WASHINGTON

Ted Gandy, director of Public Health Service in Santiago, Chile, sent daughter Barbara a ticket with instructions to fly to Santiago on an early day in November.

But when Barbara remembered that her friend, Elena Knox, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. O. Knox, was being married to Austin Greaux on Nov. 26, she knew she simply couldn't miss the wedding.

So Daddy Gandy fixed the ticket and the charming Barbara will get the late Dr. John M. Gandy, a June graduate of Fisk and will study at Boston University upon her return next February.

SAID DR. JOHNSON

"We learn about Howard University, not from the University's walls, but by reading the lives of its graduates." And so, in an address, Saturday, at Frazier Hall, Dr. Johnson thanked the Howard University Alumni Association for pausing twice a year to honor Howard graduates who have distinguished themselves during the year.

Among those receiving citations were Mrs. Julia B. Wilson, for her effective work in the Monroe Laboratory School; Charles Lofton for his elevation to the principalship of Dunbar High School; Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, because of his position as president of the National Medical Association, and because of his militant activities in the interest of minority groups; Walter Washington, attorney, for heading a huge housing project;

Albert Brooks, assistant principal, Bennecker Junior High School, associate editor in the office of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History was honored, not only because of promotion in D.C. schools, but for work with human racial groups; Roscoe Evans won recognition for extraordinary record in the D.C. schools and for excellence in the field of public relations;

Dean Russell Dixon of the Howard University School of Dentistry, though not a Howard graduate, raised the standards of the dental school so high and built up the name and the fame of Howard into so many ace-high organizations, the luncheon committee simply couldn't pass him by. Dr. Samuel Bullock, brother of Vice Mayor Bullock, the mistress of ceremonies, was due a citation too, but he was out of town, so Portia, took his gift home.

Among those making remarks were Mrs. Florence D. Laws, Dr. Albert Hughes, Francis Lee, Dr. Auzene, Mrs. Muriel Alexander, Dr. Millard Dean, and George E. Williams, who presented the program was music by Mrs. Frances Hall and F. Greene and reports by Mesdames Norma C. Bacchus and Marion V. Coombs.

Miss Linnie R. Smith, president of the Association, wearing a dark suit, snappy hat and shoes of 1949 design, made a brief speech. Dr. Ruth Moore of the Howard University School of Medicine, gave a sketch of some of the girls and named the alumni who won them.

Mrs. Mary Church Terrell added to Dr. Hughes' citation—for Dr. Marshall, "and he's a good dancer, I know, because I danced with him myself, years ago."

The luncheon committee included Portia C. Bullock, Muriel Alexander, Emma Manning, Pearle Minor, Louise Tyler, Charles P. Jenkins, Edward Edwards, Fairfax Lomack, Julia Davis, Mayme Mehlinger, Bernice Finney, Grace Jacobs, Jeannette Thomas, Jeannette Carter, Harry Robinson.

Seen there were:

Dr. James Parker, Red Bank, N.J., trustee of Howard University; Dr. James Nabrit; Mesdames Velma Williams, Jennie Brown Lee, Claudia M. Bailey, Gladys S. Roberts, Cora Wilkinson, Bessie S. Coates, Mamie Stearns, Olivia Williams Baker, Russell Dixon, Carroll Brooks.

Mesdames Isadore Letcher, Elizabeth Howard, Bennetta Washington, Alice Elam, Marion Seymour, Misses Catherine Brooks, Grace Emanuel; Mr. and Mrs. C. Horace Fitchett; and Theodore Chambers.

SKINKERS GATHER

"Meet me at the Waldorf Astoria, Park and Lexington Avenues, November 20 at Noon, (Flamingo Room)." So read invitations sent out by Mrs. Ethel Skinker Lowry, wife of Dr. Edward Lowry of New York, to members and friends of the Vendrell le Trieze Bridge Club. And among those rushing up to New York for the swanky affair were Mrs. Lowry's three sisters, Mesdames Laura Skinker Pyles, Lillian Skinker Malone, Stella Skinker Evans.

JULIA'S TROOP IS MARCHING ON

Or rather, it was till Saturday 8 p.m. when W. P. Gant, chairman of that efficient committee that poured the Julia West Hamilton Testimonial Luncheon, October 15, met at Phyllis Wheatley YWCA to disband the gang.

In addition to saying how proud they were that they'd had the privilege of working for someone as grand as Julia, they handed her 329 more dollars to add to the 1200 they gave her the night of the fete. Such a gift, plus a plaque and a book with a "Dear Julia, I Love-You-Julia" letters included.

Mrs. Hamilton's son, Col. West A. Hamilton, got up in the open meeting and said, "Mother, you have many long, hard years ahead of you. Why don't you let us take care of you?"

Hostesses included Mrs. Moselle Henderson, chairman; Miss Gladys Stewart, looking like a picture snapped from fashion's page, in a dark green satin dress, feather-trimmed hat and high, high shoes; Misses Mechlaide Cardwell, Barbara Edwards.

Also assisting were Edward R. Brass and Walter M. Dawson. "Twas a gala evening, and come April 29 when the opera, "Aida" is will be shown at Uline Arena, National Negro Opera Company interest will be sky-high.

COMING AND GOING

Dr. and Mrs Drexel Harris of Brooklyn spent a few gay days with Mr. and Mrs. Perry J. Pitts. She is the former Anne Westerfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Pitts went to Birmingham this summer where Mrs. Harris, the former Miss Foster, and Dr. Harris were married, with Mrs. Pitts serving as one of the attendants. And a few years before, Miss Foster, as well as her sister, came to Washington to attend Miss Westerfield when she married Mr. Pitts, the season's most beautiful wedding. Mr. and Lorimer D. Milton of Atlanta, few town to preside at Howard University trustees' meeting, he having been elevated to the office of chairman recently. Dr. Samuel B. Milton, who was elected coroner of Wayne County, Michigan, on November 2, also came to town.

Mrs. George Quant and her two children, George Jr. and Theodore, pushed back from a vacation in New Orleans, La. to eat turkey with Dad. W. Justin Carter, attorney of Pittsburgh, son of the late W. Justin Carter, noted lawyer, trustee of Howard University and whatnot, was Thanksgiving Day guest of relatives, among them Miss Jeannette Carter. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bethea of 21st Street, N.E., are holidaying in Carolina. They took Gwendoyn Inman, their adorable two-month-old babe, along.

DR. TAYLOR MOVES

Dr. A. Langston of the Art Center at 1517 Vermont Avenue, N.W., is busier than any bee. The other day, besides collecting items for the center, he had to prepare a speech to be delivered at the Worthwhile Club which celebrated its 15th anniversary at the home of the president, Mrs. Ledonia Douglass.

The anniversary committee includes Mesdames Olivia Johnson, Portia Jones, Ruth Jefferson, Katie Hyman, Mary Owen; Messrs. Albert Jackson, and Heywood Johnson.

Group at Howard Doing Important Research Work

University Receives Third Appropriation to Continue Unit; Many 'Grads' Teaching

WASHINGTON

Prominent young scientists at Howard University are participating wholeheartedly in the research fellowship program in the physical science, basic to the atomic research and development which was started last Feb. 3, and in which eligible scientists of all races are participating.

The bulk of their research work is in radioactive isotopes involving work in the university's hospital, and in its chemistry, biology, engineering, pharmacy and home economics departments.

Gets 2nd $5,000 Grant

The scientists use the institution's cyclotron, the original atom-smasher. Howard also has developed scientific apparatus of its own for the project.

The university has just received another $5,000 grant to continue the project from the Research Corporation, a unique non-profit organization which annually distributes its net earnings among young scientists, especially in smaller colleges and universities, to enable them to carry on research of public interest.

The corporation has been supporting the project since its inception in 1946, when $7,500 was granted. The 1947 grant was $5,000.

Leading 'Graduates'

Typical "graduates" of the project are Dr. Frank Johnson and Edgar Williams at the University of Chicago, and George Sherard of George Ferguson at the University of Pennsylvania. Others have gone on to important jobs James Drew has become an in-ing and research posts.

Instructor in physics at Howard; Harvey Banks is a research assistant at Howard; Gladys Kirkland is an instructor in physics at Morehouse College, Atlanta; and Martin Brooks has joined the Naval Research Laboratory in Washington.

Prof. Lawrence B. Robinson, young Harvard Ph.D. co-ordinated the project is in charge of it, while its director, Prof. Herman Branson, is at California Institute of Technology of astatical leave. Mr. Branson is in California on a fellowship granted by the American Cancer Society.

Tops Science Meeting

An indication of the regard in which the Howard University project is held was given at the spring meeting of the National Institute of Science, at which 10 of the 28 papers presented stemmed directly from the Howard project.

Seven scientists who have worked on the project are now doing advanced work with the help of fellowships granted them by the Atomic Energy Commission. They are:

Prof. Hansborough and Branson on the metabolism of phosphorous; Dr. J. B. Johnson on the metabolism of cobalt; Robert J. Gmubondro, on a mass spectrometer; George A. Ferguson on an interval selector; Gilbert Smith on a high-speed sweep circuit, and Woodfin Lewis on the diffusion of radioactive cobalt in ice.

Profound Changes Loom

When the 79th Congress enacted Public Law 585 for the development and control of atomic energy, it expressed the belief that:

If the field of nuclear chain reaction is tapped and atomic energy is made practical so it can be released on a large scale, it will cause profound changes in our present social, economic and political way of life.

The law provides for a program of assisting and fostering private research and development to encourage maximum scientific progress; control of scientific and technical information; and a program of Federally conducted research and development to assure the government of adequate scientific and technical accomplishments.

Two Fellowship Groups

The research fellowship program in the physical sciences was started last February when the Atomic Energy Commission made its initial allocation of $1,500,000 for its support.

Two groups of fellowships were proposed, one at the post-doctoral level and one at pre-doctoral level.

Not more than 30 "fellows" are to be selected for the post-doctoral level during the first year while the latter group will number about 150 fellowships.

DC Omega Chapters Cite 4 During Achievement Week

Major Rayford, Edwin Henderson, Dr. Cornely and William Rumsey, Student, Given Awards

WASHINGTON

The Alpha and Alpha Omega chapters of the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity observed the organization's National Negro Achievement Week by making awards to two soldiers, a civic leader and a medical administrator, and by presenting a concert by the Omega Choir at Howard University on Nov. 21.

Those presented were Maj. Leo Rayford, Dr. Edwin B. Henderson, Lt. William Rumsey and Dr. Paul Cornely.

Military Leader Cited

Major Rayford was winner of the Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal and Five Oak Leaf Clusters, Purple Heart, and Order of Yugoslavian Red Star II Class during World War II.

He was cited by the fraternity for his leadership and training of Howard University ROTC cadets, which enabled them to attain the highest ranking rating among Air Force supply units in 14 leading colleges and universities.

Howard was also rated one of seven honor schools among 91 institutions which competed in the Air Force examination.

Educator Fights for Rights

Dr. Henderson was awarded for his efforts in breaking down racial segregation, trying to equalize recreational facilities and for leadership in the campaign against segregation in recreation.

He is currently vice president of the Committee on Civil Rights, local branch of the NAACP, acting chairman of the Board of Management of the 12th Street YMCA, vice president of the Virginia State Conference NAACP and physical education director of the District public schools, Division 10-13.

Undergraduate Award

Lieutenant Rumsey received the undergraduate award for being the recipient of the Bronze Star Award for meritorious service during the Battle of the Bulge. He was commissioned a second lieutenant of the ROTC, coach of the D.C. Seal Club and captain of the Howard University swimming team.

He is also an active member of the D.C. Recreational Department and a senior with high scholastic attainments in the Howard College of Liberal Arts, all before his 24th birthday.

Dr. Cornely received his award for his achievements in the medical field by being appointed chief of medical services at Freedmen's Hospital and associate professor of public health at Howard University.

He was cited particularly for being chosen the first physician of his race to sit on the policy-making executive board of Gallinger Hospital. He holds a doctor of medicine and public health degrees from the University of Michigan School of Medicine.

The choir rendered a series of selections of spirituals, classic and popular music at its concert, Sunday. Gladys Keys, George Booker and Elizabeth Ann Johnson were the soloists. Valerian Smith directed the choir.

Down From Philly

We're indebted to Philadelphia for the pleasure of Miss Pinn's company. She's here on temporary assignment with the Civil Service of Fort Meade.

Miss Pinn is deeply interested in photography, but our feeling is that she should always be in front of a camera rather than behind it.

Glorette confesses she misses her home town, as who wouldn't. She has patronized the smartest shops in Philadelphia, but thinks Hendin's is particularly nice, and is looking forward to doing her Christmas shopping here.

It doesn't take out-of-towners long to find out what fashionable Baltimoreans already know . . . that Hendin's is one of the smartest and most interesting fashion shops in the country.
