The toast of three continents...

EVANTI

It was a proud moment in the lives of Dr. and Mrs. Bruce Evans of Washington, D.C. when their four-year-old daughter, Lillian, in pinafore and cotton stockings stood on a stool in Friendship Gardens to sing for charity.

It was a great hour for America when that child, grown to magnificent womanhood, covered herself with glory in her native Washington at the Water Gate, in her best-known role of Violetta in "La Traviata". Handsomely costumed in gowns of her own design and handiwork . . . singing her own English translation of Verdi's masterpiece . . . she lived the famous role as it never before had been seen or heard.

The famous aria, "Ah, Fors e Lui" brought an audience of 30,000 to its feet with cries of "Evanti"!, "Evanti"! "Bravo"! Critics acclaimed her brilliant performance.

Madame Evanti conceives it to be her mission not merely to entertain but to inspire her audiences with the beauty and power of music. She sees music as one of the most democratic arts, reaching the greatest number of people of all races and of all classes. She has said, "If you can persuade multitudes to sing together — or even to listen together — you have solved many of their most wearisome problems. Walt Whitman was right when he prophesied . . . I Hear America Singing . . . We shall come to that one day."

Evanti has blazed the way for the Negro in Grand Opera and it is her fervent hope that many more will prepare themselves to excel in this singing dramatic art.

From Triumph to Triumph

Evanti, the first American woman of her race to sing in Grand Opera, made her debut at Nice, France, in "Lakme". Since then she has appeared with outstanding success in almost every European and South American Country and has a repertoire of 24 operas to her credit. Critics have acclaimed Evanti the greatest coloratura since Gallicurci . . . the most stirring emotional actress since Bernhardt and Nazimova.

Throngs have listened in hushed amazement at the tremendous appeal of Evanti in Madison Square Garden. She has given brilliant concerts at the White House at the request of the President of the United States.

The Good Neighbor

As a Good Will Ambassadress, this world-famous coloratura has made three tours of Latin American countries, singing her way into the hearts of our neighbors South of the Border.

So imbued with music at its best is Evanti that she is the creator of many fine compositions, the most famous of which is her "Himno Pan-Americano", which has been published in English, Spanish and Portuguese. This musical tie with our sister Republics had its introduction in Mexico by the dramatic soprano Maria Luisa Escobar.

One Eye On Hollywood

If you ever want to know who is playing in what picture . . . and what the leading lady wears . . . just ask Mrs. Rea. She's a Hollywood fan from way back. She loves pictures.

Naturally, Mrs. Rea has a highly developed style sense. She knows what's smart in clothes.

Shortly after she graduated from Douglass High, she discovered Hendin's Hollywood Fashions and has been a steady patron ever since.

Mrs. Rea prefers the New Look, but not the extreme lengths. One of the things she particularly likes about Hendin's is that "they take such great pains to see that you get a perfect fit."

Mrs. Rea and her husband, who is with the Afro, both love basketball and are anxiously awaiting the debut of the 1948 season.

Hendin's salutes two fine people.
