A WALK OVER THE BATTLE-FIELD—THE HORRORS OF WAR.

Correspondence of the New York Express.

FAIR OAK STATION, June 6, 1862.

After a long fourteen-mile ride, and a night in, or rather on, the mud, I arrived at Gen. Kearney's Division Headquarters last evening. The 1st New York Volunteers, Col. Dyckman, left Newport News on Tuesday, and for the time being your correspondent placed himself under their protection. They are now located just a few rods ahead of the last great battle-field, with the 37th New York, Kearney's headquarters being in the same field. The command presented an admirable appearance, and was, by some, taken to be a brigade, as one or two brigades here are no fuller than this regiment. This tells a sad tale of the destruction of war.

From early yesterday morning to noon, there was very heavy cannonading to the right (Kearney is on the extreme left), and the men were all under arms. At first we supposed there was merely gun practice, but shortly it was evident that a whole battery was at work, and lively, too. The earth trembled for miles away. At about noon the firing ceased, and then a shout, as if from many thousand throats, was heard away up at this station. We understood that a division was crossing the Chickahominy in another advantageous place, and that their advance was assisted by the artillery. Later news tells us of their success, though we have no particulars.

I paid a visit to the battle-field of Saturday and Sunday, called by some the "Battle of the Seven Pines," this morning. The camp of Casey's division presented a sight which an artist might envy, and yet one of desolation. All around lay charred ruins, clothing, guns, cartridge-boxes, &c., the property mainly of our own troops. The whole camp was just as level as the Russ pavement on Broadway. Here was where the enemy first made their appearance on Saturday, and where they so badly drove back our men. A little further on is a piece of woods, and by walking through water and mud knee-deep, one is enabled to investigate its contents. The bark of nearly every tree is peeled off towards the roots, the rifle balls and canister fired into the forest by our men having taken down the trees about as likely as they did Confederates. Letters, guns by the dozen, both Secesh and Union, clothing enough to start half the Chatham street dealers in business, new-made graves, yet unburied bodies, and all the minor indications of battle and death, form one of the saddest scenes ever witnessed on the Virginia Peninsula. In a swamp we found eight bodies of Alabamians close together, and in such a horrible state of decomposition that hardly a man saw them without turning away his head. Their clothes were on, but the bodies were so swollen, that they fitted as tight as the skin itself. In several cases the flesh had already been eaten off by vermin, and the head and the skull lay bare.—It was a disgusting scene, which some people might have seen with profit. But it ought to be added, that our people are burying the dead, just as fast as they can reach the remains.

I saw one body, which was evidently that of a Confederate officer. His clothing was rather better than that of the large majority we saw, and other indications of rank were numerous. He lay concealed behind some brush, and had evidently been wounded, sought its shelter and there died. The limbs were contracted, but upon the face there seemed to rest a placid smile. One hand held on to a fence rail near by, while the other was extended upon the earth. Like all the rest, the body was swollen to twice its natural size, and millions of vermin were fast devouring it. Calling some scouts, a grave was dug, and the decaying flesh was consigned to its last resting place.

Another body was found sitting on the ground, he back braced against a fence. The skin was peeling off the hands, and hung down from the fingers in shreds. One hand rested on the musket, whose contents had been discharged. The head drooped to one side, and the features were fearfully contracted, evidencing a dying struggle of a most painful nature. In his vest pocket there was a piece of paper, and curiosity prompted me to read it. There was some scribbling upon it, the distinguishable words being, "Eighth Ala. will never yield." "No, sir, never." Then some poetical lines, of which, amid the blood and dirt, I succeeded in deciphering the following:

"Suppose we die upon the field?
'Twill prove that never will we yield;
'Twill show the foe that, like a flood,
We'll pour, for Southern rights, our blood."

Below this were these words:

"The woman who wrote that, a Southern man ought to marry; a Northern one, she would spurn."

A curiosity seeker might have collected a bushel of letters, in these woods so full of horrors, but I had not the heart for the task.

To show how desperate was the struggle in the heavy woods between Casey's and Ward's camp, I have spoken of the bullet-marks upon the trees, of the dead and of their effects, everywhere seen. Another indication was the clothing, yet hanging upon low tree branches, fences, and lying upon the ground. An officer engaged in the battle tells me, that when we pursued, on Sunday, the retreating Confederates to the woods through which, on Saturday, they drove us, a desperate encounter ensued. Hundreds of men, on both sides, threw off all their superfluous clothing and went in, as we were told the 69th did at Bull Run, stripped almost to the waist. Those who had the opportunity, placed their coats where they would be preserved; others with no time for that threw them on the ground, and lost them with their lives. Within a space of two acres there are unbathered arms enough to supply a New York militia regiment. In that small space nearly six hundred men were sent to their long account.

At Casey's old camp there were no human bodies, as there it was an easy matter to dispose of them immediately after the fight. But hundreds of horses, torn by shot and shell, lay all around, the carcases emitting a pestilential stench. On Sunday when we were again in possession of this field, men and animals lay close together—

"Rider and steed in one red burial blent."

The animals are now being burned, as that is the only way in which they can be disposed of, and the horrid effluvia removed from its too close contact with our camp. Upon approaching this spot, it requires considerable effort to lead a man to walk up to it, the reeking odor being so offensive. To-morrow its condition will be favorable enough for reoccupation. In a direct railroad line from this camp to Richmond it is just seven miles. "Fair Oak" is the name of the station.

THE ATTACK UPON CHARLESTON.

Our despatches yesterday announced the beginning of the grand attack of our forces upon Charleston. Additional particulars are given in the Southern papers. The Charleston Courier of June 2 says:

About two o'clock Friday afternoon one of the enemy's gunboats came into Stono river and took a position from which they opened fire on Fort Pemberton, garrisoned under the command of Major J. J. Lucas. The post is under the command of Lieutenant Colonel C. K. Huger. A brisk engagement of half an hour took place, after which the enemy retired. The behavior of the garrison was admirable.

The same paper of May 31 has the following:

The enemy in strong force, consisting of infantry, cavalry and artillery, landed at Page Point on Thursday morning, and advanced towards Pocotaligo, within two miles of the Charleston and Savannah Railroad. Our forces at that point, although inferior in numbers, held the enemy in check until reinforcements arrived, when the enemy retreated to their boats, the Confederates pursuing them.—N. Y. Express.

A NEW YORK CAPTAIN OF VOLUNTEERS DISGRACED.—The captain of Company I, of the 34th New York Volunteers, (Col. Baker's California regiment,) was publicly disgraced in front of his regiment, at West Point, Va., a few days since, for refusing to comply with the Colonel's orders to deliver the regimental colors to another company, and refusing to parade his company. He was convicted of mutiny, and would have been shot had not General McClellan commuted his sentence.—The whole division was called out to witness the ceremony of disgrace, and formed into a hollow square. The culprit was placed in the center, and his sentence read to him as follows, viz: "That his sword be broken before his face, that he be publicly disgraced before the division, and serve one year in the District of Columbia jail; and that it shall be disgraceful for any soldier of the army of the Potomac to associate with him hereafter." After this was read, a sergeant cut all the brass buttons from his coat, and then took his sword and broke it in half.

ELOPEMENT.—The Vineyard Gazette states that Miss Angeline Smith, of Edgartown, and Capt. John Smith, of New Bedford, eloped from that place on Tuesday night. The young lady was engaged to a Mr. Appleby, late steward of the ship Splendid, and they were to have been married on Wednesday morning. The lady, who has borne a good reputation, sat up with Mr. Appleby until half-past eleven o'clock Tuesday night, and eloped with Capt. Smith a few minutes before twelve. They proceeded to Holmes' Hole, where they took a steamer for New Bedford. Capt. S. is upwards of fifty, and not very handsome at that.—N. B. Standard.

THE ARMY BEFORE RICHMOND.—The newspaper Generals—all of them, without distinction of party, now—have been so earnest in demanding reinforcements for the shattered columns of Gen. McClellan, that there is every reason to believe that the Washington Generals have heard and respected them. We think we may say out loud, now, what the enemy well knows, through hosts of contrabands—that Gen. McClellan is being reinforced, but with not half enough men, as yet. Double the present supply, and then there will be a deficit to make "a sure thing."—N. Y. Express.

THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS PARTIALLY RESTORED.—After an involuntary absence of about three months, during which time we were made familiar with the classic and once hallowed grounds of Fort McHenry—we again resume, partially, our old vocation of "enlightening the world with lamp-black." OUR PRESS, being deemed dangerous by the Government, has been kindly limited, and, for the future, instead of publishing "THE SOUTH, or any other paper, without consent of the Commanding General," we shall modestly labor in the humbler department of the "art preservative of all arts," by executing every description of BOOK AND JOB PRINTING, hoping through that medium to sustain ourselves and those dependent upon us, and would earnestly appeal to our friends to favor us with their patronage. We have prepared our JOB PRINTING DEPARTMENT to execute all kinds of printing neatly, expeditiously and cheaply, and solicit a call at our old buildings.

STILL ANOTHER TRIUMPH.
BALTIMORE, May 1st, 1862.
I have experienced so much benefit by using PEARSON'S, MEDICATED TAR DROPS, that I believe it not only a duty but a pleasure, to make it known to others. I was afflicted with a Sore Throat and Dry Cough, which debilitated me so that I could get no rest. My friends told me that I had the consumption. I am now happy to inform you that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS have cured me.
I find that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS are counterfeited, and I caution the afflicted to be on their guard. This is really a shame that so efficacious a remedy should be injured by unprincipled men. I am glad, however, to see that your signature is now on each package, and I advise those who purchase to bear that in mind.
Yours, truly,
HENRY FISHER,

MINISTERS AND LECTURERS,
LAWYERS AND AUCTIONEERS,
SENATORS AND REPRESENTATIVES
SHOULD USE
HANCE'S
COUGH CONFECTIONS
For Strengthening and Giving a Roundness, Fullness and Clearness to their Voices; they will find them unsurpassed.
I advise all who are suffering from a recent Cough, Cold, Sore Throat or Hoarseness, to procure at once a single 25 cent box of HANCE'S COUGH CONFECTIONS; before they have used one-half of the box they will perceive the disease speedily giving way to their curative effects, and oftentimes be astonished to find so much medicinal virtue contained in so small a space. Persons who go to meetings, persons who go to lectures, persons who go to concerts, or any place where large numbers of persons are usually congregated in crowded and close rooms, should always carry a box of
HANCE'S COUGH CONFECTIONS
in their pocket; they will, in numerous instances, prevent them from disturbing the congregation or audience by coughing, and where the mouth and throat are dry and husky they will prove invaluable.
HANCE'S COUGH CONFECTIONS
ARE PREPARED AND SOLD BY
SETH S. HANCE,
