Judge Frees Man of Murder Count

The possibility that Miss Mabel Davis may have died from a previous head injury rather than from a blow inflicted by him assisted 44-year-old George H. Scott in winning acquittal of a murder charge, Monday.

Evidence before Judge Herman Moser was that Miss Davis, 36, complained of a violent headache before she and Scott argued on Nov. 14. She died during the night of a brain hemorrhage.

The woman was found dead in her bed at 126 N. Exeter St. and the damp cloth she had placed on her head the night before was still there, it was testified.

Scott, also of the Exeter St. address, was represented by Ellis Levin, attorney.

Red Cross to Distribute Cookies in City Hospitals During Yule

Some 200 dozen home-made cookies are needed for the series of Christmas parties being planned for patients in veteran, service and civilian hospital by volunteer services of the Baltimore Red Cross Chapter.

Mrs. Robert J. McDonald, chairman of Gray Ladies, suggested that housewives might like to remember hospital patients and shut-ins by baking a few extra dozen when doing the holiday baking. Red Cross Volunteers will distribute the cookies, she said.

Additional information about the cookies for the three Christmas parties to be held on Monday may be obtained from Red Cross headquarters, 3 W. Mt. Vernon Pl., LEx. ington 6520.

Expired Rent Leases Won't Peril Tenants

With most of the voluntary rent leases under the 1947 Housing and Rent Act expiring on Dec. 31, Walter R. Heath, area rent director, explained this week how dwellings units covered by such leases will be affected.

The homes will automatically go back under rent control, with the tenant and the landlord having the same rights and protections as apply to thecontrolled units that were not under lease.

The maximum rents will be the same as that provided in the expiring leases, that is, if the leases were valid.

May Renew Leases Now

Mr. Heath, head of the rent division office at 400 E. Lombard St., alsoannnnn nnnnnnn dkjkjfkdfkdi also pointed out that persons having leases under the 1947 Act as well as those who have no leases, may execute leases under the 1948 Act during the remainder of this month.

Such leaser must be voluntary on the part of both tenant and landlord, must be in writing, must run through Dec. 31, 1949, must be executed by Dec. 31 and filed with the Area Rent Office within 15 days after execution.

Denial of Equality in Capital Termed Profitable

Leaders of Community Set Pattern, Probers Reveal

Foreigners Shocked by Brutal Discrimination in Capital of World's Democracy Champion

WASHINGTON

"The Washington Board of Trade, particularly the Washington Real Estate Board, representing the principal business enterprises of the city, and the Federal Government, this week, were charged with "building ghettos of the mind, body and spirit" and keeping the nation's capital colored citizens in virtual bondage in a stinging 91-page report on segregation in Washington by the National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital.

The report accused the "dominant real estate, commercial and financial interests" as "planning the segregation of colored persons in housing, jobs, theatres, restaurants, parks and playgrounds" for business reasons and profit, and declared that unofficially these dominant business interests dictated to the governing authorities (District Commissioners).

The report, a copy of which was received by President Truman, who said he would read it with interest, termed segregation in the nation's capital "a blot on our nation" which belittles the efforts of the United States to spread the doctrine of democracy abroad.

While the United States preaches democracy to the rest of the world, racial practices in Washington are worse than they are in Germany, and worse locally than they were years ago, the report charged.

The voluminous and elaborately prepared document, two years in the making, cited a provision of the agreement of victorious powers, made at Berlin in 1945, after the defeat of Hitler, calling for the abolition of all racial, religious and political discrimination.

President Gets Copy

The National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital is an organization composed of 87 prominent persons from all sections of the country, including 14 Washingtonians, and headed by Dr. George N. Shuster, president of Hunter College, New York.

Dr. Shuster and Dr. Channing H. Tobias presented a copy of the report to President Truman at the White House, Friday.

The document pointed out the various types of racial segregation and discrimination practiced here.

After pointing out that diplomats of 60 nations, some of them dark-skinned, live in Washington, that the Latin American embassies and legations alone account for more than 1,500 foreign residents, and that special missions are constantly arriving here from all continents to seek economic, military and cultural agreements, the report cites a number of incidents involving dignitaries from African and Caribbean countries.

One such incident involved the foreign minister of an African country who was invited to Washington by the State Department, which made hotel reservations in advance. The minister arrived here late at night, the report states, and the hotel manager refused to admit him until a high State Department official was roused out of bed and persuaded the hotel by telephone to admit the minister on a plea of urgent "war necessity."

Counter Service Barred

Another such incident reported concerned a Hindu and his wife, who were shopping one afternoon in a five-and-ten cent store. The report says the woman stopped at the soda fountain and ordered a cup of tea, but the fountain attendant refused to take her order, stating that colored persons were not served. When the couple complained they were from India, apologies were offered and the tea was served.

In the case of four students from the British West Indies at a downtown lunch counter, who were told they would have to stand to be served, the waitress apologized when they produced their British diplomatic passes, remarking she didn't realize they were "not n - - - a," the report asserts.

On one occasion, a Spanish woman was entertaining the daughter of the Minister of Education of a Central American republic, who was visiting Washington under official auspices. The visitor wanted to see the film, "Great Expectations."

Her friends decided not to tell her about the practices of segregation, but to try to maneuver to get her into the theatre. When the party approached the box office, everybody talked loudly in Spanish. The strategy worked.

Catholics Hit

Exclusion of colored Catholics from "white Catholic churches is one of the most disturbing aspects of segregation which Latin Americans find in Washington," according to the report.

It cites as an example the case of a devout Catholic from Panama who entered a Catholic church. As he knelt in prayer, a priest approached him and handed him a slip of paper on which was written the address of a colored Catholic church.

The report also points out that inside the largest churches, Protestant as well as Catholics, visitors are made unwelcome on account of color.

Segregation is the public policy of such Christian organizations as the YMCA, the report states, citing the case of a group of colored students at Ohio State University, 10 of whom were from such countries as India, Brazil, Argentina, Turkey, Norway and China.

YMCA Policy Cited

On a trip arranged by the University YMCA they visited Washington during their 1947 spring vacation to give the foreign students a chance to see the United States capital. The local YMCA accepted reservations, but, upon discovering that colored persons were in the group, insisted that they be housed at the Twelfth Street YMCA and the Phyllis Wheatley YWCA.

Without explaining the situation to the foreign students, the group leaders found lodgings for everybody at Slowe and Carver Halls, dormitories built to house colored war workers.

The committee addressed itself to the task of finding the root causes of the "relatively new phenomenon" of mass segregation in the nation's capital. The Supreme Court did not declare the Civil Rights Act of March 1, 1875, unconstitutional in its operation in the District of Columbia until June 16, 1913, and until just about that time colored people ate in the best restaurants, slept in the best hotels, and attended the best theatres.

'Good Business'

To find out why the situation is the reverse today, the committee conducted a sociological survey of segregation in all its phases in Washington. The study was made by a staff directed by Dr. Joseph D. Lohman, University of Chicago sociologist and one-time associate director of race relations for the Julius Rosenwald Fund.

"It is not in the field of spontaneous human relationships that trouble occurs in Washington, but on a high policy level where the segregation of the colored person is planned as a matter of good business, and investments are made in the denial of his equal rights to own property," the report states adding:

"It is not the poor whites who set the pattern, but men of acknowledged culture and refinement, the leaders of the community."

Allied against the colored man in this doubtful enterprise, in spite of contrary ideals and professions, is the full majesty of the United States Government."

Board of Trade Flayed

While "officially" Washington is run by three commissioners, appointed by the President, "unofficially" it is run by the Board of Trade, particularly the Washington Real Estate Board, representing the principal business enterprises of the city, according to the report.

"There are the special interests which have planned the segregation of colored people in housing, jobs, theatres, restaurants, parks and playgrounds," the report states.

Since 1930, the population of greater Washington has almost doubled, increasing from roughly 620,000 to 1,200,000 in 1947, but for each new colored resident, three white residents have moved to the city, according to census figures quoted in the report.

While the white residents have spread out over the city and into suburban areas, colored migrants have crowded together in Northwest Washington inside a radius of about two miles of the business district.

No Expansion

This uneven distribution explains "the myth of a colored invasion," the report states, emphasizing that "tension is caused by compression, not expansion."

Discrimination in Federal employment follows three general patterns, the report declared:

"First, there is the exclusion pattern. Under it, colored persons are hired only for the menial jobs that whites will not accept. It is typified by the State Department, the Justice Department, the Bureau of the Budget, the Federal Trade Commission, the Federal Reserve Board and various other independent agencies.

"Second, there is the segregated pattern. It is typified by the Government's factories' which employ colored persons but keep them in the lowest routine jobs in separate units. The Census Bureau, the Government Printing Office, and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing belong in this group.

"Third, there is the integration pattern—where jobs are open to colored at levels on equal terms. It is exceedingly rare, and was largely a wartime phenomenon."

Despite its professions, the Federal Government is "systematically denying" colored persons equal opportunity in employment, and is setting an example of racial discrimination to society and the nation, the report declares.

Jobs Decreasing

It finds that colored employees were not segregated in Federal agencies from the time of the Civil War through the administration of President Taft, and points out that during the last term of Grover Cleveland, when Southern Democrats held positions of leadership in Congress, the number of colored clerical jobs actually increased.

"Jim crow seems to have been first recognized in the administration of William Howard Taft," the report asserts, "but segregation did not become general Government policy until the presidency of Woodrow Wilson, when there came to power a new kind of Congressman, politicians who had won offices on the pledge to maintain and extend 'white supremacy.' Immediately they set about putting the colored man 'in his place' in the capital."

Without directly recommending any corrective action, the committee apparently believes that a civil rights law will be the panacea for the evils it blueprints in its report. "Only by using the power vested in Congress in behalf of the nation and the nation's principles can the city of Washington be restored to its original destiny," the report declares.

Members of the National Committee on Segregation in the nation's capital are:

STEEL-
the lowest priced metal
At four cents a pound—the average price today at the mills—steel remains the lowest priced of all metals.
To help combat inflation steel companies have consistently followed a policy of price moderation.
Steel prices did not rise during the war. The moderate increases since the war have by no means kept pace with rising costs.
Steelmaking costs have risen sharply. The costs of scrap, coal, wages and freight, all of which directly influence the cost of making steel, have gone up rapidly.
Maintenance and repair costs of steel companies are at an all-time high. The costs of replacing and improving equipment have in many cases doubled and tripled.
Steel remains low priced at four cents a pound.
