3 WAC Officers Honored at Lee

CAMP LEE, Va. — The Camp Lee Officers' Lounge held an informal reception Thursday for three WAC officers, the first to arrive at Camp Lee since the activation of the Women's Army Corps Training Center.

They are scheduled to be assigned to a training course for incoming WAC enlistees.

Honored at the reception were Capt. Berenice Hughes, Lt. Ann G. Hall and Lt. Doris N. Williamson. Capt. Hughes came to Camp Lee from Fort Ord, Calif., where she served as commanding officer of WAC Detachment, 6003rd Army Service Unit.

Lt. Hall and Lt. Williamson, who were members of the original WAAC in its young days, were recently recalled to active duty after having been separated from the service for a short time.

Dudley in High Diplomatic Post

WASHINGTON

While three of the world's darker nations maintain diplomatic headquarters in Washington, a careful scrutiny of United States representatives to foreign countries reveals that only one colored person holds a high diplomatic post abroad.

Edward R. Dudley, Minister to Liberia, the third colored person ever to hold an envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary position for the United States, is the sole appointee. Preceding Minister Dudley were Lester Walton and Dr. R. O. Lanier, under the Roosevelt-Truman administration.

The duty of a member of Foreign Service is to carry out American foreign policy abroad. Diplomacy is as ancient as government itself, for it is found in the earliest records of Egypt, 6,000 years ago, along with the achievements of ambassadors and ministers.

Congress Sets Policy

In American constitutional practice, the President is charged with the responsibility for the conduct of foreign relations of the United States. The Secretary of State is his agent; the Department of State, the staff, and the Foreign Service, the field agency.

Policies are determined by Congress and the President, with the help of the Secretary and the Department of State, and are executed abroad by the Foreign Service.

The United States exchanges ambassadors (ambassadors extraordinary and plenipotentiary) and ministers (envoys extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary) with all foreign powers with which diplomatic relations are maintained.

These ambassadors and ministers are stationed in the capitals of the respective countries, and their offices, residences and staffs are known as embassies or legations.

Diplomatic Immunity

Through international custom, it is generally understood that diplomatic immunity extends not only to an ambassador's or minister's office, but to his residence and the residences of his staff and their families as well.

This immunity derives from that of the ambassador and minister and is not the perogative of any staff member because of his duties or functions.

In according with international practice, the United States accredits diplomatic representatives to countries with which it maintains friendly relations.

These representatives bear the title of ambassador or minister. In diplomatic language, the ambassador or minister is termed to be a "mission" and is therefore referred to as "chief of mission."

New Policy

Historically, embassies headed by ambassadors were maintained in the larger foreign countries and legations in the smaller countries.

In recent years, however, the United States has maintained embassies in all of the other American republics and in some of the smaller countries abroad, so that the size or importance of the country no longer necessarily determines which is appointed.

After the Ceremony Was Over

Mr. and Mrs. John Littleton Anderson II are shown leaving the Fourth Baptist Church, Richmond after their wedding on Sunday, Oct. 10. The bride is the former Susan Hortense Poindexter.

Union Alumni, Students Plan Homecoming Fete

RICHMOND—Miss Emma Bradley was named chairman of the homecoming celebration at Virginia Union University scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 30, when Union and Virginia State College clash on the gridiron.

An alumnus of Union, Miss Bradley is an instructor in Richmond's Armstrong High School as well as a part-time instructor at the university. She is a member of the AKA Sorority and is president of the John W. Barco chapter of the Union National Alumni Association.

Other features of the homecoming affair will include a theatre party on Friday night under the auspices of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity, the crowning of "Miss Homecoming" by the Vanity Club on Saturday afternoon, an invitational dance on Saturday night in the Belgian Building under the sponsorship of the National Panther Club.

Mr. Bucles, director of athletics, presided at the meeting. Others present included William Copeland for the YMCA and senior class; Fred Cooper, junior class; Richard Ballard Jr., student council; Marshall Reed, Sphinx Club; David E. Whitlock Jr., Omega Psi Phi Fraternity; Earl Johns, Varsity Club and Alpha Phi Alpha; Mr. Hayes, Coach Sam Taylor, Dr. G. J. McGuinn, Dean T. H. Henderson and J. R. Plott of the alumni group.
