Aged Farm Hand Freezes Just Like Sumner Welles

Falls Into Icy Stream on Christmas Night as Diplomat Did, but Couldn't Climb Out

HERTFORD, N.C. — In more tragic, yet strikingly similar circumstances to those in which former Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles was found last Sunday, the body of an aged farm hand, Willie Rum White, was discovered in an ice and water filled ditch near here.

Unlike the former U.S. official however, who is expected to recover from the shock and exposure he underwent, White was dead when a neighbor came across the body in a ditch, approximately 250 yards from the road.

White, who was seen frequently Saturday morning near the town's general store, was last seen alive attending a Christmas party during the early part of the night.

Both Fell Into Water

When his body was discovered at about 3 p.m. Sunday by the neighbor, Richard White (not a relation), it was clad in work clothes and boots and was lying face down in the ditch.

Marks along the bank indicated that he had evidently made an effort to crawl out. Evidence that he was not the victim of a robber was seen in the fact that his pocket contained a billfold in which there was $24.

Mr. Welles, who apparently fell into an icy pool near Oxen Hill, Md., Saturday night, was found by a neighbor who summoned aid and carried the statesman to the nearby home of a colored tenant farmer, Edgar Young, to which an ambulance was summoned to carry him to Casualty Hospital in Washington.

Diplomat Saves Self

Mr. Welles, 56, a victim of insomnia, was believed to have slipped into the icy stream while taking a nocturnal Christmas walk in 15-degree weather.

When found in a field about 100 yards from the stream, almost 10 hours later, his hands and face were badly scratched and his clothing was covered with mud, sand and ice, which led to the surmise that he had dragged himself out of the stream.

Ky. Clerics Deny Pastor's Claim of Aid for Ingrams

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky. (ANP)—Ministers of his race denied the Rev. James Logan Delk's statement last week, promising aid to the Ingram family now serving life sentences in a Georgia prison.

Members of the Hopkinsville Ministerial Association said that the Rev. Mr. Delk was not a member of their group.

"We know nothing about Mr. Delk's plea except what we have read in the newspapers," Dr. William P. Thurman, president, related.

His statement referred to a promise by the Rev. Mr. Delk that colored and white churches here would give the Ingrams a 170-acre farm free for five years if they are paroled. He spoke in defense of the Ingrams before the Georgia Pardon and Parole Board.

Says He Was Misquoted

The Ingrams, Mrs. Rosa L. Ingram, and two teen-age sons, were sentenced last year to life for the alleged murder of a white farmer, John E. Stafford, 66. The Rev. Mr. Delk called their conviction "a great miscarriage of justice."

From Atlanta, the Rev. Mr. Delk said he had been misquoted on "white" churches. He explained, "I said five Baptist and two Methodist Churches, all colored, in Hopkinsville would help provide the farm."

The proposed farm site, however, may also prove unobtainable.

owner, James G. Durham, night police chief, said. "That's news to me. I haven't talked with Delk or anyone else about the sale of my farm."

The Rev. Mr. Delk added that he did ask the aid of the Ministerial Association. He pastors a Church of God in Christ of an interracial congregation. The national church group is headed by a bishop in Memphis.

Amity Awards Given to 10 in Arkansas

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (ANP)—Because a colored man and a white man were friends here many years ago, 10 colored persons were rewarded for the 22nd time Christmas week with $1,000 from the James McAlister Fund.

Established in 1926, this fund is distributed at Christmas time to outstanding citizens who are not white.

Many years ago James McAlister, colored, and Williamson W. Fuller, white, were boyhood pals here. McAlister stayed here, drove a dray and saved his money. Fuller, the son of a judge, went to New York and became the general counsel of the American Tobacco Company.

When he died, McAlister willed his estate to Fuller, declaring that he knew his white friend did not need the money but "would know what to do with it."

The McAlister estate became more valuable as the town grew, so Fuller sold it, matching the sales money with a like sum on his part, and investing the total assets.

Encourages Good Will

The interest on this investment is now used for the trust fund award each year. This money is given, at Fuller's request, to colored people who "get along well with their white friends."

Administering the fund are Hector M. McKethan, W. O. Huske and H. W. Lilly.

Winston-Salem Post Office Must End Biased Hiring

WASHINGTON — In a precedence setting move, the United States Civil Service Commission instructed the Postmaster at Winston-Salem, N.C., this week, to consider for the next vacancies in the Post Office 16 colored clerk-carrier eligibles who were passed over because of race in previous appointments.

In directing the complaint to the Labor Department, Miss Marion Bond, assistant field secretary of the NAACP, quoted the postmaster as saying that "as long as he held office, there would never be colored carriers and clerks."

Testimony on discriminatory practices in the Winston-Salem Post Office was also filed with the U.S. Senate Civil Service Committee by Dr. W. H. Bruce.

The action of the Commission came as a result of complaints filed by Charles A. McLean, chairman of the Post Office Investigating Committee of the Winston Salem (N.C.) NAACP, and Clarence Mitchell, national labor secretary of the NAACP.

Names Placed at Top

The list on which the colored eligibles appeared has expired, but President Harry B. Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission informed the NAACP that:

"After careful consideration of all the facts in the case, the Commission has decided that in the light of all the circumstances, the colored eligibles who were reached for consideration and who were passed over by the postmaster must be given re-consideration for the next vacancy or vacancies by the postmaster on the sole basis of merit and fitness, even though the register on which their names appeared has since been expired, and that for this purpose the names of these eligibles previously passed over will be placed at the top of the new register until they receive such consideration.

"The Commission's regional director has been requested to take the necessary action to see that such re-consideration is given these eligibles and the Postmaster General has been advised of the Commission's decision and of the action to be taken."

One of the rules of the Commission reads: "An appointing officer shall, with sole reference to merit and fitness, make selection for the first vacancy from among the highest three eligibles available for appointment on the certificate."

Appointment Certain

The NAACP's labor secretary, in commenting on the Civil Service's decision, pointed out that since at least 16 colored persons will be at the top of any list which the postmaster must now consider, it is virtually impossible to decline to appoint any of the colored eligibles on alleged exercise of discretionary rights.

Mr. Mitchell said that in the past, placing colored eligibles at the head of the list still gave the appointing officer an opportunity to discriminate, because he would exercise his right to take one of the top three persons available. Therefore, even if the colored complainant was the first person on the list and the second two persons were white, the appointing officer could take one or both of the white people and leave out the colored individual.

Plan Under Way to Develop Africa's Mineral Resources

ATHENS, Greece—With a view to developing vast mineral resources lying in the hinterland of Africa, negotiations are going forward here among British, Portuguese and Southern Rhodesian experts to unify and increase the transportation facilities of Central Africa.

The experts are trying to reach agreement on the operation of a single railway leading from Southern Rhodesia through the Portugese colony of Mozambique to the port of Beira.

Likewise, it is hoped that a mutually satisfactory accord can be arrived at for the expansion of the dock facilities at Beira in order to accelerate the contemplated export program.

Huge Mineral Deposits

Existing rail lines and the port are deplorably inadequate for the exploitation of the immense wealth being developed west of them. Southern Rhodesia contains among other things huge quantities of copper, chrome and coal.

The anthracite seam at Wankle is not only near the surface, and especially convenient to mine, but is said to be probably the largest coal mine in the world. The chrome deposits are immense.

Nevertheless, it has been impossible to bring these minerals to the earth's surface because of a lack of transportation facilities. Beira is so poorly developed it is impossible even for medium-sized ships to dock there.

It is hoped that some of the blocked wealth can be siphoned into the European Recovery Program in which both the United Kingdom and Portugal are taking part.

Minister-Convict Flees Prison After Preaching at Christmas Services

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (ANP)—M. T. McDonald, a self-ordained minister and prisoner in the State penitentiary, fled the prison Christmas Day with some other convicts, after holding a religious service that morning in the prison chapel.

According to Col. Thomas E. Whitecotten, director of the department of Corrections, McDonald's text that morning was, "I go to prepare a place for thee."

Whitecotten said the man, a trusty, did not mention the place where he was going. He was serving a 99-year sentence for murder in Clay County.
