BALTIMORE.

THURSDAY, JUNE 19, 1862.

FROM GENERAL FREMONT'S ARMY.

Correspondence of the New York Times.

FRONT ROYAL, Saturday, June 14, 1862.

Before leaving this Valley of the Shenandoah, or, as it has proved to many, the valley of the shadow of death, I wish to go leisurely over the ground, as a gleaner might, gathering up the loose straws, and binding them up for you into a full sheaf.

The pursuit of Jackson is virtually ended, at least so far as our column is concerned. After having him to nearly the end of the Valley, and making a vigorous snap at his retreating heels as he trotted over the bridge at Port Republic, we have now fallen back, lest he should in turn become pursuer. We left Port Republic early on Monday morning, camping at Harrisonburg. Our resting-place the next evening was in the vicinity of New Market, about eighteen miles from Harrisonburg, and on Thursday I left Fremont's command at Mount Jackson, where it will probably remain for some time, if permitted by the proprietor of the mountain. Mount Jackson is midway between Front Royal and Port Republic. The cause of our retrograde movement may be told in a very few words. Jackson's force, which all the time greatly exceeded ours, has been swelled by Longstreet's command. Shields, upon whom we relied for support at this juncture, has been ordered to Richmond, and at last accounts was marching thither.

The morning that this news came we had a pontoon bridge well nigh over the river, intending to cross that evening; but after its reception we concluded we wouldn't. Only one thing remained to be done, to fall back and await reinforcements and supplies. The men of the command were worn down by long marches and short rations. Much of the time they were obliged to rely for food upon the scanty supplies that could be foraged from neighboring farm-houses. They were almost wholly destitute of shoes, and poorly provided with clothing. Their spirits all this while had been sustained by the prospect of soon overtaking the enemy, and finding in the the recaptured baggage train all the supplies needed. As this prospect grew dim, and the certainty dawned that they were left exposed to an attack from an overwhelming force, their spirits sank, discontent became manifest, and much question whether it would have been possible to march them much further without producing open mutiny. Fremont has adopted the only alternative that offered, falling back upon a central point to rest and recuperate his command. I blame attaches to any one for the movement, it certainly cannot cling to his skirts.

The depredations committed by the German division have given a new word to the language. When an article is missed under suspicious circumstances, it is said to be "Blenkered." But my own observation leads me to believe that the Germans have been made the scapegoats of the whole army. I have seen Yankees pillage a dairy of its cream, depopulate a hen-roost, and then trumpet forth accusations through their noses against "Blenker's men." That the latter are insubordinate, and given to riotous living and plundering, is a sad fact that cannot be disputed. I have seen a company of them strip a house from garret to cellar, regardless of the remonstrances of female occupants.—Under these circumstances, the thought has occurred to me that were any patriotic Southern soldier to desecrate our mothers' thresholds in the same manner, he would be shot down in the attempt, though a regiment stood at his back. But the hands of others than the Teutons are stained with pillage, though it must be confessed that the latter have engaged in it with a zeal that in a better cause would merit admiration. The circumstances of our march have favored this sort of thing. If an officer remonstrated, the question was asked, "Why, then, do you not feed us? We must live." But now the necessity is ended, and Gen. Fremont avows his intention to compel the observance of private rights, and stop "Blenkering," though he has to keep one half his army standing guard over the other. And I think he'll succeed in his laudable intentions.

AFFAIRS AT NEW ORLEANS.

THE ARREST OF PIERRE SOULE—A PHILADELPHIA SURGEON AND GEN. BUTLER.

An article in the Philadelphia Inquirer, which will probably astonish the residents of this city when it becomes known to them, and will convince them that Baltimore is not the only place in which treason is disgraced. The persons where treason is disgraced. The persons arrested is the Hon. Pierre Soule, formerly minister to Spain, and an ex-member of Congress.—General Butler has been convinced of his guilt ever since we have arrived here, and has only postponed his arrest for the purpose of gaining positive proof, which he has now obtained.

The charges against him are, first, that he is the leader of a secret society known as the "Southern Independence Association," of which each member is solemnly sworn to oppose, at the cost of his life, if necessary, the reconstruction of the old Union, no matter what disaster may befall the Confederate cause, and to aid by armed force, if required, the Confederate Government in carrying out its laws for the confiscation of the property of Union men, and in the detection and punishment or expulsion of people whom they regard as spies. The second charge is that Mr. Soule was the author of the insolent letter sent by the late Mayor to Commodore Farragut, and is the principal supporter of the rebellion in this city.

Having obtained full evidence of the above charges, the General issued the following order to Colonel French, Provost Marshal, and directed him to send one of his most competent deputies to make the arrest:

HEADQUARTERS DEPT. OF THE GULF, New Orleans, May 28.

To Jonas H. French, Provost Marshal of New Orleans:

Sir—You are hereby directed immediately to arrest and place in safe confinement the person of Pierre Soule, of this city, and there hold him until he can be transferred by a safe transport to Fort Warren, Mass. By order of Major-General Butler.

P. HAGGERTY, Captain and Aid-de-Camp.

Captain Conant, late of the Thirty-first Massachusetts regiment, now a Deputy Provost Marshal, was entrusted with the delicate business. He called at the office of Mr. Soule this morning, but Mr. Soule was not there; his son was in, however, and, knowing nothing of Captain Conant's business, promised that his father should be at his residence at two o'clock this afternoon.

Captain Conant was on hand at the appointed hour, and found Mr. Soule at home. He informed him that he was ordered to arrest him; but Mr. Soule refused to go with him without an order from the Provost Marshal. Captain Conant folded the order so as to conceal that part which referred to his being sent to Fort Warren, and showed him the balance. Mr. Soule at once consented to the arrest, and he was taken before General Butler.—After some conversation he was temporarily released, on giving his parole of honor to report to the General whenever he should be ordered to do so. He will probably be sent to New York.

FROM GEN. BUTLER'S DEPARTMENT.

A telegraphic despatch from Memphis, dated 15th instant, says:

We learn that the Confederates last week rescued the New Orleans, Opelousas and Great Western Railroad from the enemy, taking several officers and privates prisoners, and destroying all the bridges on the road. Two trains were then near Brashear City, and all the Unionists aboard were captured. Our men then ran the train to Algiers, and cut the levee to prevent the enemy getting out, but they soon repaired it."

A correspondent of the New York Herald, writing from New Orleans on the 26th of May, gives the following particulars of the affair above alluded to:

The Twenty-first Indiana regiment being in possession of the Opelousas Railroad, a guard of one officer and two men accompanies each train. The train from the eastern end—Algiers—and the one from the Western terminus of the road—Berwick's Bay—both start at the same hour, and meet about half way, at Terre Bonne. Last Sunday the train from Berwick's Bay was taken possession of by a band of a hundred Confederate soldiers, calling themselves Texan Rangers, carrying, besides their arms, picks and shovels. They proceeded as far as Terre Bonne, where they took possession of the train bound westward. The Union officers and guard behaved with pluck; but of course they were helpless against such odds in numbers. The Confederates then went on in the train to a point on the western bank of the Mississippi river, about thirteen miles above Algiers, where the distance to the river is only three-quarters of a mile. Here they halted, and marched to the bank of the river, where they set to work and cut the levee in five different places. They told the people that they were acting in pursuance of an order from Gov. Moore, of Louisiana. After cutting the levee they tore up the rails on the road for some distance, piled them aboard the train to prevent being followed, and then rode off. As soon as Colonel Millian learned of their villainy he sent a strong detail to the place, and repaired the levee before any great damage was done. He has a good clue to where the vandals are now, and he will start in a few days with a force and clean them out, and, we hope, recover the brave fellows whom they captured. The names of the officers were Lieut. Clayton Coe, of Co. K, and Lieutenant James M. Connolly, of Co. H.

THE SALT TRADE.—The Syracuse Journal says that the salt company are now shipping more than 30,000 barrels of salt per week, and that this does not nearly supply the demand, but the pressure is now being relieved. Nearly a million and a half of bushels of salt have now been inspected and shipped, and the production is increasing. The dry weather has been very favorable to the solar fields.

The Vincennes, Ind., Sun says: We learn from several farmers that the recent heavy rains have caused serious damage to the wheat, and it is now rusting badly.

STILL ANOTHER TRIUMPH.

BALTIMORE, May 1st, 1862. I have experienced so much benefit by using PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS, that I believe it not only a duty but a pleasure, to make it known to others. I was afflicted with a Sore Throat and Dry Cough, which debilitated me so that I could get no rest. My friends told me that I had the consumption. I am now happy to inform you that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS have cured me. I find that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS are counterfeited, and I caution the afflicted to be on their guard. This is really a shame that so efficacious a remedy should be injured by unprincipled men. I am glad, however, to see that your signature is now on each package, and I advise those who purchase to bear that in mind.

Yours, truly, HENRY FISHER, No. 1 North Bond street.
