Singing Groups Announce Series

Local music-lovers are eagerly awaiting the first of a series of concerts to be given at Sharp St. Methodist Church within the next few months by the Baltimore Singers and their affiliated choral groups.

The first of these, featuring the Baltimore Singers, will be held on Nov. 9. The second of the series is scheduled for Dec. 21, and will feature the Baltimore Chorale, a 75-voice group consisting of the Marie Murphy Singers. This program will include Christmas music.

Last concert of the series will be held Feb. 18. Gerald Burks Wilson is conductor of the singing groups; G. Bernard Young, manager, and Randolph Tate, chairman.

This is the second year the popular singing groups have rendered concert series of this type.

Orchestra, Chorus Begin Rehearsals

Rehearsals will begin on Sunday at the Douglass High School from 2 to 6 p.m. by the Baltimore City Orchestra and Chorus, directed by W. Llewellyn Wilson, according to Earl F. Forman, acting superintendent of the Bureau of Music.

The concert will be given on Friday, Dec. 3 in the high school auditorium at 8:30 p.m. Soloists for the concert will be selected shortly and announced in this paper.

This excellent group of musicians and singers will again present an outstanding program, and as usual the concert is free to the public.

Orioles Get Date in D.C. Nitery

The "Orioles," who are flying high with their smash hit recording of "It's Too Soon to Know" on the National label, check into Perusso's, one of the leading niteries in the nation's capital, Nov. 2, for a two-week engagement.

Soaring from the confines of a Baltimore night club to nationwide prominence via their disc hit, the "Orioles" have just this week played a record-breaking date at the Howard Theatre in Washington.

Among the latest honors bestowed upon the group was the selection of their disc of "It's Too Soon to Know" by the Michigan Coin Machine Operators Association as "Record of the Month," meaning it will have the No. 1 spot on every jukebox in the State of Michigan during the month of November.

Ink Spots Open at Ball Tonight

WASHINGTON

Benny Caldwell, proprietor of the Club Ball, is continuing to fulfill his promise to Washington nitery habitues by booking the famed Ink Spots for a seven-day stint beginning tonight (Friday).

This famed quartet featuring Tenor Bill Kenny is familiar to Washingtonians, as he is a native of nearby Baltimore and at one time attended the local Dunbar High School.

As many followers of the Ink Spots' theatrical fortunes are aware, they got their "big break" with their recording of "If I Didn't Care," which was waxed about 10 years ago.

Although, only two of the original members, Kenny and Charlie Fugua, remain with the aggregation, as Hoppy Jones, the bassist died about three years ago, and Deck Watson, the rhythm-singing baritone, deserted the outfit to go on his own, they are still among the top rated acts.

Platter Matter

"COLD COLD WOMAN"—That's what Floyd Tillman calls his spouse on a Columbia platter as he mourns his unhappy lot in married life. It's a novelty with string band accompaniment. On the flip-over, Floyd entreats his girl friend for another chance on "Please Don't Pass Me By."

Thrill-Packed Film at Regent

William Bendix and James Cagney in a gripping scene from "The Time of Your Life," currently playing the Regent Theatre. The couplet is "Angry God."

"Johnny Belinda" One of Year's Best Melodramas

Played against the background of a severe Nova Scotia coast, "Johnny Belinda" tells the story of a slave (played by Jane Wyman), everyone on the farm and in the nearby village calls "the dummy."

Into this community comes a city doctor (Lew Ayres), wearied of the stress and pull of urban existence preferring instead the noble life of the province. His attention goes to the dummy because she is a faithful, willing worker and seems forever doomed to be cut off from the world around her.

Doctor Provides Inspiration

How he helps her to level the barriers and bring her to the joys —and sorrows—of the world form the more inspirational part of the drama.

The bitter part is thrust upon her by the village bully who in a drunken moment rapes her. The story goes on through the inevitable process of condemning the doctor until the deaf-mute, so shocked by events that she cannot identify her violator shoots the father of her child when he attempts to take it from her.

There is much more to the story, sweeping up to a heart-breaking climax and then to a fine reasonable and satisfying ending and, in all, telling a thoroughly human, honestly emotional talk which is always at your heart.

Miss Wyman Superb

Miss Wyman gives one of the talking screen's sincerest performances. She not only creates "the dummy" but she dresses the part and turns every trace of glamour to create as tragic a figure as the screen has had in years. Her entire performance is almost entirely in her eyes—those of a simple child at first, then an awakening girl, finally a tragic mother — and in sympathetic appeal her work ranges from heaven to earth and back again.

Ayres as the doctor, who finds in this handicapped girl an outlet for his talents as well as his heart, gives sincerity and conviction to his part.

Agnes Moorehead as the girl's stern aunt well matches the soil and rock-ribbed coast until, at one moment in the play, she changes in a twinkling from the dominant to the utterly crushed, from the rigid aunt to a completely sympathetic maternal soul. That is when she learns that this hapless "child" is about to become a mother, and Miss Moorehead is superb in this moment.

Bickford Seen as Father

Charles Bickford as the honest, hard-working father who feels he is a stern disciplinarian is really an understanding and forthright parent. This quartet—Miss Wyman, Miss Moorehead, Ayres and Bickford—constantly assail the tender of emotions.

Against them is Stephen McNally, screen newcomer, in the role of the bully. He is in his way quite a fellow, not too bad when he is sober, consequently a most convincing villain when he is drunk. His performance gives strong contrast to the other portrayals.

Jan Sterling, as his giggling village sweetheart, is also good. The support is strong.

Boys' Choir in D.C. Musicale

The Baltimore Boys' Choir Inc. conducted by William Meredith H. Birche Jr., sang to a capacity audience when presented Sunday at the fashionable Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church Auditorium. The affair was sponsored by "The Gleaners," Miss Effie Simmons, president.

The young singers rendered a program of Bach, Beethoven, Fleming, Handel, Johnson and other contemporary composers. Outstanding was the work of Robert Diggs, soprano, and Emmanuel Franklin, baritone, who substituted and expressed her delight and admiration for regular soloists who were indisposed.

Miss Wyman Lillian Evanti, world famed diva, was among the patrons present. The choir will perform "Tomorrow" in a Baltimore concert their youthful conductor at the re-cert noon.
