Calvert St. Sidney Collins, a member of the class, is shown with a "tiger." Mrs. Susie Cordery is principal.

Mother, Son Die in Fire

Flames Force 42 From Homes in Week

FIREMAN HURT

South Philadelphian Overcome by Smoke

PHILADELPHIA

A mother and her 4-year-old son were fatally burned, Saturday, in a fire that gutted their home at 651 N. Camac St.

In other fires which swept through North Philadelphia during the past week, a fireman was injured and 10 apartment tenants were forced into the street. 21 persons were driven from their homes, and 10 others fled a blaze at a luncheonette and apartment house.

In South Philadelphia, Monday night, a 50-year-old landlord was overcome by smoke.

Burned All Over

The dead woman is Mrs. Lillian Gilbert, 37, of the N. Camac St. address, who with her son, Julian, was pronounced dead on arrival at Hahnemann Hospital on Saturday after fire swept their home.

Deputy Coroner Ruby Kaplan said the two suffered severe second and third degree burns over their entire bodies. Mrs. Gilbert's brother, E. Lloyd Roundtree and sister, Mrs. Clency Rowe, both of 1108 S. 27th St., survive.

Timber Injures Fireman

The fireman was injured by falling timber during a fire, last Wednesday, at 2005 N. 17th St., which began in a third-floor hallway.

Mrs. Victoria Kemp, who was asleep on the top floor, was nearly overcome by smoke, but she and nine other tenants were all rescued.

The 21 occupants of two houses at 1203 Brown St., where a blaze was also discovered on the third floor, and 1205 Brown St., to which it spread, were also able to escape injury.

The third-floor occupant, Harvey Timmons, 56, was not aware of the fire until firemen arrived. A defective chimney was blamed.

Cafe Customers Routed

Six customers of a luncheonette at 1750 N. 13th St., and a family of four from a second floor apartment were driven into the street, Saturday night, but a third-floor tenant, Mrs. Pearl Riff, was not affected by the fire.

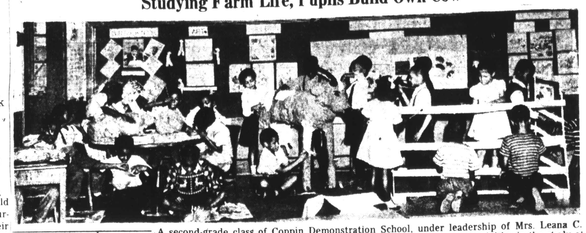
Joseph Sanders, 47, and his daughter, Roslyn, 22, were in the basement when the oil burner backfired, issuing dense smoke. Mrs. Pauline Sanders and another daughter, Mildred, were carried by firemen from a shed roof.

Overcome Warning Tenant

The South Philadelphian, Harvey Hicks, 50, of 1346 S. Bouvier St., was overcome when he rushed back into his home after escaping flames that began in the first-floor kitchen, Monday night.

He and his wife, Mrs. Mattie Hicks, were on the second floor when they discovered the blaze. They woke Percy Raper, first-floor tenant, on their way out.

Studying Farm Life, Pupils Build Own Cow



A second-grade class of Coppin Demonstration School, under leadership of Mrs. Leana C. Ferrell, invited classes from Hurst School No. 120 to their closing activities in the study of farm life. On display was this life-size cow, 4½ feet tall, enclosed in a 5-foot fence which the children made out of papier mache and wire.

Bill to Ban Racial Libel Introduced

WASHINGTON

A bi-partisan measure to punish as a misdemeanor the importation or inter-State dissemination of material libeling racial or religious groups was introduced in the House of Representatives, Wednesday, by five sponsors.

The group of five Congressmen whose bill to amend the United States Criminal Code for this purpose includes Representatives Klein and Keogh, Democrats of New York; Keating and Javits, Republicans of New York; and Dawson, Democrat of Illinois.

The sponsors of the bill, significantly, are of varied minority religious and racial groups. Congressmen Klein and Javits are Jewish; Congressman Keating, a Protestant; Congressman Keogh, Catholic; and Congressman Dawson, colored religion.

Hate Pamphlets Displayed

At a press conference Wednesday, the legislators exhibited a collection of recently published hate bills and pamphlets attacking religious groups.

They said that their bill was intended to meet the objections on the same subject introduced in the last Congress. Among the changes is reduction of class of offense from felony to misdemeanor.

Violations of the proposed legislation would be punishable by a fine of up to $1000 and imprisonment for up to one year.

Check on Hate Mongers

The law would ban importation or inter-State distribution of any printed or otherwise reproduced material "containing any statement concerning any person, persons or group of persons designating, identifying or characterizing him or them directly or indirectly by reference to his or their race or religion.

It would also ban publication of out-of-State material "which exposes or tends to expose him or them to hatred, contempt or ridicule, or causes or tends to cause him or them to be shunned or avoided or to be injured in his or their business or occupation.

The sponsors emphasized that truth or honest belief of truth in the statements made would be an absolute defense against prosecution.

Similar legislation, they said, has been enacted in Indiana and Massachusetts, but has not been tested in the courts. They added they had no doubt about constitutionality of the extension of the law they proposed.

OQG Employee Retires After 50 Years' Service

WASHINGTON

After more than 50 years as a civilian employee of the office of the Quartermaster General, John A. Moss, 70, of 2611 Eleventh St., N.W., retired this week.

Mr. Moss has been employed most recently in the memorial division of the office, in connection with the program for return and final burial of World War II dead. He went to work for the Army in 1898 at the State, War and Navy Building.

When the Quartermaster General's activities were transferred to Fort Myer, Va., Mr. Moss was employed in the records section, helping to establish a systematic arrangement of Quartermaster Corps records.

Son of Justice of Peace

Later he served as a liaison worker between the Office of The Quartermaster General and the National Archives.

Mr. Moss was born in Anacostia. His father, Judge John A. Moss, was one of the first colored Justices of the peace in the District of Columbia. Mr. Moss studied law at Howard University and has been a notary public for the past 35 years.

He resides with his wife, Mrs. Josephine Moss. A daughter, Mrs. Virginia Mason, lives in Raleigh, N.C.

2% Sales Tax Bill for District Goes to House for Early Action

District residents will be forced to pay a 2% sales tax by May 1, if the proposed legislation introduced in the House by Rep. Howard W. Smith (Dem., Va.) this week, is adopted.

In a move for early action on the sales tax bill, Congressman Smith held a conference, Monday, with members of the House District Affairs Committee and the District Government officials on the city revenue problem. The sales tax sponsor said the next move will be a joint meeting with the Senate District committee in charge of tax bills.

The bill introduced by Congressman Smith was the same as the one the House passed and the Senate failed to pass last year. Food, medicine and a few other items are exempt from the sales tax.

Warehousemen Sought for Jobs at Bellwood

A civil service examination for the position of warehouseman, with beginning salaries from $3 to $1.96 per hour, at Richmond General Depot (Bellwood) was announced last week by the board at U. S. Civil Service Examiners.

Applicants may get the necessary forms at the local post office or at the Richmond General Depot. Feb. 28 is the deadline for the receipt of applications, the announcement said.

Hunter's 'Victim' Sues for $15,000

WASHINGTON

James Nicholson, 1147 New Hampshire Ave., N.W., who apparently has such confidence in his shooting ability that he went on a hunting trip armed with a heavy 45-caliber automatic pistol, this week, was sued for $15,000 damages after a bullet from the "unloaded" weapon reportedly shattered the arm of Benjamin H. Taylor, 2109 Fourth St., N.W.

Taylor told the District Court that on last Jan. 2, he and Nicholson were visiting Ellerbe, N.C., for the purpose of hunting.

While they were in the house where he was staying, Nicholson started playing with the pistol, saying it was unloaded, according to the complaint.

Loss Is $15 Daily

The pistol, in fact, contained a bullet which went off and shattered the bone in Taylor's right elbow. Since the accident, the petition asserts that Taylor, taxi driver, has incurred medical expenses of $250 and lost $15 a day income during the same period.

Taylor, through his attorney, Otho D. Branson, declares that he is permanently injured through the negligence of Nicholson.

OUT IN THE WINTRY COLD:

Children Ousted Her, Mother Says in Suit

WASHINGTON

Filing suit in District Court to regain possession of her property, Mrs. Ruth Weaver Long, 1444 W. St., N.W., charges that four of her children ousted her from her home at 526 U St., N.W. She says that she and her husband acquired the property in 1918 or 1919.

The hitch in the whole transaction occurred, she said, when she and Ulysses Weaver, Sr., took over the property, and the legal title was taken only in the husband's name, although it was agreed that a transfer to their joint names would be made later. Through negligence and carelessness, this was never done.

Mr. Weaver died, April 17, 1939, intestate, and without conveying transfer of ownership of the premises to the joint names.

Two Deeded Interests

The children-named defendants in the action are Mrs. Catherine Ruth, 526 U St., N.W.; Ulysses Weaver, Helen Gwendolyn Walker, also of 526 U St., and Mrs. Shirley F. Weaver, 2201 G St., N.E.

Children not named in the action are Mrs. Elizabeth Watson and Mrs. Leonora C. Minor, said to have deeded over all their interests to the mother, and Oliver Weaver, now deceased.

Mrs. Long, who remarried after the death of Mr. Weaver, relates that when the property was acquired, all the brood moved in, the children being minors. There was never any question of her ownership, she avows.

Paid Equally

The mother also told the court that she and her husband made equal payments to the property, and that after her husband's death, she had installed a hot-water heater, oil heater and other improvements, without any contributions from her children.

She claims further that she paid all the taxes and the utilities without any support from her children.

The mother asserts that it was not until after the death of Oliver Weaver, one of the children, on Nov. 1947, that her troubles began.

Shortly afterwards, according to the complaint, she attempted to borrow by a deed of trust. The defendants were required to execute the trust. It was then, Mrs. Long declares, that her children began first to claim the property, although they have never contributed to its upkeep.

During the dispute, Mrs. Long swears that she was ousted and that her children began collecting the rents.

The court is asked to appoint a receiver to preserve the property, and to give an accounting of the rents they have collected since her ouster.
