A GRAPHIC SKETCH OF GENERAL STERLING PRICE.

"Personne," the lively and graphic correspondent of the Charleston Courier, gives in one of his letters the following interesting account of Gen. Sterling Price:

As few people have an idea of the character of the man, I give you a hasty pen and ink sketch, as he appeared to me during a brief interview. He is over six feet in height, with a frame to match, full, but not portly, and straight as an Indian. His carriage is marked with dignity, grace and gentleness, and every motion bespeaks the attitude and presence of the well bred gentleman. He has a large Websterian head, covered with a growth of thick white hair, a high, broad, intellectual forehead, florid face, no beard, and a mouth among whose latent smiles you never fail to discover the iron will that surmounts all obstacles. His laugh (and it is not unfrequent) reveals a set of teeth which, like Ethan Allen's, would serve to draw nails. The striking feature, however, is his eye—a calm, beautiful blue, soul-revealing orb, which is at once a key to every emotion of the man. It is an eye which never blanched at danger, and it is the boast of his soldiers that he never looked unpityingly upon the sufferings of his followers.

A passionate lover of music, the same tender heart that broods over sweet sounds gives flow to the sympathy that is ever warm in his nature for suffering humanity. This was manifested during the masterly retreat from Elkhorn. Time and again did he dismount from his horse to give place to some sick or wounded soldier, and when it was suggested that it would be better to leave these invalids behind, his reply, as he threw a furious look at the individual, was—"No, sir, I'll sacrifice my whole army before I desert my faithful wounded."

In conversation, Price is a marked specimen of the "fine old English gentleman"—gentle, unassuming, well informed, and an admirable listener. He speaks quickly but with caution, and his words are as laconic and decisive as his acts. His reads human nature intentively, and possesses the rare faculty of readily adapting himself to every person with whom he is brought in contact. Accessible to all, he is as kindly democratic with his soldiers as he is courtly with his equals. No one can lay an affront at the door of Sterling Price. It is this careful consideration which has given him so firm a hold upon the hearts of his men.

Some idea of the attachment existing between the General and his army, may be had from the fact that he is everywhere known by the affectionate soubriquet of "Old Dad."

"Who do you belong to?" asked an officer of one of the passing soldiers in a regiment during its transit through Memphis.

"To the old man," was the reply.

"Who's the old man?"

"Why, old Dad Price. Hain't you heard of him yit?"

"Yes, I have; but where is he now?" continued the questioner.

"I don't know where in h—ll he is now," was the veteran's answer, "thus well onsil we git into a scrimmage, and I'll show you. Old Dad's right in the midst of the fire where the lamp posts and small balls are flying the thickest. Look to the front and you kin always find him thar."

[Lamp posts, I should observe, is the name the boys of the West give to the long conical shells of the enemy.]

The army of General Price is made up of extremes. It is a heterogeneous mixture of all human compounds and represents in its various elements every condition of Western life. There are the old and the young, the rich and poor, the high and low, the grave and gay, the plain or and laborer, farmer and clerk, hunter and boatman, merchant and woodsman—men, too, who have come from every State, and been bronzed in every latitude from the mountains of the Northwest to the pampas of Mexico. Americans, Indians, half-breeds, Mexicans, Frenchmen, Italians, Germans, Spaniards, Poles, and for ought I know, Hottentots,—all are mixed in the motley mass who have rallied around the flag of their noble leader. It is a "gathering of the clans," as if they had heard and responded to the stirring Battle Call of my poetical friend Harry Timrod:

Ho! Dwellers in the vales,
Ho! Ye who by the roaring tide
Have roughened in the gales,
Leave barn and byre, leave kin and cot,
Lay by the bloodless spade,
Let desk and case and counter rot,
And burn your books of trade."

Nor is this wonderful army less picturesque in point of personal attire and weapons.

Every man has come from his homestead fitted with the best and strongest that loving mothers, wives and sisters could put upon him. And the spectacle presented as they are drawn up in line, whether for marching or inspection, necessarily forms an arabesque pattern of the most parti colored crowd of people upon which human eyes ever rested. Some are in black—full citizen's dress, with beaver hats and frock coats; some in home-spun drab; some in gray, blue and streaked; some in nothing but red shirts, pants, and big top boots; some attempt a display with the old-fashioned militia uniforms of their forefathers; some have banners floating from their "outer walls" in the rear; some would pass for our friend the Georgia Major, who used to wear nothing but his shirt collar and a pair of spurs.

"Some are in rags,
Some in bags
And some in velvet gowns!"

Take them all in all, "they rival those fantastic shapes that hang upon the walls of memory in a poet's dream."

Aside from the dress, I have been forcibly struck by the remarkable personnel of a majority of the men. They are heavy, large headed, rough, brown faced fellows, who look as if in a fight they might weigh a ton apiece, or "whip their weight in wild cats." Fully three-fifths of them are over six feet in height, and a very considerable portion are mere strippings, ranging in age from fourteen to eighteen. The health of the army is generally good, perhaps better than that of any other body of men in the field. Yet none have suffered more hardships, encountered more perils, or been more deprived of the necessaries of life.

Their weapons are not less miscellaneous than their personal appearance. At first few were armed with anything but ordinary shot guns and rifles, and to a considerable extent such is the case at present, but it is a proud boast among them that "Dad Price's men are the only ones who have yet been able to equip themselves generally from the spoils of the enemy." Missourians and Texans won't walk where they can ride. Consequently an unusual proportion of the army is cavalry, but these I learn are to be dismounted and turned to active account as infantry. A good move. Nearly every man in the division is a splendid shot.—While at Memphis I heard a bet made that a certain boy, fifteen years old, in one of the regiments, could not, at the distance of eight hundred yards, hit the crown of a hat four times out of five with a Minie musket. The bet was taken by an officer, the hat put up, and the lad, who was quietly standing by leaning on his rifle, ordered to fire. Four times in succession he pierced the hat within two inches of the centre. The wager was willingly paid, and considerately handed to the sharp-shooter as a tribute to his skill. As the loser remarked, "it don't pay very well to bet on stock you know nothing about." The young man afterwards remarked to a bystander, that he never missed anything he could see.

Such is a brief sketch of Price and his noble little army—the only organized body of men in the Confederacy who have thus far lived up to the inspired "droppings," A part of which I have already quoted:—

"Come with the weapons at your call,
With musket, pike and knife;
He wields the deadliest blade of all,
Who lightest holds his life!"

In conclusion I may add that "Dad Price and his boys" are now here, and in a position where the "hand-writing upon the wall" of their future fame will go down to posterity inscribed with the crimson tide they will draw from the hearts of the enemy.

OUR FOREIGN RELATIONS.

It will be seen by the following note from Mr. Seward that a mass of correspondence concerning our foreign relations is withheld from publication for the present:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, July 11, 1862.

The Secretary of State, to whom was referred the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 9th of last month, requesting the President "if, in his opinion, it is not incompatible with the public service, to submit to this House whatever information he possesses concerning the relations existing between this country and foreign powers," has the honor to report that considerable progress has been made in preparing an answer to the resolution; but the correspondence upon the subject is so voluminous, and the indispensable current of business of this Department is so pressing in proportion to its force, that it will be impracticable to comply with the resolution at this session. The information will, however, be ready for communication at the beginning of next session, or, if possible exigencies should demand such a course, it may be made public in advance of that period.

Respectfully submitted,
WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

The President.

THE POSTAGE STAMP CURRENCY BILL.

BE IT ENACTED by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be and he is hereby directed to furnish to the Assistant Treasurers and such designated depositaries of the United States as may be by him selected, in such sums as he may deem expedient, the postage and other stamps of the United States, to be exchanged by them, on application, for United States notes; and from and after the 1st day of August next such stamps shall be receivable in exchange for United States notes when presented to any Assistant Treasurer or any designated depositary selected as aforesaid, in sums not less than five dollars.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That from and after the 1st day of August, 1862, no private corporation, banking association, firm or individual shall make, issue, circulate or pay any note, check, memorandum, token or other obligation, for a less sum than one dollar, intended to circulate as money or to be received or used in lieu of lawful money of the United States; and every person so offending shall, on conviction thereof in any District or Circuit Court of the United States, be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or by both, at the option of the Court.

Approved July 17, 1862.

THE APPREHENSIONS REGARDING THE BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD.

Special Despatch to the New York Tribune.

OAKLAND, Md., Monday, July 21.—Recent news from Winchester created, for a time, among easily-alarmed people at Martinsburg and Cumberland, some vague apprehensions for the safety of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, and fears to that effect have been thrown out by passing correspondents; but they are now found to be quite groundless. The business of the road proceeds without anxiety or interruption.

Immense trains of live stock are passing this point day and night. Everything indicates the most vigorous military operations. Western shippers exhibit a lively confidence, and there is no intelligence from the valley yesterday or to-day to disturb the feeling of security which prevails along the whole line.

General Kelley's arrangements are perfect, and officers of the army and of the road know of nothing to be anxious about.

HOW GENERAL MCCALL WAS CAPTURED.—The capture of Gen. McCall, according to a letter received by his wife, was in this wise: He had posted one of the regiments of his division in a particular locality, and during his absence it was moved without his orders or knowledge. When he returned from another part of the field the place was occupied by a Confederate regiment, and it being dark he rode into the midst of the enemy, was surrounded and carried to Gen. Lee's headquarters a prisoner of war.—Providence Post.

Esteemed Friend—Will thou send me another case of thy Bitters. Nothing has proven so beneficial or agreeable to my invalid wife and myself, as the Plantation Bitters.

SEVENTY MILES SAVED IN GOING TO CAPE MAY. We would say to persons visiting Cape May, that by laying over in Wilmington, instead of going on to the city of "Brotherly Love," they can save seventy miles of travel, and have their baggage taken care of by a responsible person, thereby securing a night's rest. After partaking of an excellent breakfast at the Indian Queen Hotel, Fifth and Market streets, they can take the cars at 9.30 A. M. for Newcastle, and arrive there at 12 M. for the boat.

INDIAN QUEEN HOTEL.—Travellers speak highly of the Indian Queen Hotel, Wilmington, Del. There is no better conducted public house, it is said, this side the Atlantic seaboard. Everything that a guest may wish may be had at small cost, together with the kindest possible treatment. The house is well ventilated, the sofas are soft and downy, and the latest modern household conveniences to be met with in every direction. The table groans with luxuries, and the bar is filled with the purest and best of liquors. Many of our readers should stop in Wilmington over night, they would be much pleased, we know, by stopping with Mr. Chas. M. ALMOND, of the Indian Queen.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 17, 1862.

GEO. PEARSON, Esq.

Dear Sir—I feel it a duty to express to you my sincere acknowledgments of the benefit derived from the use of a package of your MEDICATED TAR DROPS.

I was suffering with a SEVERE COUGH and SORE THROAT, when a friend presented me with a package of your celebrated TAR DROPS, and when I used them, I was free to confess it was more to gratify my appetite for sweetmeats than the idea of deriving any good from them; but really, the rapid allaying of the irritation and subsequent entire cure of the cough, induces me to thank you, and I take great pleasure in recommending to the public so effective a compound. Respectfully yours, J. E. SMITH, M. D., Assistant Surgeon Artillery Brigade U. S. A.

PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS are prepared and sold by GEO. PEARSON, No. 5 North Liberty street, Baltimore, at 10 cents per package. Sold also by all the principal Druggists. je21-tf

Seven years' use of this article has conclusively proved its staple excellence. Its quality has been maintained with the utmost uniformity through a series of years, and it may be relied upon in the future, as in the past, for an uniformity of article. It contains more Ammonia and Phosphate of Lime than any fertilizer sold in this country, and is therefore of greater real value. It is the most convenient, economical and permanent fertilizer in use.

We also offer to consumers

This article is tried and reliable. It is manufactured exclusively for our sales, under guarantee and forfeiture of $100, to be of given standard. The remarkable article is imported from Sombrero Island, and is unanimously claimed by the chemists and richest source of Calcareous Phosphate of Lime known. The whole island is a bed of Guano, and its value to agriculture cannot be overestimated. It is sold in a perfectly fine powder, and is admirably adapted for combining with PERUVIAN GUANO.

It is established on the plan of a private family; offering a home to each of a series of years, and it may be regarded as a substitute, so far as may be, or parental care and home influence upon the future, as in the past, for the uniformity of its associations. Pupils are received at ten years of age and upwards, and thoroughly prepared for College or for Business. The number of pupils is limited to thirty, which combines to the personal comfort of the boys, their sound intellectual and moral training, faithful supervision, and individual improvement. The Chestnut Hill is a Country Seat of 130 acres and is unsurpassed in natural beauty and entire healthfulness. There is but one session in the year, beginning on the FIRST WEDNESDAY IN SEPTEMBER, and ending the last Wednesday in June.
