WEDNESDAY, MAY 28, 1862.

FROM GENERAL HALLECK'S ARMY.

THE LATEST BY MAIL.

Correspondence of the Cincinnati Gazette.

BEFORE CORINTH, MISS., May 19, 1862.

EXPECTING AN ATTACK FROM BEAUREGARD.

Let me insist once more, that if the Generals fail to understand themselves, or prove unable to define their sensations, the "civilian" public should not be surprised at experiencing the same difficulty.

A week or ten days ago the "headquarters" were rife with mysterious hints that all this delay was not without its purpose, that "strategy" was to accomplish something at last, and that, after due preparation, the trap was to close with M. Beauregard and his hundred thousand inside of it.

But the headquarters suddenly changed tone. For some days there has been little talk of capturing Beauregard and his army, and less of the unspeakable glories of strategy. Within five hours from the time I am writing, orders have been sent to corps commanders to hold their forces in readiness, as the enemy seemed to be in great commotion, and there was imminent danger of an immediate attack from Beauregard upon our entrenchments. The alarm even went so far as to cause similar orders to be sent to the reserves; and as I write, the whole vast mass of three armies—of untold tens of thousands each—is held in expectancy of being attacked itself, instead of surrounding and attacking the enemy.

What the result may be no man knows, and it is idle to express opinions without some basis of fact on which to found them. It is pretty certain that Beauregard nearly, if not quite, equals us in numbers. Deserters tell us that they are short of provisions, but then other deserters tell us precisely the reverse; and in the two or three skirmishes in which our advancing troops have suddenly taken the camps of their outposts, they have always found as great abundance as our own camps can show. Beauregard is hardly the style of man to lie quietly waiting while our siege approaches are bringing heavy guns within range of his works. Perhaps the stories of the deserters, the almost equal numbers of the enemy, the fact that large commissary supplies have been sent down the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, Beauregard's general character, and such information as General Halleck certainly possesses concerning his movements, combine to afford evidence enough for the opinion now known to prevail at headquarters, that instead of attacking we are to be attacked.

OUR MEANS OF DEFENCE.

While I have grown to base less and less hope on the achievements of our generalship, I have also grown into the belief that except by sheer insanity of management, it is impossible to defeat this army. If Beauregard should attack in front, he will not find us, as at his last trial, utterly unprotected and easily driven from large portions of our camps; but with long lines of field works for defence against sudden attacks, continuous breastworks, demilunes, abattis, stockades and heavy guns in position. To attack in rear is supposed to be at present impracticable. Even if we should be driven from this outside line of fortifications we should only have to fall back to another, a short distance in rear, where the defence could be renewed under as favorable conditions as at first.—There can, therefore, it would seem, be no doubt that if, as the Headquarters now insist on believing, Beauregard is likely to take the initiative by attacking us, he would meet with a disastrous result, that if energetically followed up, should end in the destruction of his whole army.

For my own part, however, I confess to some doubts as to whether Gen. Halleck really has any very definite information about the enemy's strength or purposes.

HOW WE ARE "STARVING BEAUREGARD OUT."

Nothing could be more absurd than the talk about starving them out at Corinth. With two railroads at command, they are not likely to starve, so long as the Confederacy contains "hog and hominy," and we may as well get over the foolish idea that the supply of those Southern staples is just exhausted. People who talk of starving the Confederate army seem to imagine that we have cut it off from sources of supply. On the contrary, the Mobile and Ohio road, directly to their rear, is not only in good working order, but apparently beyond our reach. We might cut them off from Memphis by an advance of Ohio Sherman on the right; but till we entirely surround them—i. e., till we get beyond the point of fearing immediate attack, and change the whole present policy of operations, they will have, by means of the roads to Mobile, full access to the Gulf and seaboard. When the whole Confederacy, therefore, is starved out, we will, under the present system, succeed in starving them out of Corinth. The process might prove tedious.

ABOUT CAPTURING THE ARMY.

The probability of capturing their whole army, or "bagging them," as the phrase is, seems equally remote, while they have a railway to run away on. As matters stand now, they might take off twenty regiments per day, without our even discovering what they were about. When we cut them off from Memphis, they still have their road to Mobile entirely safe, so long as they protect their rear. Suppose we should fight a great battle to-morrow, and should win a victory. Unless we should get inside their works at once, and possess ourselves of the railroad, they could at once commence running off their troops, and by only taking the trains twenty or thirty miles, and then returning for fresh loads, they could in a day reach a point with the mass of their army, to which we could not come up for a week.

SCENES BETWEEN PICKETS—IMPORTANT MOVEMENTS.

A letter from the army of General Halleck, in the Pittsburg Chronicle, gives some amusing incidents occurring between the pickets, who were within speaking distance of each other:

Sometimes these scenes partake of the tragic, but the comic largely predominates. The men on both sides conceal themselves behind trees and logs, only now and then venturing to peep in the direction of their antagonists.

Occasionally a Butternut and a Federal expose their frontispiece at one and the same time, and then follow an exchange of leaden compliments, usually with no other effect than to dislodge the branch of a tree or to perforate unoffending mother earth. Anxious to witness the sport, I remained last night with the advance picket guard under command of Captain Philip Trounstein, of Co. H, 5th Ohio Cavalry.

We arrived at our post about 5 o'clock, just after the Confederates had been driven from their position by Capt. Quinan, also of the 5th Cavalry. We had not been there fifteen minutes when the whis of a bullet announced that we were treading on forbidden ground. "Pick out your trees and let 'em have it, boys," said Captain Trounstein.—Our men were quickly in position, behind their natural fortifications. "Come out o' there, ye d—n Yankees," shouted a concealed Butternut. "What for you no come out?" shouted a Teutonic Federal. "You be d—d!" replied a Chivalry, seconding his words with a rifle-shot, which made a number of our men think a blue-bottle fly was in close proximity to their ears. "You'd better not show that secesh head o' yours," shouted a 5th cavalry man. "Stick out yer abolition mug if you dare," replied the Butternut. This interesting kind of conversation was kept up until dark, when it ceased on both sides.

During the night a number of shots were exchanged, but no one was hurt on our side, and I believe the Confederates were similarly fortunate. Early in the morning an unsuccessful attempt was made to flank our pickets. The cavalry that undertook the enterprise "retired" in haste.

Arrangements have been made for the prevention in future of Ball Run stampedes. General Halleck has ordered that hereafter a strong force of cavalry shall be stationed in the rear of all battle fields, to check the riverward progress of every fugitive, so that if the men will run they must run toward the enemy.

MELANCHOLY CASE OF SUICIDE.—On Sunday, Lydia Philippe, a native of Switzerland, 26 years of age, residing at No. 322 Avenue A, was found lying in an insensible condition in a bed on the floor of her room. Soon afterward she died. On the bed in an adjoining room was found her child, Juliet, 5½ years old, also in a dying condition.—Yesterday, Coroner Collin held an inquest on the mother, during which the child died, when an inquest was held on her also. It appeared on a post-mortem examination that death had been the result of narcotic poison. It was supposed that the mother had administered the poison to the child, and then taken a large quantity herself. She had just received the intelligence that her husband, who belonged to one of the regiments in the Excelsior Brigade, was killed in the battle at Williamsburg. At the conclusion of the inquest a bottle was found in the room, which had contained five or six ounces of laudanum. The poor woman had previously tried to end her life by throwing herself into the river from one of the ferry-boats, but was prevented by the child clinging to her clothes.—New York Tribune.

McDOWELL'S COLUMN.

From the New York Express, May 26.

In regard to Fredericksburg, it should be remembered that General McDowell has massed his forces virtually as an army in defence of Washington. He has about 40,000 men, while the Rappahannock is swept clean by his gunboats, and the Potomac is open to any number of reinforcements or vessels of war. McDowell's army could easily fall back upon Washington, where there is a long if not of entrenchments, fortifications, and rifle pits, to shelter his command. If the Confederate army of Manassas remained for nine months within a day's march of Washington, commanded by Johnston and Beauregard, composed of the flower of the Southern forces, and did not dare even to menace the Union army of occupation, it is hardly possible they will march on Washington now.

WHAT A REVOLVER DID FOR ONE MAN.—The appraisers of the estate of the late Col. Colt make the whole amount of his property foot up something over three millions of dollars. This is exclusive of his landed property in the Western States and Canada, his gold and lead mines in South America, and his property in England, which it is believed cannot be fairly estimated. Probably it is worth another million.

THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS PARTIALLY RESTORED.—After an involuntary absence of about three months, during which time we were made familiar with the classic and once hallowed grounds of Fort McHenry—we again resume, partially, our old vocation of "enlightening the world with lamp-black." Our Press, being deemed dangerous by the Government, has been kindly limited, and, for the future, instead of publishing "THE SOUTH, or any other paper, without consent of the Commanding General," we shall modestly labor in the humbler department of the "art preservative of all arts," by executing every description of BOOK AND JOB PRINTING, hoping through that medium to sustain ourselves and those dependent upon us, and would earnestly appeal to our friends to favor us with their patronage. We have prepared our JOB PRINTING DEPARTMENT to execute all kinds of printing neatly, expeditiously and cheaply, and solicit a call at our old buildings. SAMUEL S. MILLS, BOOK AND JOB PRINTER. m23 1m Office—122 Baltimore st., 2 doors from North.

STILL ANOTHER TRIUMPH.

BALTIMORE, May 1st, 1862.

I have experienced so much benefit by using PEARSON'S, MEDICATED TAR DROPS, that I believe it not only a duty but a pleasure, to make it known to others. I was afflicted with a Sore Throat and Lung Cough, which debilitated me so that I could get no rest. My friends told me that I had the consumption. I am now happy to inform you that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS have cured me.

I find that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS are counterfeited, and I caution the afflicted to be on their guard. This is really a shame that so efficacious a remedy should be injured by unprincipled men. I am glad, however, to see that your signature is now on each package, and I advise those who purchase to bear that in mind.

Yours, truly, HENRY FISHER, No. 15 North Bond street.

PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS are prepared and sold by Geo. Pearson, No. 5 Liberty street, Baltimore. Sold also by the principal Druggists at 10 cents per package. m10-tf
