—Shops for last time

Saturday afternoon at a funeral parlor in the 900 block Pennsylvania Ave. but the time has not been decided.

ONE OF the holidays is that she wants to find her husband, James, whom she understands is somewhere in New Jersey.

When her father, Henry Fowlkes, 950 Washington St. came by to say efforts to reach Mr. Henderson had 4hus far been futile, the young mother voiced disappointed disbelief.

"And you can't find him."

Then she continued as if talking to herself:

"If he wasn't there he just wasn't there. If you can't find him you can't. Maybe he's in jail, but he's never been in jail before."

When it was suggested the husband would come to her Mrs. Henderson answered, "But he doesn't know the children died."

MRS. HENDERSON said the family lived in the unit block of N. Abington Ave. until about six weeks ago when "we just made up our minds to separate, I guess."

Mrs. Henderson and the children moved to the Lexington St. address and her husband later left town, she said.

He had been laid off from work since Dec. 8, 1957, except for a temporary job. Mrs. Henderson has worked as a countergirl in the Goucher College snackbar since February and hopes to start back Jan. 4.

She works at night and has an 18-year - old baby sitter who usually remains all night, even after Mrs. Henderson returns home.

About Tuesday when the fire started, she, said:

"I wasn't gone 15 minutes when the fire started.

"I was going to the store to get some hot dogs and beans for lunch.

"I thought the girl had gone to kindergarten (at Elementary No. 141). Some times she would come back home and I wouldn't make her go because I was hoping she would come to like it by the time she was in first grade."

* * *

Mrs. Hederson has a modest income. She and her husband have never been on welfare, although she got free food under the Donable Foods program for three months.

Her father, a Sparrows Point employer, has been out of work for sometime. Her mother is in a hospital.

Mrs. Henderson said herhusband had an insurance worth about $100 on Catherine, which she has not been able to locate, but hopes to use against the estimated $342 the funeral will cost.

She is counting on help from relatives to see her through this period of trial.

Any AFRO reader who would like to help Mrs. Henderson financially with her extra burden may send contributions to the Henderson Fund, care of the AFRO, 628 N. Eutaw St., and it will be forwarded.

BEFORE THE fire, Mrs. Henderson had counted on having a merry Christmas with her children just as thousands of other Baltimore families will be doing:

"Me and my father-in - law (James Rufus Henderson, 1063 W. Lexington St.), had been doing some shopping for the children.

"I got the Christmas tree lights and the holder Monday night.

"He had got two pairs of shoes and some toys. We were to go down Monday and get some toys."

About the toys, Mrs. Henderson said:

"I guess I'll give them to my sister's children."

Gunmen rob store when mother shops for burial clothes

Twenty-four hours after three of her children had died in fire, and a fourth child had been admitted to a hospital wit superficial burns, Mrs. Mayor Henderson of 1312 W. Lexington St., had additional worries.

While shopping for burial clothes for her two sons and daughter in a Druid Hill Ave. store Wednesday night, two armed men held up the store and escaped with an undetermined amount of money.

After striking a clerk in the face with the butt of his gun one of the men ordered Mrs Henderson, her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Williams and the clerk, Miss Viola Cohen to remain behind a counter while they escaped.

fer a time, was Mrs. Louise Gilmore, who made her guess on the back of a sheet of paper on which her husband guessed Dec. 13. (He didn't send a time either).

Among the entries which were postmarked after the snow actually started falling on Sunday, not one came closer to the correct time than did Mrs. Coleman.

One family in the 1200 block N. Eden St. sent in a card Sunday evening and another on Monday and the best they did was 11:45 a.m. and 12:35 p.m., the closest guess being 25 minutes behind the winner.

ARROW POINTS TO HERO of the Lexington St. fire which claimed the lives of three small children Tuesday. He is William Reed, 14, who resides on the 3rd floor of the 1312 W. Lexington St. apartment house where James Henderson, 2, Rodney Henderson, 3, and Cathie Fowlkes, 5, died in a first floor room. Young Reed is one of six children of Mrs. Daisy Reid, top left, who holds 3-month old Catherine Reed. Left to right, 1st row, are Barbara, 8; Warren, 7 and Paulette, 3. Top row next to Mrs. Reed is Billy, 11; William, George, 10. Paulette and baby Catherine were taken to safety by William who left them at a next door neighbor's house, returned to alarm tenants in the apartment house already in flames. He and a painter tried in vain to rescue the Henderson children.

minor burns and smoke inhalation.

Firemen found the three older Henderson children lying on the floor of the narrow living room and the baby in a crib.

Their bodies were found by Firefighters Garland Rosier of Truck Company 13; James Beverly Jr., and Joseph DeNavis of Engine Company 14, and Gordon Dugan of Truck Company 13.

The survival of young Dean Henderson was attributed to the fact that his play pen was below the level of the dense smoke.

THE GRIEF stricken mother shook her head in disbelief as she tried to understand what had happened.

As she sat in the hospital waiting room she told the AFRO:

"It must have come from the furnace. It was always too hot in there. All the time we had to raise the windows."

Mrs. Henderson disclosed that she and the children moved into the first - floor apartment last Sunday from the third - floor because they wanted more heat.

She said that her husband James Henderson was working in New Jersey.

Previously the family resided in the unit block of N. Arlington Ave.

MRS. HENDERSON said that she had been to the store and had stopped by the home of Miss Frances Bennett at 1110 W. Lexington St., at the time of the fire.

She stated:

"I was walking down the street and somebody said, 'There's a fire in your house. Your babies are crying and they're burning up.'"

Witnesses reported that when Mrs. Henderson arrived at her home screaming, she tried to enter the apartment but was restrained by firemen.

The hysterical woman was carried to the nearby hospital where she was given a sedative.

ACCORDING TO firemen, the fire was discovered around 1 p.m. by William Reed, a third-floor tenant.

Witnesses said that after alerting others in the building, the 14-year-old Reed carried two of his young sisters to safety while another tenant called the Fire Department.

MRS. LAURA MACKEY, 43, of 1312 W. Lexington St., gave this account of how her daughter, Miss Elsie Brinkley, 20, sought to rescue the trapped children:

"The children were just a-hollering. I called my daughter Elsie and we tried to break the door down. The boy (the 14-year - old who warned others of the fire) and a man (later identified as Leroy Butler, 28) tried to help us.

"Elsie put a coat over her head and I told her to 'go ahead, go ahead, you can make it? We got to save that woman's children.'

"But the fire and smoke was just too much."

Still obviously upset by the ordeal of hearing the children crying as they found themselves unable to escape from the stifling smoke, Mrs. Mackey said:

"Oh, they were screaming to the top of their voices. They screamed until their voices went down.

"It hurt me to my heart but nobody just couldn't get to them, Lord knows we tried."

WITH THE arrival of firemen the fire was brought under control within five minutes.

Following an inspection four of the burned out premises, acting battalion chief Charles Doughterty reported that damage to one room of the Henderson home was extensive and slight to two others.

There were indications that the fire started in the middle of a bedroom floor, according to members of the inspection team.

One fireman said: "If someone had just broken a window before we arrived those kids might have been saved."

CHIEF John Knoerlein of the Fire Department arson squad said on Wednesday there is a possibility the fire was started by children playing with matches.

In addition to the Henderson home, the building contains five other apartments.

The brick row house is freshly painted on the outside and has fire escapes at both front and rear entrances. Four families are now living in the apartment.

The building had been registered as a multiple dwelling a year ago.

AS A PRECAUTIONARY measure, a special squad of building inspectors conducted an inspection of homes in the 1300 block W. Lexington St., on Wednesday.

Raughley L. Porter, municipal building inspection engineer, said the type of fire in the Henderson home could have happened in a single dwelling and the kids would have perished.

He said, "Any adult would have been able to get out of that apartment.

"The tragedy gives a sense of urgency" to the multiple dwelling inspection program, Mr. Porter declared.

THE LEXINGTON ST., fire preceded by a few hours a second fire, which almost claimed the life of a five-year-old child on Tuesday.

Kathleen Holmes of the 500 block Oxford Ct., suffered third degree burns about the face and body when her clothing caught fire.

Relatives reported that the child's dress caught fire when she stood too close to a wood-burning stove.

Mrs. Mary Holmes beat out the flames about her daughter's dress with her hands.

The condition of the child has been described as fair at University Hospital.

IN A THIRD fire on Wednesday, Joseph N. Wylie suffered cuts about the right hand when he tried to put out a fire in the living room of his home at 1034 N. Collington Ave.

He and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Wylie fled from their two-story home when fire was discovered around 12:40 a.m.

The Wylies had tried without success to extinguish the flames before the arrival of firemen.

The younger Mr. Wylie was treated at Johns Hopkins Hospital for cuts on three fingers and released.

The fire caused smoke damages to the adjoining homes of James J. Hendrick and Rudolph Brown.

Youth, 14, saves sisters in fatal fire

A sore throat and quick thinking made a 14-year-old eighth grade pupil at junior high school No.182 a hero in his neighborhood Tuesday.

Because William Reed, 1312 W. Lexington St., was confined to his home Tuesday with a slight cold, he was on the spot, smelled smoke, alerted the others in the house and then carried his two small sisters to safety before a fire claimed the lives of three neighbor children.

Young Reed lives with his mother, Mrs. Daisy Reed, and his brothers and sisters in the third floor front apartment of the house where the three children of Mrs. Marjorie Henderson died in a room on the first floor.

On Tuesday William was washing dishes and minding his two baby sisters, Paulette, 3, and Katherine, 23 months, while their mother was at the market.

HE TELLS the story this way: "I smelled smoke and then I looked and saw the smoke pouring up through the radiators.

"I grabbed my two sisters and took them next door. On the way down the steps I could hear children crying and screaming.

"As I passed by the first floor front apartment door, I realized the fire was in there.

"As soon as I dropped the children next door, I ran back and hammered on the first floor door where the children were.

"I tried to open the door but I couldn't.

"A painter who was in the house came and knocked the door down.

"I kept hearing the children screaming all the time.

"I tried to go into the room but the flames and smoke kept me out.

"The painter also tried to go in to get the children but he could not get past the door."

Asked if the children's screams seemed to indicate they were frightened by the fire, young Reed said:

"No. I can not say their cries were terrifying. They just cried like little children do and then they stopped crying."

AFRO president out of hospital

AFRO President Carl Murphy was released from Johns Hopkins Hospital this morning (Friday).

He entered the hospital on November 23 after he suffered a heart attack at his home. It is expected he will be away from his desk at least until the end of January.
