Army Nurse Spring Bride of New Yorker

with Lula Jones Garrett

By LOUISE K. HINES

The spring season promises a goodly crop of weddings, among them a gala merger set for Saturday when Margaret Elizabeth Wilson will plight her troth to Kenneth Wesley Daley of New York at the Lanvale St. home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn L. Wilson.

The Rev. Joshua O. Williams will officiate at the double ring ceremonies. Wearing the traditional white satin, Miss Wilson has selected a bustle style gown with a train.

Her finger-tip length veil is of white illusion, and she will carry a bouquet of white lilies and roses.

Lone attendant will be her sister, Miss Jean Wilson, who will wear aqua taffeta with a matching halo-style hat with rose-trimmed brim. She will carry pink roses.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Daley, the bridegroom is a native New Yorker, and an employee of the municipal transit company there. His best man is Raymond Waters.

Some 200 persons have been invited to the reception following. The couple will forego the traditional honeymoon trip for the thrill of settling in their own little love nest in the Big City's Riverton Apartments.

Incidentally, the bride is an Army nurse with the title of First Lieutenant. She's a graduate of Lincoln Hospital and is now stationed at Fort Dix, N.J.

CAROLYN E. BARNES BRIDE-ELECT, FETED

Chalk up for the coming nuptials that of Miss Carolyn E. Barnes, local teacher to David Bunyan Buford of Washington, on Saturday next at St. James Church.

Miss Barnes was honored at a buffet luncheon and lingerie shower on Wednesday at the Appleton St. home of Miss Carrie Peat.

About were Alma Arvin, Graycie Hazzard, Sarah Rodgers, Mary C. Carter, Bernice B. Spruill, Helen Hill, Nancy King, Mildred Finch, Mary G. Jacobs, Rebecca Dixon, Margaret Wilson, Eunice Alston, Florence Dennis and Edith Evans.

EASTER BONNETS VIE WITH FUR COATS

Zippy winds sent the new length skirts affying on Sunday, and it was a wise gal who took into her fur coat and depended on her bonnet for the spring touch.

And speaking of bonnets, seven of the flowery, frilling numbers garnered gorgeous orchids for lucky ladies who passed a trio of shivering judges at the corner of Druid Hill Ave. and Dolphin St.

With the compliments of the Millinery Council, the blossoms went to a group from which Hilda Parker emerged the winner. Bonus gift was a hat of her own picking, also with the compliments of the hat makers.

LAQUINTA COZART CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

Charming little LaQuinta Cozart, lucky to have her fourth birthday on Easter, called in a score or more of her little friends to to make merry at her home, 418 Oxford Ct.

She's the daughter of Mrs. Julia B. Cozart. Her guests were Harrison M. Tucker, 3rd, Gordon Wright, Patricia Covington, Deborah Garland, Bernetta Hux, Elizabeth Martin, Gloria Scott, Valerie Bellamy, Annetta Painter and brother Montague, Edward and Henry Stanley, Donald Gregory, Betty Robinson and sisters, Sally and Linda.

Leroy and Eugene Gray, Patricia Fields, Alline and Ines Eubanks, Ulysses Bellamy and others.

EASTER SETTING FOR WOODFORD PARTY

In a holiday setting of Easter bunnies, colored eggs and jelly beans, the older son of the Woodfords, Charles Jr., prepared to 30 members of the small fry when he celebrated his third birthday on Saturday.

The vivacious little tots "took over" the rumpus room and played games led by Grace Burkett.

Merry makers were Anne Carroll, Barbara Ann Lewis, Patricia Greene, Constance Carroll, Patricia Nichols, Jeannette Mebane, Antoinette Carter, Carol Lynne Spencer,

Judith and Joan Sessoms, June Burkett, Ambia V. Patterson, Treanne Beverly, Charlotte Ann Robinson, Pamela and Denise Russell, Jacqueline and Kenna Bass;

Carroll S. Woodford, Edward Wilkens Jr, William Lewis Jr., James Mebane 3rd, Allan Bush, Howard Lee Cornish Jr., William Beverly Jr., Lawrence Robinson Jr., James and Milton A. Dugger Jr.; Francis B. Edmond and Michael Press.

HOWARD U. ALUMNI TO HEAR D.C. ATTORNEY

The Baltimore Chapter of the Howard University Alumni Association will meet tonight (Friday) at 1527 Myrtle Ave. to hear Emory Smith, D.C. lawyer. Sponsors of the get-together are the local Howard U. lawyers.

Guests of honor will be the Chapter Day Committee of Baltimore and Washington. Roy Bond is proxy, Ruth Lighton, secretary, and Dr. Ralph Young, treasurer.

PHI BETA SIGMAS PLAN CONFERENCE

When the Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity met on the 19th with Dr. J. E. T. Camper, plans were completed for the Eastern District Regional Conference which meets here April 23 to 25.

The Sigmas, incidentally, are sponsoring a benefit performance of "Black Woman in White," by the Morgan Players to aid its Cheltenham Library Fund.

John Tilghman, Dunbar High School Leader was initiated into the body.

At the meeting were Drs. Bernard Harris, Douglass Camper, G. Franklin Phillips, Evan A. Gilkes, Bernard Christmas and Robert J. Hill; the Revs. Lyndsai Pitts, and G. Dewey Robinson; also George W. Smith, Leo Wood, G. Sumner Whyte, Vernon L. Greene, Leroy Gibson, John W. Woodhous, William T. Buckner and William Dorsey.

Honorees at a buffet supper given by Mr. and Mrs. George L. Skinner of 2360 McCulloh St., were their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Parker of Bronx, NYC, and their son, George.

Guests were Messrs. and Mesdames Webster Robinson, Dorsey Hampton, Robert Clark, Samuel

Previewing the Latest in Business Equipment

Office equipment held the attention of these teachers at the three-day convention. Looking over tabulating machines are, left to right, Mrs. Hazel B. Johnston and Mrs. Alma C. Hawkins of Washington, Mrs. Gertrude Covington of Philly, and Miss B. Ernestine Washington, also from the nation's capital.

Reveal Results of 5-Year Study of Problem Children

Project Centered in Harlem Schools Because of High Court Rate; Teachers, Board Blamed

NEW YORK, N.Y.—(NNPA)—A five-year study of "problem children" in three Harlem schools has convinced a group of New York educators that schools can cut down delinquency and check maladjustments among youngsters "by special services, enriched curriculum, special help and training for teachers in under privileged areas."

These findings were made known last Monday at a press conference at the home of Dr. Marion E. Kenworthy, professor, New York School of Social Work, who was vice chairman of the study, referred to as the "Harlem Project."

Participating in the study with 17 other members were Judge Hubert T. Delaney of Domestic Relations Court, and Channing H. Tobias, director of the Phelps-Stokes Foundation.

Joint Undertaking

The project represented a joint undertaking by the Board of Education and New York citizenry concerned with the role of the school in preventing maladjustment and delinquency. It included the introduction of new services and the study of children's problems in three Harlem schools.

While other project members hailed it as clearly demonstrating that public schools can reduce the anti-social behavior of underprivileged children, Dr. Tobias at through such a study could fully warned that no methods arrived by eradicate the evils of a "blighted area" such as the one in Harlem brought on by the nation's social policies.

"Gentlemen's Agreement"

"Hedged in, hemmed in, by common understanding — or gentlemen's agreement — they are not going to have the inspiration to go ahead and build up what this program has provided for them," Dr. Tobias declared.

Workers on the project went into the schools, observed the methods used by teachers, made friends with gang leaders and "bad boys" of the school and then wrote criticizing analytical reports on their observations. They criticized the Board of Education and teachers.

The substance of the criticism of teachers was that they did not have the interest of their pupils at heart. The board was scored for not screening out, or selecting, people who are concerned with children who have problems and wish to help them."

Teachers' Attitudes

The project stated that many Harlem teachers took the "Siberia viewpoint" that is they considered themselves exiled when sent to teach in Harlem. The difference in attitude was reflected by teachers hostile to the project and that of teachers advocating the "mental hygiene approach" which the project approves.

In line with its mental hygiene approach, the project opposed corporal punishment, defeated a plan to set up special schools for "unmanageable" girls, established a Guidance Clinic and concluded that the establishment of special probationary schools are an admission of educational failure.

Bare Facts

Harlem was chosen because statistics showed that four Harlem schools contributed over 50% of all court commitments from the whole of Manhattan. One school had such a concentration of problems that one child in every five was known to the court, the police, or a social agency as a delinquent.

At one school the committee sought to find whether children's maladjustments could be recognized and handled earlier, at another it tried to learn whether the truancy rate could be reduced and improvement maintained and information sought as to whether "unmanageable" girls could be adjusted within a regular school providing special services.
