NAPOLEON'S AMERICAN POLICY.

MORE SPECULATION ABOUT M. MERCIER'S VISIT.

If there is at the present time an incontestible fact—one which, unfortunately, is beyond the reach of discussion—it is, that the most experienced are cannot perceive in a future, however distant, the termination of the war in America by merely hostile means. The North, at the outset, said that three months would suffice to reduce the South; it is now thirteen months since the struggle by means of cannon shot commenced, and a perusal of the last dispatches must convince any one that things are not further advanced than on the first day.—Were it only in the interest of humanity, all must ardently wish for the pacification of that immense country; but there is more than an interest in humanity involved—there is the suffering of manufacturing Europe. In the midst of the painful circumstances which succeed each other, and of the accounts which are every day brought by the dispatches from America, the visit of M. Mercier to Richmond has been interpreted in a favorable manner, and considered as a ground for hope. We are not acquainted with the object of that excursion, and we are not aware whether M. Mercier has been charged with a mission, but we are willing to hope, with the public, that the French Minister at Washington may induce the adverse parties to listen to wise counsels of conciliation and peace. If those words are uttered and listened to, it will cause great joy to all feeling hearts in Europe, and particularly in France.

Paris (May 6) Correspondence of the London Times.

Some curious people have asked M. Thouvenel about the matter; but, if I am rightly informed, M. Thouvenel replied that he knew nothing; that not only had he given no instructions to M. Mercier about a mission to Richmond, but that he was as ignorant as was anybody else what he was gone there for. And in giving this assurance, M. Thouvenel probably spoke truly. It does not, however, follow that M. Mercier had no instructions, merely because M. Thouvenel, who, perhaps, alone of all the Cabinet professes little sympathy for the Confederate cause, has not given him any; and you may be certain that M. Mercier would not quit his post without orders from some one to whose will even the Minister of Foreign Affairs must defer.

It is an ascertained fact that the Emperor Napoleon has been for months past most desirous of seeing the war between North and South at an end, chiefly, no doubt, from motives which are creditable to his humanity, but a great deal from anxiety to arrest the suffering as well as the discontent which accompanies suffering among the working and commercial classes in France, and which are in most part attributable to the civil war in America. He believes, too—and this belief is shared by the majority of his Ministers—that the re-establishment of the Union is hopeless. These views were some time ago pressed on the English Government, but without effect. The late battle, as fruitless as it was sanguinary, and the sort of success of which the North boasts, and which, so far as we know, consists in the army having just escaped utter destruction, remind his Majesty that the present moment is a favorable one for trying what he can do to prevent more bloodshed. He thinks that the military honor of the North has been saved or redeemed by what has occurred, and that further carnage is without an object, as regards either glory or interest.

When some time ago he expressed his willingness to interfere as a mediator, if asked to do so, mediation was then declined; but it was at the same time intimated that if circumstances should occur to render such an alternative desirable, no mediation would be more acceptable than that of the Emperor of the French. The late battle, its doubtful results, the uncertainty of future success for the North, the certainty in any case of much calamity to both, together with the increased suffering in France, induce the Emperor to think that the moment is opportune for reviving the question of mediation, as the proposal is still open; or rather for suggesting an armistice with a view to a definitive arrangement. It is then reasonable to presume that M. Mercier's mission is with a view to this armistice; and an armistice which would precede a serious arrangement must necessarily be of some length. Whether M. Mercier will succeed in his mission I do not pretend to say, and no one pretends to say.

Paris (May 8) Correspondence of the London Times.

I have of another Cabinet of the motives of M. Mercier. Government whether, in certain special circumstances, M. Mercier would be authorized to proceed to Richmond on a mission from the United States Government. The answer was in the affirmative. It is inferred by the friends of the Federal cause that it is from the South overtures for an arrangement have come, and that M. Mercier is gone to treat with the Confederate Ministers. This, however, is scouted by the others, who declare that his object is to make himself personally acquainted with the state of affairs, and to convince himself by his own eyes and ears of the little hope there is of ever re-establishing the Union.

LETTER FROM THURLOW WEED.

From the Albany Evening Journal.

THE HAGUE, April 30.

We reached this quiet, neat, quaint old city, one of the capitals—the capital, indeed—of Holland, by rail, in an hour and a half from Harlaem, where we lodged last night. The country exhibited the same general features of land, interspersed with canals, the rich pastures being stocked with very fine cattle. The only considerable city passed was Leyden, distinguished for its University. Like all the other cities of Holland it is upon a dead level.

The Hague is evidently the diplomatic, political, and social centre of Holland, as it is essentially the court centre, although the royal family reside much of the time in other parts of their realm, as at present, the King being at Utrecht and the Queen in Paris.

Our first visit was to the Museum, which, besides some good pictures, (first among which is Paul Potter's Bull,) exhibits the finest collection of Japanese curiosities in the world. Potter's Bull, among other great pictures, went to Paris along with the rich spoils of art, in the time of Napoleon I; but Holland, after the peace, offered so large a ransom that it was sold to the city in which the painter was born.

From the Museum we drove through a magnificent beech-forest to the King's palace. The exterior was anything but impressive, and as I was smoking a good Havana I remained in the carriage, asking Mr. Davton and H——t to do the honors of the palace. But a message soon summoned me from my repose, and the result proved that, left to myself, indolence would have punished itself.—The palace, though small, is a gem. Nothing I had seen—and this, remember, includes Windsor, Buckingham, Versailles, the Tuileries, and the palaces of Austria, Saxony, Prussia, Naples, &c., &c.—equals, in richness, beauty and taste, this palace of the King of Holland, or, perhaps, I should say the Queen, for I understand that the King generally occupies another palace. The Queen is now in Paris, on a visit to the Empress, and we were shown entirely through the apartments. The first is the "China Room," entirely furnished and embellished with articles from China. The next is the "Japanese Room," furnished and embellished by the productions of that country. Then came the "Orange Room," a large circular apartment, extending to the roof of the palace, and lighted by a dome, covered from floor to dome with the frescoes of Reubens and his pupils. The Queen's sitting-room is furnished with exquisite taste, and contains four beautiful pictures, including a Murillo.

We drove back to dinner at 5 o'clock. At the table d'hote, Holland's dignitaries and literati talked Dutch in its purity, and with much animation.

The Hague, like other Dutch cities, was long since finished. This is so literally. There is no employment here for the architect, the carpenter, or the mason. Their work was done, as the iron numerals on the buildings show, a century, a century and a half, or two centuries ago. And the city is as still and noiseless as the smallest hamlet. Here, as elsewhere in Holland, everything "is as neat as a pin."

THE COURTESIES OF LIFE.—William Wirt's letter to his daughter on the "small, sweet courtesies of life," contains a passage from which a great deal of happiness might be learned:

"I want to tell you a secret. The way to make yourself pleasing to others, is to show them that you care for them. The whole world is like the miller at Mansfield, who cared for nobody—no, not he, because nobody cared for him.' And the whole world would serve you so, if you give them the same cause. Let every one, therefore, see that you do care for them, by showing them what Sterne so happily calls the small courtesies, in which there is no parade, whose voice is too still to tease, and which manifest themselves by tender and affectionate looks, and little kind acts of attention, giving others the preference in every thing of enjoyment, at the table, in the field, walking, sitting, or standing."

WITNESSING WILLS.—The Surrogate of Ulster county, New York, refused to admit a will to probate, because it was acknowledged in the presence of one witness in one place, and another in a different place, when the law required that "the instrument must be executed in the presence of two attesting witnesses, or acknowledged by the testator to each of them." On appeal from this decision to the Supreme Court, the Court held it not necessary for the witnesses to be together at the time of the execution.

EXPLOSIVE SPUR.—A French naval officer, holding a high command, has tendered his resignation, in order to devote himself to the completion of a new fulminating spur, which he has invented, which will not only drive in the side of a ship, but will lodge in its interior an explosive shell of the most dangerous character.

The Cleveland Leader states that thirty-nine applications for divorce will come on for trial at the term of the Court of Common Pleas of Cuyahoga county, which commenced yesterday. Thirty-five are made by wives, and the greater portion of the applicants are residents of Cleveland.

THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS PARTIALLY RESTORED.—After an involuntary absence of about three months during which time we were made familiar with the classic and once hallowed grounds of Fort McHenry—we again resume, partially, our old voca ion of "enlightening the world with lamp-black." Our Press, being deemed dangerous by the Government, has been kindly limited, and, for the future, instead of publishing "The South, or any other paper, without consent of the Commanding General," we shall modestly labor in the humbler department of the "art preservative of all arts," by executing every description of BOOK AND JOB PRINTING, hoping through that medium to sustain ourselves and those dependent upon us and would earnestly appeal to our friends to favor us with their patronage. We have prepared our Job PRINTING DEPARTMENT to execute all kinds of printing neatly, expeditiously and cheaply, and solicit a call at our old buildings.

STILL ANOTHER TRIUMPH.

BALTIMORE, May 1st, 1862.

I have experienced so much benefit by using PEARSON'S, MEDICATED TAR DROPS, that I believe it not only a duty but a pleasure, to make it known to others. I was afflicted with a Sore Throat and Dry Cough, which debilitated me so that I could get no rest. My friends told me that I had the consumption. I am now happy to inform you that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS have cured me.

I find that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS are counterfeited, and I caution the afflicted to be on their guard. This is really a shame that so efficacious a remedy should be injured by unprincipled men. I am glad, however, to see that your signature is now on each package, and I advise those who purchase to tear that in mind.

Yours, truly, HENRY FISHER, No. 15 North Bond street.

PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS are prepared and sold by GEO. PEARSON, No. 8 Liberty street, Baltimore. Sold also by the principal Druggists at 10 cents per package. m19-tf
