New Commission Demands Action to Better Conditions

ties be improved as much as possible to help relieve the situation.

It cited the need for more adequate training facilities for nurses and doctors, additional beds at Crownsville Hospital for the Insane and at Henryton Tuberculosis Hospital.

The police department and Commission Atkinson were lauded for improved service opportunities given colored men and for the friendly community relationship existing.

In the field of education, the commission suggested that attempts be made to supply at Morgan State College part of the demand for post graduate and professional study.

At the luncheon meeting Thursday at the Stafford Hotel, the new commission reviewed the purpose and program of the organization—its operational setup and the appointment of committees.

The group will meet about once every three months, doing most of its work through committees, Joseph P. Healy, chairman, presided.

Present were Dr. D. O. W. Holmes, Walter T. Dixon, Dr. Glen D. Brown, Thomas J. Healy, George D. Hicks, David S. Jenkins, Judge Joseph Kolodny, Judge Joseph C. Mattingly; William J. Muth, Senator Harry T. Phoebus, Dr. Robert H. Riley, Bishop A. Preston Shaw, D. T. S. Symons and Josiah F. Henry Jr., the executive secretary.

Absent were Mrs. Lucille Fitzgerald, Mrs. Vivian Alleyne and Col. Thomas B. McAdams, who is in the hospital.

Penalty of 10 Years

ELIZABETH—A term of 10 years was meted out to David S. Moore of 53 Gray Ave., Vaux Hall, on Monday in Common Pleas Court for fatally stabbing his cousin, Samuel Lee Haynes, 25, at their home in an altercation over a package of cigarettes. Moore pleaded no defense.

All Fuel Prices Hiked in City

pensary, to which needy persons were referred through official channels.

Citizens Take Own Action

Nothing is being done about the black marketeer at the corner.

Citizens in one outlying section of the city took matters in their own hands, however, and forced coal sellers to abandon a black market plan.

All users of coal, these householders were offered the proposition of either buying coal at an exorbitant price by the bushel or getting none at all.

They told their regular dealer they would not pay the high bushel price to him—that they would get it from some other dealer and that when the shortage is eased they will continue to buy from another dealer.

The little black market scheme was nipped in the bud.

Profiteering Continues

In another instance, however, a regular user of coal has been unable to fill his bin for three weeks because he refuses to buy the bushel rather than by the ton.

He normally pays $17 per ton for his coal. He has been offered coal by the bushel at 85 cents. A ton of coal at this price would cost him about $23 or some $5 more than the normal price.

The coal situation is nothing like as serious as the oil problem, and the confusing reason for the nationwide fuel shortage is the advancement of more "little people" into a higher living bracket.

More Oil Being Used

There are nearly a million more passenger cars on the roads than there were five years ago; and the drivers who formerly asked for two gallons of gasoline are now getting full tanks.

More homes have converted to oil burners; fewer are using coal. Military requirements have increased in proportion to the manpower increase, which has soared from 150,000 in the Armed Forces before the war to more than 3 million at present.

Before the war, Mr. Average Man used petroleum products requiring 367 gallons of oil. He now uses products requiring 608 gallons.

And the best authoritative estimates are that the fuel oil shortage may not be eased for another five years.

This, then, is the situation about which Baltimore officials can do nothing. The black market is simply being ignored.

Changing Fuel No Solution

The State fuel co-ordinator's office is encouraging householders to replace their grates and use coal instead of oil where possible. But this will only shift the black market.

One neighborhood store operator reports that as of two weeks ago, his dealer demands that he takes 50 bags of soft coal in order to get 50 bags of hard coal, which is more widely used.

The "gouging" of oil continues. One store insists that customers buy at least $1 worth of groceries before they can get a gallon of kerosene.

But, it's plenty warm in the municipal buildings.

AMONG THE SUFFERING—Elderly Miss Janie Gamble stumbles along to her home in the 1300 block Parrish St., after seeking oil at the corner grocery store. When she finds kerosene, she is forced to pay black market prices, yet she cannot even afford a coat.

New Attempt Made to Keep Residents Off Fayette St.

house before occupying it and assumed colored families were about to move in.

The repeated attacks of vandalism have been reported to police of the Southwestern district station located three blocks away.

Through Thursday, however, no special police protection had been provided. The new occupants stated that occasionally, a radio police car would cruise by but that was the extent of protection.

The incident has been referred to the NAACP for possible future action, it was learned.

This latest incident occurred seven blocks from a similar happening which was reported from 713 Fayette St., last October.

At that time, Carnell Simmons, a war veteran, fired a well-aimed shot through the forehead of a white seaman.

The latter attempted to keep the occupants of 713 from leaving the home, the doorway of which had been mysteriously set afire.

A Western district police magistrate dismissed Simmons, declaring that "a man has a right to protect his home."

2 to Talk on FEPC

Mr. Henderson, executive secretary of the National Council for a Permanent FEPC and Mr. Mitchell, NAACP labor secretary, will discuss problems of getting Federal legislation for fair employment practices. Both are native Baltimoreans.

Musical highlights of the program will include the appearance of Prof. Isadore Oglesby, lyric tenor, a Hampton Institute graduate and former member of the Dett choral group, who is now an instructor at Morgan College. The Etude Choral Society will also be featured.

CLARENCE MITCHELL

Girl, 22, Fined $26

Twenty-two-year-old Ella May Nelson learned that she would have to "dress" herself in some other manner, this week, when she was fined $26.45 in Western police court for shoplifting a frock from a downtown store.

Firm Faith Needed, Dillard Students Told

NEW ORLEANS—"There is a greater need for firm faith in our institutions, especially the Church," Dr. A. O. Wilson, pastor of St. James AME Church, and former president of Shorter College, Little Rock, Ark., told an audience at Dillard University recently.

smuggled into the institution around Jan. 2 and 4.

It was intimated that the woman slipped the pistol into the prison during a visit to Beasley, who is serving a 18-year-term for armed robbery in Prince Georges County.

The woman, also identified under an alias of Mary Beasley, was arrested in New York last week after FBI, detective bureau, and State's attorney's office launched an investigation which swept from Washington to New York.

Attorneys appointed to represent the pair are Douglass Sharrets and Bernard Carrick.

ARE YOU SUPERSTITIOUS?

Fear of Friday 13th Losing Grip on Many

happenings on the day in question. Two others who all but stand in "fear and trembling" over what may happen also believe implicitly in numerous other superstitions.

Most popular is the belief that bad luck comes after a black cat has crossed your path. Antidotes very from spitting to turning three times to the left.

Mrs. Marian V. Coombs, executive secretary of the Planned Parenthood Clinic, recalled that a black cat crossed her path one Friday 13th when she took her final college examinations. She passed every one.

A few persons who throw salt over their shoulder after waiting it, rap on wood, or hesitate to take the last piece of bread from a plate, confess it's all more or less from force of habit.

However, Miss Pearl Snowden of 2417 Francis St. holds to a list of superstitions which keep her from:

Putting a hat on the bed, hanging clothes on the door knob, "splitting a pole when walking with a group."

Miss Amelia Harris, 704 N. Calhoun St., beauty school instructor, believes that anyone of other left-handed persons have several years of "running bad luck."

She will not sweep dirt out of the house after sundown, nor she be the 13th in anything.

Joseph Garner, 123 W. Aliceanna St., Frederick, Md., has a black cat birthmark on his ankle. He saw many Friday 13ths as a soldier in two World Wars. Having escaped injury during battles, he thinks the day is lucky.

Tersely, Warren Sparrow of 940 Booth St. said, "I'm a fact finder and have not time for superstitions."

YOU may not be as free of these beliefs as you think you are. So, if (unconsciously) you rap on wood before going to bed the night of Friday the 13th, remember you are following an age-old custom.

The gesture signifies gratitude for Christ who died on a cross of wood.

was later picked up and held pending a Juvenile Court hearing on charges of neglect.

Complaints that the children were being left alone in the basement in the 1200 block McCulloh St. were first received by Policewoman Carolyn Robinson, who referred them to Mrs. Whyte because the case was locating in the western district.

On Thursday morning, the children were again supplied with milk and other food by police.

Parents Feted

The YAGs entertained their parents last week with an original program at a parents' reception. Highlight was an address by Mrs. Alice Matthews, on "Growing Up With Our Children."

Mrs. Matthews urged parents to join child study clubs, attend lectures, read magazines, encourage children in their many and varied activities, and to work for their children, love them, and to remember that the understanding, sympathetic parent is the growing parent.
