but could distinguish no objects in the darkness. Trying to gather up my thoughts, I soon reflected that the door was locked, and that I had put the key under my bolster. I felt for it, and found it where I had placed it. I said to myself that I had probably had some ugly dream, and had waked with a vague impression of it still on my mind. Reasoning thus, I arranged myself comfortably for another nap.

"I am habitually a good sleeper, and a stranger to fear; but, do what I would, the idea still haunted me that some one was in the room. Finding it impossible to sleep, I longed for daylight to dawn, that I might rise and pursue my customary avocations. It was not long before I was able dimly to distinguish the furniture in my room, and soon after I heard, in the apartments below, familiar noises of servants opening windows and doors. An old clock, with antique chimings, proclaimed the hour. I counted one, two, three, four, five, and resolved to rise immediately. My bed was partially screened by a long curtain looped up at one side. As I raised my head from the pillow Rosa looked inside the curtain, and smiled at me. The idea of anything supernatural did not occur to me. I was simply surprised, and exclaimed 'Why, Rosa! How came you here, when you are so ill?' In the old familiar tones, to which I was so much accustomed, a voice replied, 'I am well now!' With no other thought than that of greeting her joyfully, I sprang out of bed. There was no Rosa there! I moved the curtain, thinking she might perhaps have playfully hidden herself behind its folds. The same feeling induced me to look into the closet.—The sight of her had come so suddenly that, in the first moment of surprise and bewilderment, I did not reflect that the door was locked. When I became convinced there was no one in the room but myself, I recollected that fact, and thought I must have seen a vision.

"At the breakfast-table I said to the old lady with whom I boarded, 'Rosa is dead.' 'What do you mean by that?' she inquired. 'You told me she seemed better than common when you called to see her yesterday.' I related the occurrences of the morning, and told her I had a strong impression Rosa was dead. She laughed and said I had dreamed it all. I assured her I was thoroughly awake, and in proof thereof told her I had heard all the customary household noises, and had counted the clock when it struck five. She replied, 'All that is very possible, my dear. The clock struck in your dream. Real sounds often mix with the illusions of sleep. I am surprised that a dream should make such an impression on a young lady so free from superstition as you are.' She continued to jest on the subject, and slightly annoyed me by her persistence in believing it a dream, when I was perfectly sure of having been wide awake. To settle the question, I summoned a messenger and sent him to inquire how Rosa did. He returned with the message that she died that morning at 5 o'clock." and after I had shown it to my landlady, to my any objection to its being published, without suppression of names. She replied, "You have reported it quite accurately. I think what you saw was [illegible] as any occurrence that happens to me."

CURIOUS THEATRICAL SQUABBLE IN PARIS.—Some extraordinary rows, amounting almost to riots, have (says the Paris correspondent of the Daily News) been going on all the week for a very ridiculous cause at the Vaudeville Theatre, and they seem likely to continue. A piece of small merit, called the "Cotillon," was produced there last Sunday. The principal scene represents simply the performance of a cotillon just as it is done in a private drawing-room. Some three or four actresses objected that they would lose caste by appearing on the stage as dancers; but the manager insisted that to walk through an incidental dance in which they were not expected to cut professional capers was quite within the terms of their engagement. The fear of a lawsuit with the manager induced the ladies to undertake the parts assigned to them, under protest. But it happens that they reckon among their friends—their very intimate friends—some of those fashionable young men in Paris who are velept gandins, and (in this instance) belong to the Jockey Club. Perhaps I ought here to explain parenthetically, lest the word gandins, which you won't find in the dictionary of the Academy, should be thought an opprobrious term, that it merely means men who spend a great deal of money in gloves and dinners on the Boulevards des Italiens, the name of which in the time of the Restoration was the Boulevards du Gand. So simple, not to say childish, are French sobriquets which go the round of the world, and the origin of which is soon forgotten.

How many people know that the word Jacobin is derived from the existing Rue Jacob, in which a small political club used to meet? But revenons a nos moutons. The gandins of the Jockey Club, being reinforced probably by other white-gloved gentlemen of the like kidney, mustered strong at the Vaudeville, in order to hiss the "Cotillon" off the stage. The immense majority of the audience was in favor of allowing the performance to proceed. The claque, that lamentable excrescence in all French theatres, a body of "roughs," hired to applaud, rushed from their lair in the centre of the pit to the orchestra stalls, and "showed fight." A commissary of police, girt with his official scarf, loomed in a front box, and prevented blows, but failed to restore silence. The curtain fell, a body of police cleared out the theatre, and so ended the first night. The management would now have withdrawn the play for the sake of peace and quietness, but the Government, which does not much like the Jockey Club, et pour cause, thinks this a good occasion to make a stand against their pretensions to a theatrical dictatorship.

Positive orders were sent to the Vaudeville from the Minister of State's office to keep the "Cotillon" on the bills. It has been now performed four times, the rows increasing in intensity every night. Two evenings ago the Duke de Gramont Caderousse, one of the ringleaders of the opposition, was arrested, but he has since been released. Last night an immense crowd collected in the Place de la Bourse to hear news of the fun, and remained till a late hour. The piece was played in dumb show, the public taking a decided part against the gandins, but not being able to silence their catcalls. As many as fifty policemen were in the house, and every now and then a rioter was dragged out, but all their vigilance failed to restore order. Some women in the boxes threw their footstools at the head of the jubilant party. A subsequent letter states that the riots are at an end in consequence of the government, which at first insisted upon the performance going on, having now directed the management of the Vaudeville to strike the piece out of the bills.

FROM CENTRAL AMERICA.—The steamer Northern Light, from Aspinwall April 27, arrived here last evening. The news from Central America is unimportant. The President of Chili had returned from Santiago impressed with the hearty welcome he received at Valparaiso. Ex-President Montt is to be impeached for his conduct in connection with the case of Capt. Leslie, who was found guilty for having taken from the port of Valparaiso, as prisoners to the United Kingdom, four Chilian gentlemen, who were banished from Chili in 1859. Advices from Jamaica to April 8, report that the Nashville boarded the American schooner Gillilan, from Philadelphia for Falmouth, Jamaica, on the 10th of February, took her cargo, and then burned her.—New York World, May 6.

GEN. BUCKNER NOT TO BE EXCHANGED.—The papers of Saturday evening contained a telegraphic despatch stating that the Confederate General Buckner would probably be exchanged for General Prentiss. It is believed, however, by those most conversant with matters at Fort Warren that such an exchange will not be made. Both Buckner and Tilghman should, it is suggested, be retained for the present. Matters that have transpired during their confinement at the fort justify their retention.—Boston Post.

Thaddeus Stevens, in the recent discussion about Mr. Cameron, spoke of the opposition of leading Republicans in Pennsylvania to Mr. Cameron's going into Mr. Lincoln's cabinet. "I was one of the Republicans who waited on the President to protest against the selection of Mr. Cameron," says Mr. Stevens, "and he treated us with silent contempt, not even telling us a story!"

An action was brought against the Morning Post, at the Surrey assizes, on the 4th, by Lady Jane Walrond, for an article entitled "Spinsters and their Lions," in reference to a dispute between Miss Walrond and Miss G. Norton, respecting a dog. Verdict, one farthing damages.

The Washington Republican says that Governor Morgan, of New York; Governor W. A. Newell, of New Jersey; Senator W. Dennison, of Ohio, and Senator A. H. Pierpont, of Virginia, are at present in this city.

RELIABLE NEWS.

BALTIMORE, March 29, 1862.

Mr. Geo. Pearson—Dear Sir: Being troubled with a severe SORE THROAT and Cold (which settled on my lungs), I tried your MEDICATED TAR DROPS, and can speak very flatteringly of their having relieved me in a few hours, and curing me in three or four days. I cheerfully recommend your justly celebrated Tar Drops to all similarly affected, who will find them pleasant, simple, very efficacious, and the cheapest remedy I ever used. Yours, very truly,

PREPARING FOR EARLY PUBLICATION,
UNIFORM WITH THE MARYLAND CODE
☞The price will be regulated by the extent of the work—which is not likely to exceed $3—will be announced in advance of publication.
A SUPPLEMENT TO THE MARYLAND CODE.
Agreeably to the promise made to the public in our Prospectus to the MARYLAND CODE, we now announce the publication, at an early day, of the
FIRST VOLUME OF OUR SUPPLEMENT TO THE CODE.
IT WILL CONTAIN ALL THE
GENERAL AND LOCAL LAWS,
Passed by the Legislature at the Extra Sessions of 1861, and the Regular Session of 1862,
Arranged under their proper titles, to correspond with the Code.
To be accompanied with Accurate Tables, showing at a glance, the Articles and Sections of the CODE, Repealed or Amended, with References to the Chapter and Section, by which amended or repealed.
TO WHICH WILL BE ADDED IN AN
APPENDIX, THE PRIVATE ACTS AND RESOLUTIONS
OF THE EXTRA AND REGULAR SESSIONS.
THE WHOLE TO BE CAREFULLY INDEXED.
To render the work still more valuable, we shall prefix the CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES,
With its Amendments, with Marginal Notes Referring to the Decisions of the Supreme Court,
ALSO THE
CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF MARYLAND,
With Marginal Notes and References to Acts of the General Assembly and Decisions of the Court of Appeals, and an Appendix and Index.
We believe we thus offer to the public a work invaluable to every Lawyer, Magistrate, Politician, Business Man, and every Citizen of Maryland, and one invaluable to every possessor of the Code.
The importance of the legislation of the late sessions of the Legislature, affecting, as it does, the interest of every man in the State, renders it a matter of the greatest moment to each individual, to have in a convenient and accessible form the Acts of Assembly, and it is scarcely less so to have embodied, in the same volume, the Important Resolutions which enunciate the policy of the State in the present crisis, while it will prove a matter of no slight moment to individuals and corporations, thus to have preserved in a permanent form the Acts on which their rights and interests may depend.
☞Such as may desire to secure the Supplement will do well to order at once, as the extent of the Edition will be regulated by the number of subscribers.
☞Recently Published, by Authority of the State of Maryland—THE MARYLAND CODE, CONTAINING ALL THE PUBLIC GENERAL AND PUBLIC LOCAL LAWS now in force in the State, compiled by OTHO SCOTT and HIRAM MCCULLOUGH, Commissioners; adopted by the Legislature of Maryland, January session, 1860, the Acts of that session being incorporate; with an INDEX to each ARTICLE and SECTION. By HENRY C. MACKALL, of the Maryland Bar. The Second Edition, in two vols., 8vo. law sheep, 900 pages each, only $6. Interleaved $10.
